SUBCOMMITTEE SUBPOENA

Ellsberg Papers To Be Released

By NELS JOHNSON

Mill Valley authorities said today they will turn over documents stolen from the home of Pentagon Papers figure Daniel Ellsberg to a congressional subcommittee.

George J. Silvestri Jr., Mill Valley's deputy city attorney, said city police will give the purloined documents to an attorney for the House Subcommittee on Foreign Operations and Government Information in accordance with a subpoena.

The subpoena was to be served at police headquarters at 2:30 p.m. today.

Silvestri said Ellsberg has written a letter stating he has no objections to turning the papers over to the House committee. "It has been (Ellsberg's) contention all along that the information belongs to the American people," said his attorney, Benjamin Dreyfus.

The committee plans to make the documents available to the Department of Justice but also has promised to withhold papers dealing with personal matters or covered by attorney-client privilege.

In addition, the documents will be turned over with the understanding the committee will return them to their "rightful owner," whoever that is determined to be, according to Silvestri.

The deputy city attorney said the congressional committee is probing how documents become classified and why they remain classified.

Silvestri noted that Mill Valley police headquarters has been a depository for the documents since they were recovered last week in an investigation of the Oct. 1 burglary of Ellsberg's Mill Valley residence.

Silvestri said he assumed the subpoena also would cover additional documents stolen from the residence that police found yesterday buried under a pile of leaves at Old Mill Park.

Silvestri said the transfer of

Peru Plans Takeover Of ITT Facility

LIMA, PERU (AP) — President Juan Velasco's leftist military regime announced today the nationalization of all privately owned international Telex and telegraph services in Peru, including an ITT subsidiary, effective next March 1.

After that date, all communication facilities will be owned and operated by state agencies, a government resolution and a decree made public stipulated. The transmission of news was not affected.

The nationalization affects Cables West Coast Co., a subsidiary of Cable and Wireless Ltd of England, and All America Inc., a subsidiary of the U.S.-based International Telegraph and Telephone Corp.

Senate Cuts Anti-Busing Filibuster

Scott Amendment Passed By 55-27 Vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate cut off a southern-led filibuster today and approved an amendment which would nullify a strong anti-busing provision passed earlier by the House.

By a vote of 56-27, exactly the two-thirds vote needed to end debate, the Senate cut stopped the filibuster of Sen. James B. Allen, D-Ala., who tried to prevent a vote on the nullifying amendment.

The amendment, offered by Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott, then passed by a 55 to 27 vote. The House had included the anti-busing provision in an $8.6 billion compromise supplemental appropriations bill.

The House has twice insisted on keeping the antibusing language in the funding bill and remains deadlocked in disagreement with the Senate's position.

The House language, added by Rep. Marjorie Holt, R-Md., states that none of the $4.4 billion in the bill for elementary and secondary education grants can be used by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare to compel school desegregation.

The Scott amendment added by the Senate would void the antidesegregation language by adding the words: "except as may be necessary to enforce nondiscriminatory provisions of federal law."

Pressure was on Congress to pass the special money bill before adjournment next week or a number of federal agencies needing additional funding will be unable to meet their spending commitments.

Although the amendment does not specifically mention busing, that is the aim of its chief sponsors.

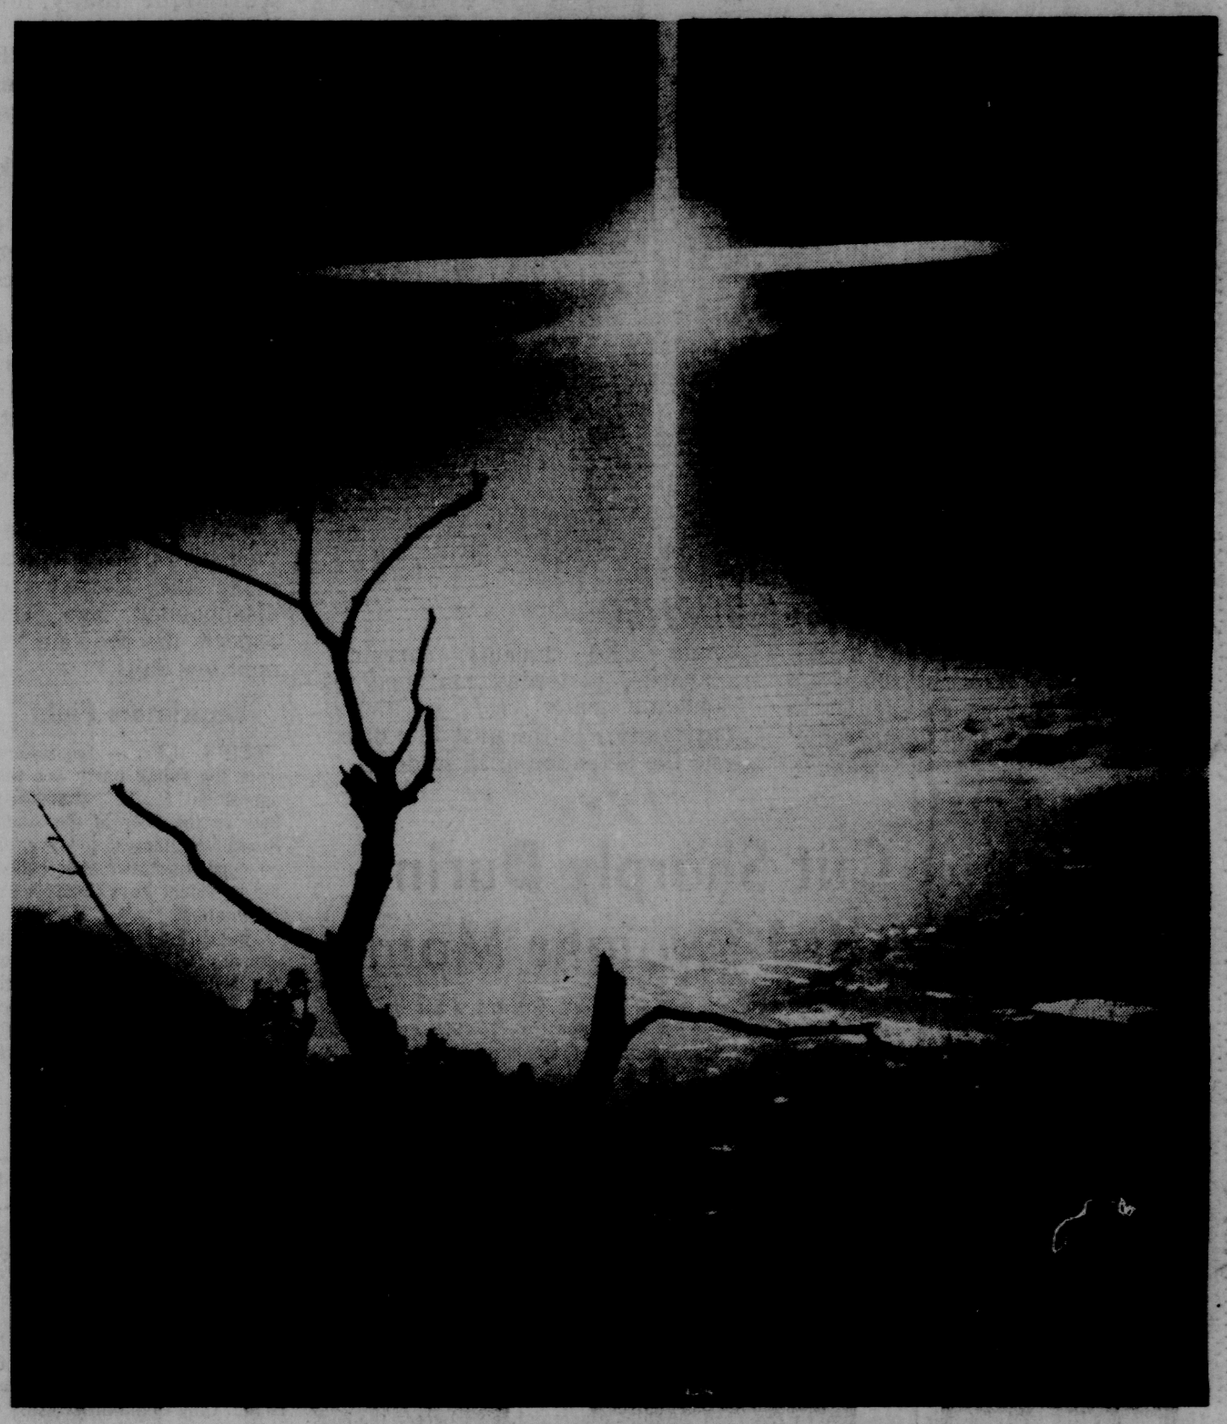
Meanwhile, pressure was on Congress to pass the special money bill before adjourning by the end of nextweek or a number of federal agencies needing additional funding will be unable to meet their spending commitments.

The language in the Scott amendment was specific.

"None of these funds," it says, "shall be used to compel any school system as a condition for receiving grants and other benefits to classify teachers or students by race, religion, sex, or national origin, or to assign teachers or students to schools, classes, or courses for reasons of race, religion, sex or national origin."

HEW says the language would effectively prevent it from enforcing any of the provisions of the 1964 Civil Rights Act, not just school desegregation. The main tool to enforce school desegregation has been busing.

Because the language was a compromise reached by House and Senate conferees, Scott chose not to try to eliminate it, the usual congressional practice. Instead, he offered an amendment adding language which would effectively nullify the Holt language.



'WE HAVE SEEN HIS STAR'

Ford Heading South For D'Estaing Talks

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford headed today for a three-day Caribbean summit meeting with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing amid reports of progress toward settling oil policy differences among major consuming nations.

Indications were that France, which is one of America's oldest allies and enjoys good relations with the oil-rich Arab nations, might be ready to soften a go-it-alone petroleum policy.

Accompanying Ford was Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, who earlier expressed satisfaction with his own meetings this week with French officials in Brussels.

Before departing, Ford held morning meetings at the White House with top-level budget advisers to discuss the recession and with Kissinger to go over the summit.

Kissinger said in Brussels that America's allies, including France, had agreed "on the sequence of moves to be undertaken" on talks with both oil consuming and producing countries.

While Ford flew to the Caribbean, Interior Secretary Rogers C.B. Morton met with Federal Energy Administrator Frank Zarb and other presidential energy advisers at Camp David to formulate possible mandatory fuel conservation measures.

Ford will consider the proposals for his expected announcement of a new attack on the energy problem before Congress next month.

Zarb said yesterday the President had asked for both voluntary and mandatory suggestions —which could include oil import restrictions, allocations and even gasoline rationing — for his scrutiny.

Store Manager Drops Charges Against Woman

A market manager who had a 74-year-old Petaluma woman arrested after she reportedly shoplifted a pound of bacon and a box of salt from the Purity Market on Western Avenue in Petaluma has decided to drop the charges.

Manager Jack R. Hansen said he has asked police to dismiss shoplifitng charges against Ida Mae Archer.

"I don't want to abuse any old lady," Hansen told the Independent-Journal. He said he signed a formal complaint against the elderly woman Thursday because his store has "been experiencing heavy inventory losses through shoplifting." The woman told police she had only $10 to last till end of the month.

I-J Offers Reward In Dog Killings

The Independent-Journal today offers a $500 reward for information to its Secret Witness program which leads to arrest and conviction of a dog poisoner at work in Mill Valley's Blithedale Canyon.

Mill Valley police have received reports of six dogs being poisoned in the canyon this week. In at least two other alleged poisonings, no report has been made to police.

At least two of the dogs have died.

The matter first came to police attention on Tuesday when a woman delivered to the police station a meat ball her dog had picked up on Eldridge Avenue. The meat ball contained grains of what police believe to be strychnine. It has been sent to a laboratory for analysis.

The same day, three reports of poisoned dogs were received by Mill Valley police, followed by two more on Wednesday and another yesterday.

The poisonings are in the same area where a score of dogs were poisoned in the summer of 1973 and several more in September of the same year.

At that time, a Secret Witness reward of $250 was offered. The Marin County Humane Society, the Animal Medical Care Foundation of Marin and a group of Mill Valley residents also offered rewards.

The Humane Society currently is offering a $200 reward.

5 Slain In Mideast Clash At The Border

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Israel said its border forces wiped out an Arab guerrilla band that crossed from Lebanon today in a plot to seize hostages for the release of imprisoned Greek Catholic Archbishop Hilarion Capucci and 10 other jailed Arabs.

The Tel Aviv military command said all four guerrillas were killed and an Israeli police sergeant also died in a brief gun and grenade battle half a mile south of the frontier settlement of Menara in Israel's northern panhandle.

It said a second Israeli policeman was slightly wounded in the clash that broke out shortly after a security patrol spotted a break in the barbed wire fence marking the border.

"From behind a bush, they threw grenades at us and we threw ours back at them," said Hussein Fares, a member of the combined Israeli Druze, Bedouin Arab and Jewish unit that wiped out the guerrilla squad. "After four minutes of shooting, we charged the bush and sprayed them with fire. One of our men was wounded."

Sgt. Meir Dayan was killed in the first volley of guerrilla fire from a distance of five yards, a border police source said. He said the guerrillas were apparently bent on attacking one of the nearby settlements.

In Beirut the Palestinian news agency WAFA quoting a Palestinian military source, said:

"Palestinian revolutionaries waged a fierce confrontation battle against enemy forces in the Menara settlement area." It said the fighting began at 6 a.m. but gave no details.

A Palestinian spokesman, quoted by WAFA, confirmed later that four guerrillas had been killled in the action. But he said the Israelis had suffered a "large number" of casualties in the battle which he said lasted 6½ hours and involved Israeli helicopters as well as troops.

Arab newsmen in southern Lebanon reported overflights by Israeli warplanes in several regions near the border. Israeli planes were also seen over the south Lebanon coastal town of Sidon, the newsmen said.

Israeli military sources said the guerrillas, apparently aged between 20 and 25, wore civilian clothes, carried Russian-made Kalachnikov rifles, explosive charges, food for one or two days and leaflets that indicated their membership in Al Fatah, military sources said.

The leaflets listed Capucci and 10 other persons convicted for what Israeli courts have ruled were acts in the service of Al Fatah, the largest of the various Palestinian guerrilla groups.

White House Silent On Richardson

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The White House has declined to comment on reports in major newspapers in the United States and London that Elliot Richardson will be named ambassador to Britain.

In London, the Foreign Office said the United States has submitted the name of a new envoy for Britain's approval, but it refused to confirm the ambassador would be Richardson. A spokesman said a formal announcement by President Ford was expected next week.

British officials said they would welcome appointment of a nationally known figure such as Richardson as an indication of the value the U.S. places on relations with Britain.

The State Department also declined to comment on the reports in the boston Globe, New York Times, Washington Post, Washington Star-News and Times of London that Richardson would become the next holder of the title of ambassador to the Court of St. James.

EFFIGIES BURNED

Demonstrating students in Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia, burn the effigies of government leaders to mourn the "death of democracy" at the University of Malaya. Some 3,000 students, carrying placards, yesterday marched to condemn police raids on three universities in the past few days and the detention of 15 students.

Production Cut Sharply During November—3rd Straight Month

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

For the third consecutive month, the nation's factories, mines and utilities sharply cut back production in November, the Federal Reserve Board says, indicating the economy is in the grip of a severe recession.

The board said yesterday production dropped 2.3 per cent from October, and 4.3 per cent from the same month last year, for the steepest decline in four years.

The independent government agency said the decline was the biggest since October, 1970, when output dropped 2.4 per cent during a strike that shut down General Motors.

The agency said the production slump affected not only automobile assemblies but also other durable and nondurable consumer goods.

Elsewhere, the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised foreign crude oil prices by 3 per cent, and sugar prices dropped for the ttird consecutive week.

In Vienna, OPEC members, who produce 85 per cent of all exported oil, raised crude prices to $10.46 a barrel, but said the price would be stable for the first nine months of 1975.

The increase could bring new pressure on the Ford administration to abandon voluntary fuel conservation measures for mandatory controls.

The report of higher crude prices came as President Ford prepared for a weekend meeting with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing to discuss worldwide energy and economic problems.

Wholesale sugar prices were cut by Amstar, National Sugar Refining Co. and International Inc., major sugar companies, by 4 cents to 57 cents a pound.

At the White House, representatives of the housing industry told President that Ford the economy needs a jolt.

Lew Cenker, president of the National Association of Home Builders, said conditions in his industry have "worsened" since September and consumer apathy has "squeezed the housing construction industry into a corner." He asked Ford for some government stimulation to provide "some quick purchasing power."

In Detroit, new car sales in the first 10 days of December dropped 29.4 per at General Motors and 18.4 per cent at Ford. Overall, auto industry sales were off about 30 per cent in the worst sales decline in any nonstrike period since 1959.

Wayne Osmond Tardy But Wed

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — Wayne Osmond, one of the singing Osmond brothers, and former Miss Utah Kathlyn White were married yesterday — a few minutes later than planned because the groom forgot the license.

Osmond, 23, had to rush back home through the ice and slush of a Friday the 13th snowstorm to pick up the license and return to the Mormon Temple for the ceremony.

Miss White, 21, a Brigham Young University student from Bountiful, Utah, resigned her Miss Utah title last month when her engagement to the singer was announced.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Betty Ford Ailing Again

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Betty Ford's osteoarthritis has flared up again, and that old back ailment will keep the First Lady from going to Martinique today for President Ford's meeting with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing.

Mrs. Ford

Shiela Rabb Weidenfeld, Mrs. Ford's press secretary, announced the decision yesterday, replied "absolutely not" when asked if it had anything to do with Mrs. Ford's breast cancer surgery. Sources said the First Lady had been affected by the drugs she was taking to speed her recovery.

Mrs. Weidenfeld said the osteoarthritis — an ailment which has caused her periodic discomfort in the back and neck over the past 12 years — returned Tuesday night after Mrs. Ford attended an exhibit of Chinese art. She immediately began treatment which included hot packs, deep heat and massage.

William Lukash, the White House physician, "feels it would be a real strain" for Mrs. Ford to make the journey and the First Lady was disappointed. Mrs. Weidenfeld said that Lukash expects the problem "to resolve itself within the next few days."

Legislators Fight

SEOUL (UPI) — Legislators from the ruling party and the opposition fought with their fists on the floor of the South Korean parliament today after an opposition lawmaker called for President Park Chung-hee's resignation.

The fistfight broke out only one day after the reopening of the National Assembly, which had been paralyzed for 45 days by an opposition boycott to push demands for constitutional revisions.

To Maintain Troops

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The Security Council has voted unanimously to keep U.N. peacekeeping troops on the embattled Mediterranean island of Cyprus for at least another six months to patrol an uneasy cease-fire.

The council voted 14-0 last night to extend the mandate of the 4,335-man truce force on the island. Only China abstained.

Three Slain

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Two guerrillas and a federal agent have been shot to death in a police raid on a commando hideout on the outskirts of Buenos Aires, police said.

New Front

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces opened a new battle front north of the South Vietnamese capital today. The Saigon command said the fierce "rice war" raged across the nation for the eighth consecutive day.

Bomb Explodes

NEWPORT, Wales (UPI) — A suspected Irish Republican Army bomb exploded on the main shopping street of this Welsh town today, heavily damaging one shop and blowing out the windows of 20 others.

Police said no injuries were reported.

Prisoners Freed

MANILA (UPI) — Phillippine President Ferdinand E. Marcos today ordered the release of an additional group of 454 political prisoners jailed under martial law.

The government said the new releases bring the total number of prisoners freed to 1,076.

The releases, the government said, were in line with the president's policy, announced last Wednesday, to "progressively relax its rigid exercise of authority, so that complete unity may be achieved."

Pastor Ousted

SEOUL (UPI) — The South Korean government deported American missionary George E. Ogle today for his involvement in local political movements in violation of the immigration law.

Cooperation Urged

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Takeo Miki today called for international cooperation to tame global inflation and the oil crisis and said Japan would try to maintain friendly relations with all nations.

In his first policy speech before parliament since he assumed the reins of the Japanese government Monday, Miki also said Japan must hold the line on imports of natural resources and hold back on fiscal expenditures.

But he rejected any joint strategy by oil-consuming nations against oil-producing nations to force oil prices down.

Loans Guaranteed

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States has agreed to guarantee up to $20 million in private American loans for construction of housing in Portugal, the State Department announced yesterday.

A department spokesman said the loan guarantee was in addition to a proposed $55 million foreign aid package sponsored by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass. The Kennedy package includes loans totaling $50 million and $5 million in technical assistance to be divided equally between Portugal and her former territories.

Paris Bombing

PARIS (UPI) — Small homemade bombs exploded today in front of the main Paris offices of the Trans World Airlines and Coca-Cola companies, police said. There were no injuries reported.

Officers said a right-wing group called Youth Action telephoned several newspapers to claim responsibility for the blasts. The group said it was protesting the meeting between French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and President Ford.

Patrol Ambushed

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (UPI) — Gunmen ambushed a British security patrol investigating a border town burglary today, killing a policeman and critically wounding a soldier, an army spokesman said.

The spokesman said the burglary probably was committed to lure investigators into a trap.

He said the two men were sprayed with submachinegun and rifle fire as they stepped out of the front door of the burgled house in Forkhill, a small village bordering the Irish Republic.

Pickets Halt Coal Mining In 3 States

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Mine construction workers, unhappy over lack of a new contract, have set up picket lines at coal mines in western Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Ohio, idling more than 20,000 miners.

Both labor groups belong to the United Mine Workers (UMW), which last week negotiated a strike-ending, three-year wage contract for the country's 120,000 miners and currently is attempting to reach agreement on a new contract for the 4,000 mine construction workers.

Miners idled yesterday by the construction pickets included about 6,500 in western Pennsylvania, 13,500 in West Virginia and 500 in Ohio.

A spokesman for the Western Pennsylvania Coal Operators Association said, "It's like crazy," the spokesman said. "You name them, they're down —U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Jones & Laughlin, Republic, and Duquesne Light."

23-Year-Old Recovering From Plague

SANTA FE, N.M. (UPI) — State health officials reported yesterday a 23-year-old man with bubonic plague was responding to antibiotics and was recovering from bubonic plague.

They said he may be released before Christmas from an Albuquerque hospital where he is undergoing treatment.

Officials sent fleas and tissue samples taken from small rodents in the Sandia Park, N.M., area to two laboratories yesterday in an attempt to trace the source of the plague.

The case was confirmed earlier this week in the unidentified man who is a resident of the community on the eastern slope of the Sandia Mountains.

Neil S. Weber, environmental program manager for the state Environmental Improvement Agency, said the specimens of tissue and fleas were sent to the state laboratory in Albuquerque and the Center for Disease Control of the U.S. Public Health Service in Fort Collins, Colo.

"We expect the results next week," Weber said.

Weber said once the source of the disease was discovered his agency could begin control operations to prevent further cases.

"We're fairly sure that the disease was contracted within the vicinity of Sandia Park," said Weber.

It was the seventh case of the bubonic plague reported in a human in New Mexico this year. One case resulted in the death of a 12-year-old Navajo Indian girl who lived near Gallup.

We can't keep the secret any more.

Pacheco Valle is just off Highway 101, a little beyond the Lucas Valley turnoff, and once you're there you could be a thousand miles from nowhere. It is a forest dotted with tempting meadows, one of the finest examples of what the naturalists call California oak-woodlands. It is the most important new Marin County residential area to be made available in more than a decade.

In this unmatched setting, we are creating a community of nature. We are building small pockets of fine architect-designed cluster homes on the alluvial plains, blending the developed areas with the meadows and woods. The creeks and hills will remain in their natural state. Permanently. To be sure of this, we have deeded 378 acres of our total 519 acres to the City of Novato as perpetual open space.

This week-end we are opening our sales and information office for the first time, so that Marin County people who have heard about what we are doing here can have first choice before we make a broader public announcement early next year.

Come and share our pride. Yes, it can be done with taste, style and concern for the future.

WHO IS THIS MAN?

A man wearing a baseball cap and stocking mask stuffs money into a sack as he robs the Fourth Street branch office of the California Federal Savings and Loan Association. The photograph was taken by a hidden bank camera during a robbery Wednesday in which a man with a gun took about $1,000 in cash from a teller. San Rafael police today also supplied an artist's sketch of the bandit, and said he is in his late 30s, weighs about 200 pounds, has dark brown hair and stands about 6 feet, 2 inches tall. Residents recognizing the man should call police.

Advisory Board Reps Are Sought

The Metropolitan Transportation Commission is looking for Marin residents with "Spanish surnames" to represent the county on the commission's minority citizens advisory committee.

The commission is forming the 20-member committee under threat of a law suit by the Mexican-American Legal Defense Fund, which complained minority citizens were not being heard by the Bay Area agency. The commission is responsible for regional transportation planning and has control over federal and state funds for transit and highways.

Marin's representative also will have an alternate. The apportionment of members among the region's nine counties was based on the 1970 census, which lumped many Portuguese surnames with Spanish names.

Resumes of candidates must be submitted by Jan. 17 to the commission offices in the Hotel Claremont, Berkeley. The commission will make the appointments.

No False Alarm

SANTA CLARA, (UPI) — Sleepy Santa Clara University dorm students just turned over when the fire alarm went off early yesterday — only a prank at the party on the men's floor of the dorm, they thought. But the ringing resumed 10 minutes later, and firemen arrived to put out a blaze which caused $80,000 damage.

Hearsts To Sell Home, Mother's Letter Says

HILLSBOROUGH (AP) — Catherine Hearst told her fugitive daughter Patricia today that the family will move from its 22-room mansion to get away from memories of Patricia and her kidnaping.

Word of the planned move by Catherine and Randolph Hearst to a San Francisco apartment is in an emotional but restrained open letter begging the kidnaped newspaper heiress turned fugitive to come home for Christmas.

The 300-word letter is published in tomorrow's editions of the San Francisco Examiner, the newspaper edited by Miss Hearst's father, and read by Mrs. Hearst in recordings broadcast on area radio and television stations.

It begins "My Darling Patty" and is signed, "With all our love, Mother."

"How we miss your bright face and the warmth of your company," Mrs. Hearst wrote.

"Christmas is almost upon us again, and I'm sure you must realize our agony as we face the possibility of a Christmas without you," she said. "I spend many hours a day praying that God will inspire you to come back to us, hopefully for Christmas.

"It breaks my heart that you cannot see that you will have no real problems if you will only come in of your own accord," she said. "It is so safe and simple. All you have to do is go to any lawyer, radio or TV station or newspaper."

She also revealed the family's plans to abandon the French provincial mansion in this well-to-do community 20 miles south of San Francisco where Patricia spent much of her life:

"Dad and I find it too painful to continue living here, with so many memories of you, and we're moving to an apartment in the city in a few months."

Mrs. Hearst wrote the letter in longhand on her personal stationery.

Miss Hearst, 20, one of the Hearst's five children, was kidnaped amid gunfire last Feb. 4 from the Berkeley apartment she shared with her fiance Steven Weed. The terrorist Symbionese Liberation Army later claimed it had carried off the abduction.

In a series of taped communiques, she first appealed for her father to ransom her. But on April 3 she renounced her family and declared she had joined the SLA as a revolutionary.

Bank Robberies Up 24 Per Cent

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The FBI said yesterday that 169 bank robberies have occurred in the greater Bay Area so far this year. That is a 24 per cent increase over 1973 and this year is not over yet.

But Charles Bates, special agent in charge, said in 70 per cent of the cases the robbers already have been caught, mainly because of new security devices, such as television cameras, and specially trained personnel.

Bates said the average robbery only netted $200. One reason for the robbery increase, he said, might be the weakening economy.

REWARD

hended, but the poisonings ceased until this week.

Anyone having information which may lead to apprehension of the dog poisoner may transmit it to Secret Witness without disclosing his or her name.

The information will be given in confidence to Mill Valley police. If it leads to arrest and conviction, the person furnishing it will be eligible for the reward — again, if he or she wishes, without his or her identity being disclosed.

The information should be written on a single sheet of paper. The same five-digit number should be written on both lower corners of the sheet. The writer then should tear off one corner number and keep it, mailing the sheet to Secret Witness, P. O. Box 330, San Rafael 94902.

To claim the $500 reward, he or she need only to present the matching number which was torn from the sheet.

PAPERS

custody of the documents today would allow Mill Valley to "punt" the situation to Wash., D.C. and remove the city from any involvement in a tug-of-war between Ellsberg and the Department of Justice.

"Mill Valley's interests are to not get dragged into someone else's fight and to make sure the documents don't fall into the wrong hands," the deputy city attorney said.

Ellsberg has said that the Executive Branch of the federal government wants to obtain the papers and destroy them. "His only apprehension has been that the Justice Department or the Defense Department would destroy the papers," said Dreyfus.

Silvestri said papers to be handed over today would fill two suitcases. The attorney added he has briefly reviewed the documents. and said they include documents stamped "top secret, secret. . . confidential."

"I generally reviewed the material to understand basically what we're talking about . . . For all I know they could have been copied down at the public library," Silvestri said.

He added the documents appear to cover a 20-year span of time.

Arrested last week and charged with the Ellsberg burglary was 21-year-old Kevin Patrick Quinn of Mill Valley. Quinn is also accused of a second, unrelated Mill Valley burglary and with the Oct. 16 bombing of the car of Mill Valley Police Chief William A. Walsh.

Police investigation of the burglary of the Ellsberg home has focused on the possibility that more than one person was involved in the break-in.

Columnist Lippmann Dead At 85

NEW YORK (UPI) — Walter Lippmann, a giant of American journalism who twice won the Pulitzer Prize, died today after a lengthy illness. He was 85.

Lippmann, a syndicated columnist whose influence in American thought was felt for half a century, died at his apartment in Manhattan. He had been hospitalized until recently with a heart condition.

The family said the funeral will be private. Memorial services will be announced.

Lippmann's career as a commentator and political philosopher began during World War I when Woodrow Wilson was president, and continued through the administrations of eight succeeding presidents.

He was the author of 25 books and thousands of syndicated newspaper columns which influenced the thinking of leaders in Washington and abroad. He wrote of the tumultuous events of the 20th Century not only with unprecedented erudition, but also with an authority and pungency that won him millions of daily newspaper readers.

Lippmann's column —"Today and Tomorrow" —had its inception in 1931 and was published by approximately 250 newspapers in the United States and in 25 foreign countries. He also wrote a column for Newsweek magazine.

A youthful espouser of socialism, Lippmann proved difficult to categorize in the political spectrum as he watched the march of events in Washington and the world for more than 50 years.

He was a confidante of many of the presidents and an exclusive interviewer of such center-of-the-stage international figures as Sir Winston Churchill, Nikita Khrushchev, Charles de Gaulle, Jawaharlal Nehru of India and Gamal Abdel Nasser.

Upon reaching his 70's, Lippmann became acknowledged as "the dean of American newspapermen" and appeared on periodic television programs in which he was interviewed in the style of an elder statesman.

Shortly before his 75th birthday in September, 1964, Lippmann received the presidential medal of freedom from President Johnson which read: "Through the profound interpretation of his country and the affairs of the world, he has enlarged the horizons of public thinking through the power of measured reason and detached perspective."

In his career, he became known as an independent thinker who would defy labels. One colleague said of him: "He camps neither with the liberals nor the conservatives." Lippman once gave this credo: "Every truly civilized and enlightened American is conservative and liberal and progressive."

He explained: "This conservative who is a liberal is a progressive because he must work and live, he must govern and debate in the world as it is in his own time and as it is going to become."

Lippmann was born in New York City on Sept. 23, 1889, to a wealthy family of German-Jewish descent.

Grade System To Be Studied

A proposal to allow teachers to give students a grade of "no mark" in the Tamalpais High School District will be considered by the district board when it meets Monday at 8:30 p.m. in the Redwood High School faculty lounge.

The new grade will not count in the student's grade point average. It is intended to curb the practice by some teachers of substituting Ds for Fs for failing students.

The meeting will be preceded at 7:30 by a closed session, with the board meeting with its negotiating team to discuss teachers salaries and benefits.

INFLATION FIGHTER?

At $45,000, this natural crown Russian sable coat from a San Francisco store is, without question, a high-priced Christmas gift. But it could also be a hedge against inflation, too. Back in the 1920s, a coat of this quality would have cost three times as much. Then crown sable was only for the Imperial Court of Russia, and the skins had to be smuggled out of the Soviet Union one by one. (UPI Telephoto)

New Life For Doomed Hospitals

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an unpublicized but dramatic policy reversal, the government is revitalizing the network of Public Health Service (PHS) hospitals and clinics once doomed by Richard M. Nixon.

A new director of the system, Dr. Edward J. Hinman, was appointed last July, and new funds were pumped into the budget to modernize and make safer the decaying hospitals which Nixon called outmoded and under-used.

In an interview, Hinman called the program "the salvation of the hospitals," and said, "We are working to restore all parts of the PHS system."

The hospitals, with 1,983 beds as of Oct. 1, are located in large seaport cities: Baltimore; New Orleans; Staten Island, N.Y.; San Francisco; Seattle; Norfolk, Va.; Boston, and Galveston, Tex. Another 26 clinics are located in major cities throughout the nation, and both hospitals and clinics have the primary mission of providing care to merchant seamen, the Coast Guard and certain other government workers

Gray Whale Bill Entered

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — The California gray whale, which weighs 40 tons and grows to an average length of 50 feet, would become the official state marine mammal under legislation introduced yesterday.

Author of the measure (AB258) was Assemblyman Robert Badham, R-Newport Beach.

In the past two years, the egislature designated the Sabre Tooth Tiger as the state fossil and the dog-faced butterfly as the state insect.

Behind the policy reversal was a direct order from Congress in a defense appropriations bill signed Nov. 13, 1973, which said the Department of Health, Education and Welfare "shall continue in operation (the) hospitals of the Public Health Service..."

But the government had ignored previous Congressional directives and issued at least three closeout or transfer threats since 1970. HEW as recently as last April said it didn't know what the fate of the hospitals would be.

"With the loss of the doctor draft and the closeout threats we had trouble getting doctors," Hinman said. Patient load declined, reseach slowed, a "devastating" loss of hospital and clinic staff resulted.

With the blessings of higher-ups at HEW Hinman is now directing new and increased community patient care and research at the hospitals and clinics in alcoholism and drug abuse, day care for disabled old folks to keep them out of nursing homes, rehabilitation of heart disease and cancer victims, preventive dental care and health screening of poor children.

Hinman insists the administration is serious about improving the system this time and said PHS hospitals now have a potential role under a national health insurance plan.

OKLAHOMA CITY (UPI) — A district court judge, in a landmark case, has ruled the Avalon Pet Cemetery will remain a pet cemetery despite plans by new owners of the land to remove the remains of 2,000 deceased animals.

Boston's High Schools To Stay Closed Monday

BOSTON (UPI) — Eight Boston public high schools will remain closed Monday and a federal court judge yesterday barred gatherings of three or more persons near the schools to help calm racial tensions over court-ordered busing to achieve integregation.

City officials said up to 400 riot-trained state and metropolitan police stood ready to be sent into South Boston where schools were closed after a white student was stabbed by a black youth earlier this week.

Boston School Supt. William J. Leary ordered the closing last night because "my best professional judgment is that I cannot assure the safety of the students."

The school superintendant noted that faculty opinion was divided on whether or not to reopen the schools Monday, but said, "I feel strongly that the entire complex of schools should be treated as a unit."

The Boston School Committee voted earlier last night to keep South Boston High School and its two annexes closed Monday giving Leary authority to keep students home for the rest of the week if tensions were still running high.

U.S. District Court Judge W. Arthur Garrity directed the school committee at a hearing earlier yesterday to study the possibility of closing the high school permanently if trouble continues.

Garrity also said police were to break up gatherings or three or more persons within 100 yards of any school in South Boston and within 50 yards of other high schools or middle schools in the city if it appeared that classes might be disrupted. He also suggested similar groups be dispersed along bus routes to and from the schools.

Garrity was responding to a request by the NAACP which also asked him to call out the Massachusetts National Guard to help enforce the busing order. The judge refused that request, saying the extra state and metropolitan police were sufficient.

70-Year-Old Man Slain

SAN MATEO (UPI) — A 70-year-old Japanese-American man was found shot to death in his home yesterday and police believe he may have been the latest victim of the "blanket bandits" who prey on elderly Orientals..

Frank Tsujisaka, a gardener, was shot in the head and may have been dead at least 18 hours before his body was discovered, officers said.

AN OLD SWEDISH CUSTOM

Thirteen-year-old Catharina Sundell (left), daughter of the owners of the Viking Bakery in San Rafael, pours coffee for Karin and George Nilson of Florida in honor of Santa Lucia Day. St. Lucy, sometimes known as the saint of light, is honored in Scandinavian countries by the eldest daughter in the family, her head adorned with a wreath of candles, serving saffron buns and coffee to the rest of the family. The Sundells carry out the tradition at their bakery each year on Dec. 13. But three years ago firemen insisted the candles must go, and Catharina now wears light bulbs.

Committee Revises Plans On Garbage Handling

A committee which has been studying ways to handle Marin's garbage in the future has revised a consultant's recommendation that the county should take over the Redwood Sanitary Landfill near Novato.

Instead, according to the county's solid waste management committee, Marin should make a effort to leave the dump in private ownership. The county should acquire the landfill only as a last resort, the committee said Thursday.

The disposal site is a key feature in a long-range waste disposal plan which seeks to encourage recycling by imposing economic penalties on those who dump recyclable items like bottles and cans at the landfill.

Committee member Ray W. Foreaker Jr. said the consensus of the committee was to leaving the landfill in private hands — with some county regulation.

And the solid waste committee also included in the revised plan a proposal that two other dumps in Marin continue to operate until they are forced to close because of state regulations or lack of space. Consultants had recommended that they be phased out.

Suggestions of county acquistion or forced closure of the dumps had brought strong opposition from their owners.

The $48,000 solid waste plan, required by state law, is being prepared by consultants Garretson, Elmendorf, Zinov and Reibin of San Francisco.

The 18-member management committee, made up of representatives of Marin's 11 cities, the county, the garbage industry and other interested groups, was formed two years ago to oversee preparation of the document.

Once accepted by the committee, the plan will be forwarded to the Association of Bay Area Governments and the state for review before being submitted to the city councils and board of supervisors for adoption.

Committee Chairman Theodore C. Wellman, representing the Marin Conservation League, said it will be four or five months before the document is submitted to supervisors.

Major goals of the plan are to reduce the amount of material dumped in landfills — thus extending the life of the dumps — and to increase the recycling of usable waste.

It calls for the county to set up, or encourage private industry to set up, improved ways of collecting, hauling, processing (including recycling) and disposing of Marin's garbage.

It says the Redwood Sanitary Landfill eventually will become the only Marin disposal site, with garbage passing through "transfer stations" in Point Reyes Station, San Rafael and Novato.

The transfer stations will process the garbage and send those materials not suitable for recycling to the dump in large loads.

Since recycling is not expected to pay for itself, it may be subsidized with funds raised by imposing a surcharge on garbage dumped at the landfill.

Currently, three dumps operate in Marin: The Redwood Sanitary Landfill north of Novato, the West Marin Landfill near Point Reyes station and the San Quentin disposal site near San Rafael.

The consultant had recommended that the county phase out the West Marin and San Quentin sites and purchase the Redwood dump.

Attorney A.E. Bagshaw, representing the owners of the Redwood dump, objected Thursday to County purchase. He said the county could not condemn the dump and then lease it to someone else to operate.

Bagshaw said condemnation would be legal only if the county plans to staff and operate the dump itself.

He said his clients would be willing to give the county an option on the property, to be purchased in the event the owners elect to shut down operations.

The committee will continue its review of the preliminary draft Jan. 13 at 3 p.m. at Civic Center.

Indians, Government To Begin Legal Battle

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Indian and government lawyers square off in a federal court in Lincoln, Neb., this week fo4 what some Indian activists believe could be one of the most important legal battles in contemporary Indian affairs.

Subject of the unusual hearing, set for Monday in the courtroom of Judge Warren K. Urbom, is a treaty signed in 1868 between the U.S. government and the Great Teton Sioux nation.

Indian lawyers will use the hearing to seek dismissal of all pending cases stemming from the Wounded Knee occupation and seige in early 1973.

The lawyers contend the treaty, if it is granted any legal force at all, means that the cases should be dismissed for lack of jurisdiction on the part of the U. S. government.

In essence, the Indians will argue that the courts do not have the right to try a citizen of a foreign nation for an alleged crime committed within the territory of that nation.

They will argue that the treaty process, legally, means the United States recognized Indian nations as sovereign.

Urbom, who has presided at several of the trials of nonleaders at Wounded Knee, did not allow the Indians to use the "treaty defense" during trials but did set the general hearing on the subject.

Indian lawyers said that while the motion will not deal specifically with the issue of returning land to the Sioux, if the treaty is found valid it could have immense implications for land titles.

Under the terms of the 1868 treaty, according to the Indians, all the territory west of the Missouri River, presently within the state of South Dakota, was promised to the Teton Sioux forever. In 1889, however, Congress, acting unilaterally, passed a bill which divided the land into several small reservations comprising less than half the territory promised under the treaty.

"These treaties supercede any state laws and, in fact, pervail over federal law," according to American Indian Movement leader Russell Means. "The treaty hearing is the most important court case of the century."

If Urbom rules in the Indians' favor he would throw open to question all laws passed by Congress since 1871 when it declared the Indian tribes only domestic nations with whom there would be no more treaties.

No matter how Urbom rules, however, the decision is bound to be appealed by one side or the other.

Latins Plan To Drive Up Coffee Costs

PUERTO ORDAZ, Venezuela (UPI) — Six Central American presidents, backed by an $80 million pledge from oil-rich Venezuela, have agreed on a plan todrive up coffee prices by cutting exports.

President Carlos Andres Perez, who called the two-day conference, said yesterday "the oil of Venezuela is the oil of Latin America."

The conference was ending today with the signing of the formal agreement in Puerto Ordaz, Venezuela's iron ore center on the Orinoco river.

Fausto Cantu Pena, the Mexican president of the world group of coffee producers, hailed the agreement saying, "This action, without precedent in the history of coffee, is decisive for the future evolution of the coffee market, leading to the quick recovery of prices.

"It signifies the start of a new economic structure of international prices for primary products to compensate for the growing deterioration of real trade between the poor nations and the rich nations," he said.

Senate Votes Emigration Accord

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate gave final approval yesterday to an historic agreement aimed at ensuring emigration of Jews and other minorities from Communist countries.

Earlier in the day, senators approved a parlamentary tactic that greatly improves chances that Congress this year will pass the international trade bill to which the emigration provision is attached.

By an 88-0 vote, senators added to the trade bill a compromise amendment prohibiting U.S. trade concessions or credit for any Communist nation that does not lower emigration barriers.

Under the compromise, the prohibition would be wavied for the next 18 months while the Communist countries show their good faith by allowing free emigration. In return, U.S. trade concessions would be provided during that period, but could then be revoked by Congress if emigration barriers were reimposed.

The emigration arrangement is aimed specifically at aiding Russian Jews but applies equally to any minority or ethnic group in any Communist nation.

The agreement was hailed as a milestone in international relations because it was worked out during negotiations involving key member of Congress, President Ford, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and the highest Soviet officials.

"This is truly a historic achievement for decency, human rights and the security of minorities," said Sen. Jacob K. Javits, R-N.Y., one of three senators involved in the negotiations.

Javits, Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., and Sen. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., praised the efforts of Ford and Kissinger in reaching the agreement, which helped revive the trade bill.

The emigration agreement represents a rare use of U.S. eceonomic might to ensure human rights in a foreign country.

Jackson said that early next year he will seek explicit authority for his investigations subcommittee to monitor Russia's compliance with the agreement.

In case of noncompliance, he said, Congress can exercise its veto power over trade concessions or credits to the Soviet Union.

By a 71-19 vote, 11 more than required, the Senate earlier Friday ruled out consideration of nontrade amendment that threatened to block passage of the far-reaching trade bill.

MOSCOW (UPI) — Soviet archaeologist Boris Stavinsky said today he has found what he believes is the home of Jnamamitra, a noted Buddhist scholar who lived 2,000 years ago.

New Soviet Missile Described

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has test-fired its new SS16 missile some 6,000 miles into the Pacific for the first time, the Pentagon announced yesterday.

Spokesman William Beecher said that two of the solid-fuel SS16s, the lightest off four new Russian missiles, landed in the Pacific about three hours apart.

He indicated they carried single warheads. The SS16 is the only one of the new Soviet missile family that has not been observed carrying multiple independently targetable warheads — MIRVs.

Secretary of Defense James R. Schlesinger and other Pentagon officials have predicted the Russians will begin deploying some of their new missiles early next year.

The nuclear arms limitation agreement, while putting a ceiling on the number of strategic nuclear "delivery systems" and on MIRV-launching missiles, permits both countries to modernize their missile forces.

Beecher declined to say whether the United States considers the SS16 as a potential mobile missile, although he acknowledged "there have been some reports of Soviet activity associated with mobile missiles."

The United States does not yet have a mobile missile, but the relatively high level of missiles permitted under the SALT agreement, coupled with Russia's advantage in size, has increased the possibility that the United States may decide to develop a new weapon that could be launched from either aircraft or from some land vehicle such as trucks or trains.

The SS16 is rated by U.S. intelligence as having a "throw weight," or maximum payload, of about 2,500 pounds, slightly more than the U.S. Minuteman intercontinental ballistic missile.

It is about 65 feet long, about six feet wide, and powered by solid rocket fuel.

The three other Soviet missiles now under development are much more powerful, ranging in throw weight from 6,000 pounds to 15,000 pounds. They have been tested with as many as six and eight warheads.

President Opposes Mining Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The House passed a compromise strip mining bill yesterday even as President Ford was sending word to the Capitol that he would veto the new regulations because they would hamper his energy development program.

The bill would set standards for land reclamation after the coal is removed, authorize a reclamation fee on all coals production, and grant surface owner rights to western ranchers who have federally owned coal beneath their lands.

But top officials at the White House announced Ford's decision to veto the measure — if approved by the Senate as expected — following a lengthy meeting which included a rundown on its provisions and implications.

"The President made his decision based upon substance," Frank Zarb, new head of the Federal Energy Administration, told a news conference.

"He (Ford) said 'I am not prepared to make a decision which will limit the flexibility for our design of a national energy program at a time when energy and development of energy is so critical to our future."

Carl E. Bagge, president of the National Coal Association, hailed Ford's decision and said the bill would not only close down a sizeable portion of the surface mining industry but would fail in its purpose of assuring reclamation.

"The coal industry is gratified that President Ford had the courage to take a stand which may be unpopular but which will avoid a crippling and inflationary reduction in the supply of coal this nation must have," Bagge said.

Zarb acknowledged to reporters that Interior Secretary Rogers C. B. Morton, the administration's chief energy policy coordinator, had urged Ford to sign the bill lest the new Congress enact a measure "even more out of balance" next year.

Deputy administrator John R. Quarles said his Environmental Protection Agency had recommended that Ford sign the bill, despite its objectionable provisions, because of the environmental consequences of unregulated strip mining.

Earth Tremor Rocks Greece

ATHENS (UPI) — A strong earth tremor jolted western Greece today, Athens observatory said.

The quake, measuring 5.5 on the richter scale, was felt in the Ioanian islands of Cephalonia and Zakynthos, an observatory spokesman said.

Local police said there were no reports of casualties or damage.

TELLS STORY — Sidney Duberry, the object of a manhunt by Los Angeles police, gave himself up at the offices of the Los Angeles Examiner this week after the body of Ruben Chase was found near Elysian Park. Duberry was allowed to tell his story to Examiner reporters before he was taken into custody.

Ford Favers Drinking Water Bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford has decided to sign legislation approved by Congress to impose the first federal standards for home drinking water, his chief spokesman said yesterday.

The bill, which also would give the Environmental Protection Agency additional enforcement power to bring states into compliance if necessary, had been opposed in some respects by the White House and oil interests. But Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford will sign the legislation.

The bill, which got an unusually rough going-over in the House before being passed overwhelmingly there and later in the Senate, got a push from public fears following reports about cancer-causing agents in drinking water drawn from the Mississippi River.

The only existing federal standards for drinking water relate to water used on interstate transportation vehicles and apply only to bacteria.

The new law would cover water from household faucets and cover bacterial, chemical and all other contaminants.

The White House had opposed the bill's provision giving the EPA expanded enforcement powers and oil interests had fought a section of the bill giving protection to some underground water supplies.

School Bond Bill Introduced

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — A bill designed to make it easier for financially troubled school districts to win voter approval of bond measures was introduced this week by Sen. George Moscone.

Under the bill (SB93), school bonds could be approved by a majority instead of two-thirds of a district's voters.

Moscone, D-San Francisco, authored a successful ballot measure that lowered the voting requirement to a majority for school buildings endangered by earthquakes. His new proposal would extend the majority requirement to all school bonds.

Evidence Found Of Early Man

REDDING (AP) — Human beings have lived in the Shasta Lake area of Northern California for at least 7,700 years, according to a Shasta College professor.

Archaeology professor Ed Clewett said this week he based his findings on information obtained from recent archaeological diggings.

Canadians To Begin Beef Controls

OTTAWA (UPI) — New Canadian controls on beef and pork exports take effect this weekend in an attempt to maintain an orderly marketing of these products in the United States within the U.S. import quotas.

Alastair Gillespie, the minister of industry, trade and commerce, announced the new controls yesterday. He said they would take effect at midnight (EST) tomorrow and apply for an indefinite period.

Canadian cattle, hogs, beef and pork now in transit to the United States will be approved for export by Canadian customs if it can be proven the meat was in transit by midnight Thursday, Gillespie said.

The minister said the controls were needed "to protect, insofar as it is possible within the limits set by the U.S. import quotas, traditional trade patterns between Canada and the United States."

The controls will apply to live cattle and hogs, fresh, chilled and frozen beef and pork and cured, cooked or canned pork.

A Trade Department spokesman explained," We have spent a lot of money over the last 20 or 30 years developing U.S. markets for particular Canadian products or brand names.

"We would like to see these traditional markets continue to get their supply as much as possible, so the habit of purchasing these products is not broken.

The Canadian government will apply the controls at various times during the period of the U.S. quota, which is set to expire next Aug. 12, in order to fill the quota over the entire period.

The controls were the latest step in a series of U.S.Canadian quota actions which have disrupted traditional beef and pork trading patterns between the two nations and created some diplomatic tension.

Cigarette Production Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Antismoking campaigns have not got in the way of tobacco production, which probably will rise to another new record in 1975.

Agriculture Department statistics released today said domestic cigarette production is rising about 1 per cent and "further gains in adult population and per capita use should boost ... output in 1975 to another record."

The 1974 production was estimated at 650 billion cigarettes, compared with 644.2 billion in 1973. Per capita consumption among adults was estimated at 211 packs this year compared with 208 packs in 1973.

NO FOWL PLAY — Though it may look that way, no hanging of a duck took place in the Civic Center lagoon Tuesday morning — and the dozen or so Marinites who phoned the Independent-Journal about it may rest at ease. A photo appearing in Tuesday's I-J, part of which is reproduced above, showed the apparent dead duck who seemed to be hanging from a nearby tree limb. Actually, the duck was completing a landing on the water, as is indicated by a photo (below) taken seconds earlier, showing the empty place underneath the branch. Independent-Journal photographer Bob Hax took the photos.

Nazi To Resume Business Life

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Former Nazi Klaus Altmann, his fears of extradition to France to face trial for war crimes lifted by the Bolivian Supreme Court, says he will resume the active business career that made him a wealthy man.

"It's the best Christmas present I ever received," Altmann, 61, said this week on a radio broadcast taped in Cochaba a valley town in central Bolivia.

The 12-man court denied an extradition bid by France, where Altmann twice has been condemned to death. Under the name Klaus Barbie, he commanded the Gestapo in Lyon and was accused of murdering resistance leaders and civilians.

Ferry Terminal Building Costs Up By 5p Per Cent

The pricetag for the San Francisco ferry terminal has gone up nearly 50 per cent, Golden Gate Bridge District directors learned yesterday.

The latest estimate for its construction alone is $2.3 million, up $750,000 from the last estimate made three years ago. The old estimate of $1.6 million assumed the terminal would be completed in 1975, while the new one is based on completion by July 1, 1976.

Roland B. Mays of Environmental Planning and Design Associates of Sausalito reported the new, more detailed estimate computed by his firm. Total cost was put at $2.9 million, including a 10 per cent contingency for unexpected construction expenses, $218,400 for his firm's design of the terminal and supervision of its construction, and $125,000 to lease the site for 66 years.

The bridge district's building and operating committee, which heard the report by Mays, unanimously recommended the full board approve the $218,400 contract for design of the project. The recommendation will be screened by the finance-auditing committee 10 a.m. Thursday and go to the full bridge board 10 a.m. Friday.

The plan by Mays's firm will accommodate two ferryboats at a time, and provide for unloading and loading passengers in only five minutes because ramps will connect directly with the middle deck. Unloading and loading now take 15 minutes, largely because passengers must use steep ramps to the lower deck.

Mays said the improved loading system will add roughtly 30 per cent to the cost of docking facilities.

The present temporary ferry landing in San Francisco will move in February or March to the north side of Pier 1 immediately north of the present landing. The pier will be used until the permanent terminal is completed.

Kelly Files For School Board Seat

Francis X. Kelly, elected to a seat on the San Rafael Board of Education in 1971, yesterday filed for reelection to the post.

At stake in the schools election are the seats of Kelly and colleagues Marilyn Bolinger and Herman L. Childress. The March 4 schools ballot will include a measure asking voters to increase by $200 the spending limit per pupil set by SB 90.

The 42-year-old Kelly, who for 17 years has worked as a certified public accountant and partner in the San Francisco accounting firm of Carney, Grasshoff and Kelly, said the major issue facing the school system is the local financial situation.

"The major issue is how we are going to be able to keep the schools open next year," said Kelly. He cited his accounting background as invaluable in helping the schools cope with the financial squeeze.

He noted that the March 4 ballot will include a revenue increase measure, and said he supports "giving the community the opportunity to make the decision on how to operate the schools."

Defeat of the revenue increase measure would result in a "dramatic reduction" in school programs, he said.

In addition, Kelly said his four years of experience on the board is an asset since "it takes a while to find out what's going on."

He said the San Rafael school system has fewer problems than many other school districts. "(The San Rafael school system) is one of the best in the state and I'd like to keep it that way," he said.

He added that he doesn't believe in "experimentation for experimentation's sake . . . The three R's have been basics for a long time . . . They're tried and true."

Kelly said he supports alternative educational programs for students who require them.

Kelly, a native of Massachusetts, graduated from Stonehill College with a degree in business administration.

He lives at 4 Graceland Drive with his wife, Jean. The couple has five children aged 11 through 16. All are enrolled in the city school system.

Equipment Contaminated; Eight Infected

ATLANTA (UPI) — Contaminated equipment used in a Georgia hospital to monitor blood pressure caused eight critically ill heart surgery patients to cotact a blood infection, officials revealed yesterday.

An account of the incident was contained in the national Center for Disease Control's weekly Morbidity and Mortality Report, and confirmed by the state Health Department.

The patients, who contacted the bacterial infection in the hospital's intensive care unit, were treated with antibiotics and recovered. Use of the contaminated device, a transducer employed to monitor blood pressure, was discontinued.

Dr. John McCroan, head of the epidemiology section of the state Health Department, refused to identify the hospital.

Title Games Next For 4 Marin Teams

By virtue of victories last night, half of the eight basketball teams in the Marin County Athletic League will be playing for tournament championships tonight.

Undefeated Terra Linda edged Washington of San Francisco, 68-66, and once-defeated Drake breezed past Petaluma, 61-48, to set up an all-MCAL final in the ninth annual Drake High School tournament in San Anselmo. Redwood routed Napa, 71-44, in the Wine Valley Festival at Napa, and Marin Catholic defeated Analy of Sebastopol, 70-67, in the Redwood Empire Invitational at Healdsburg.

Novato beat San Rafael, 60-55, and Baldwin of Maui edged San Marin in overtime, 57-55, in losers' bracket games at Drake. The other MCAL team, Tamalpais, earned the consolation final of the Riordan tourney in San Francisco by destroying Salesion of Richmond, 74-48.

Terra Linda 68, Washington 66

The Trojans scored the first 13 points of the game and 10 in a row at the start of the second half, but were unable to put the Eagles away. Behind the outside shooting of Emmanuel Chinier and the acrobatic drives of Steve Smith, the City team kept coming back, finally tying it at 62 with two minutes to play.

Barry Carr, Terra Linda's super junior center, broke a 64 tie with a tip in, and scored the winning basket on a layup with seven seconds to play. He also had 20 rebounds.

Drake 61, Petaluma 48

The Pirates made enough ball-handling mistakes to turn coach Pete Hayward into a nervous wreck, but they were never seriously threatened. Senior forward Walt Gillespie paced the victory with 15 points and strong rebounding, and senior forward Dale Cope wrapped it up with eight points in the fourth quarter.

Baldwin 57, San Marin 55

Randy Shimabuku sank a 20-footer from the top of the key with four seconds left in overtime to give Baldwin the win. The score had been deadlocked at 49 when regulation time expired.

Randall Nakama, also a senior forward, led the Bears with 14 points, including three in the overtime period. Center Lono Mahi scored seven clutch points in the fourth quarter. San Marin was paced by forward Brian Duncan with 20.

Novato 60, San Rafael 55

Senior forward Mike Moroski scored 20 points, and sophomore center Marvin DeLoatch added 15 as Novato moved into tonight's consolation final against Baldwin at 5 o'clock. Eric Wheeler led a balanced San Rafael attack with 15 points.

Redwood 71, Napa 44

"Everything just fell into place," said coach Dick Hart after his Giants outscored Napa in every quarter to win going away. Jack Hagler and Steve Trobbe had 18 points each, Gary Sorgen took down nine rebounds and Mark Kilmer got eight assists as Redwood advanced to the championship against Lowell of San Francisco tonight at 9 o'clock.

Marin Catholic 70, Analy 67

Victory for the Wildcats was soured by the loss of star forward Mike Mahoney, who turned his ankle late in the fourth quarter after leading the Kentfield team with 20 points. He'll be lost for up to two weeks, and without him Marin Catholic will have to struggle to beat Montgomery of Santa Rosa in tonight's final game at 8:30.

Tamalpais 74, Salesian 48

Tam cashed in on 36 of 48 foul shots and outscored Salesian in every period. All 12 Indians scored, led by senior forward Dan Butterfield with 14. Tonight, Tam meets Wilson of San Francisco for the consolation championship at 5 o'clock.

Marin Tars Whip Basketball Rival

By TOM THOMPSON

Gaining experience with every game, College of Marin's young basketball team dropped non-conference foe Shasta of Redding, 73-55, last night in the second game of a double-header before about 500 fans in Kentfield.

Marin trailed only once, early in the first half but had trouble putting Shasta away. The Tars led by nine at the half, and extended it to 15 a few minutes into the second.

But as Marin coach Jim Webster said with about five minutes left to play, the Tars were "a long way from home." Marin held a 10-point lead at the time but the stubborn Knights refused to let up.

After a Shasta time out with about 2:30 left to play, the Tars took a 14-point advantage and coasted to their fourth win in six startsthis year.

"Our inexperience shows so frequently," said Webster. "We just don't play with the intensity and confidence we should.

Pacific-8 Record May Take Tumble

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

Now the Pacific-8 is 28-1 in cage competition this season, but it should at least double its loss total tonight.

That's because unbeaten Oregon State has to call on nationally top rated North Carolina State in a game that will at least provide a showcase for Oregon star Lonnie Shelton.

The Pac Eight got three more wins last night when Washington downed Temple 54-46 at the Kansas Classic, USC rolled over Nevada Reno 97-84 and Oregon took Nevada Las Vegas 94-77.

Clarence Ramsey's 21 points led the Huskies past shorter Temple. Tonight Washington battles host Kansas for the title.

USC got 31 points from guards Gus Williams and Biff Burrell and 14 from 6-6 frosh Earl Evans in the win over Nevada Reno, while Oregon got 33 points from All America hopeful Ronnie Lee and Greg Ballard add 18 and dominated the boards in the impressive win over the tough Rebels.

Tonight Stanford calls on Nevada Reno in only the Cards' second game of the young season.

In more Coast action last night University of San Francisco got off to a 22-7 lead and coasted home to a 103-84 win over Brigham Young. Keith Young hit nine straight shots in four minutes to lead University of Pacific Hayward State 81-71. Hayward star Stan Cherry had 29.

Pepperdine breezed to a 107-70 win over a visiting Newcastle team from Australia. Ollie Matson Jr., freshman son of the football Hall of Famer, had 24

ABOUT FUTURE

WFL Mogul Optimistic

NEW YORK (UPI) — The fledgling World Football League, badly in the red after its first year of existence, will be in much better shape next year —at least in the opinion of its president.

"I think we're going to be in good shape," said Chris Hemmeter, the WFL's newly-elected president. "I feel we have made a very positive forward step today."

Hemmeter was officially named president of the financially troubled league—reputed to have lost $20 million in its first year—by an almost unanimous vote yesterday and his Hemmeter Plan for reorganizing the league was approved by all owners present, with one abstention.

Both the abstention and the negative vote were said to be cast by the Florida Blazers, in retaliation for the league's consideration of a new franchise in Orlando to replace the Blazers.

Hemmeter denied reports that the Friday session was a stormy one, saying that there was general agreement on the major issues.

Hemmeter also said that he did not walk out of the meeting, as some reports indicated. "I did leave the meeting, but it was for business purposes and not a walkout at all," Hemmeter said.

The Hemmeter Plan, approved by the league's Board of Governors, calls for the revolutionary concept of making the players and coaches on the WFL teams part owners of their respective franchises. Highlights of the plan call for minimal exposure to financial loss and risk and optimize financial stability.

The six assumptions of the reorganization plan were:

—A franchise must break even with $1.8 million in net revenues from ticket sales and $200,000 in local radio, television and miscellaneous revenue;

—There would be minimum revenue from national television during the first three years of WFL operations;

—Downside risks must be minimized;

—A WFL franchise can operate successfully with a $700,000 equity investment;

—And, that there be absolute assurance that all players, coaches and coaching staff payroll, including payroll taxes and benefits, be paid in accordance with contractual terms and all league travel and group medical and life insurance be prepaid prior to the commencement of each season.

The key provision, according to Hemmeter, is the setup of an escrow account prior to the season. Any individual player could be given a flat fee as a bonus for signing with the club and this would go into escrow befoe the first game of the season.

Alan R. Miller, the WFL's Players' Association representative, heartily endorsed the Hemmeter Plan, saying it was "the ultimate in profit possibilities."

If this plan had been in effect when the league was first formed, the Jacksonville and Detroit franchises would never have been allowed in the league because they would not have been able to put up the escrow money required in advance of the season opener. Both teams folded during the course of the WFL's initial season.

The meetings will continue today, with discussion of rules changes among the topics to be discussed. The owners are also trying to settle past debts and acquire more investment capital, while still debating the addition, subtraction or change of various franchises. Eight teams, according to a spokesman, is the likeliest number for 1975, but a higher number is not out of the question.

The league's first priority in settling debts would be back pay for players. Any players on clubs not reaccepted for membership next year would be picked up by the remaining franchises in a player pool.

Two of the three major television networks have shown interest in the WFL, according to a league spokesman. The reason for this, he said, is that the network would be able to pay a lower figure to the WFL.

BUT IT'S COWBOYS TONIGHT

Raiders May Think Ahead To Playoff Game Against Miami

OAKLAND (UPI) — The Oakland Raiders will be playing the Dallas Cowboys tonight at 6 o'clock in the day's third nationally televised National Football League game, but don't blame the Raiders if their mind is not on their work.

Even Coach John Madden admits it will be difficult to concentrate on the action at hand when everyone is thinking about next Saturday and the first round of the American Football Conference Playoffs against the defending Super Bowl champion Miami Dolphins.

"Sure, we're looking ahead," said Madden on the eve of the Cowboys' game, "and I'm positive the Dolphins are, too. It's a normal thing. This game doesn't mean anything but we still have to play it and we'll do our darndest to make it a good one."

The Raiders clinched the AFC West three weeks ago and it's been difficult for the Oakland coaching staff to keep the team enthused about the work at hand. The Dolphins, on the other hand, didn't clinch the AFC East until last week. They finish up the regular season against the New England Patriots tomorrow.

Ken Stabler, who sat out last Sunday, more than likely will open at quarterback against the 8-5 Cowboys, who missed winning a playoff spot for the first time in the last nine years, but he probably won't go all the way. Both veteran Daryle Lamonica, who made a rare appearance last week against Kansas City and threw for the game's only touchdown, and Larry Lawrence may be trotted out for a little work.

The whole idea of tonight's game, as Madden sees it, is to stay sharp.

"We want to prepare for the playoffs by sharpening our execution, techniques and fundamentals," said Madden. "You can work hard on these things in practice but there is nothing like game action to get a team ready."

(Tonight's game will be televised on Channels 7 and 11.)

QB Question In Minds Of 49er Fans

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — The San Francisco 49ers and New Orleans Saints match 5-8 records tomorrow at as they finish out the National Football League season.

Once again, Tom Owen will start at quarterback even though Coach Dick Nolan says Steve Spurrier is his No. 1 quarterback. But Spurrier has been healthy for four weeks and rookie Owen keeps starting, which has fans wondering who really is the top gun.

Ted Kwalick bruised his heel in practice this week and may not be able to play. That could mean the outstanding tight end may have played his final game for the 49ers since he is ticketed for the World Football League next year.

Len Rohde has been hospitalized in traction most of the week, but the durable offensive tackle is still expected to play in his 208th consecutive game as a 49er.

A trio of rookies, quarterback Larry Cipa, running back Alvin Maxson, and tight end Paul Seal, have been standouts in recent New Orleans outings and figure to start tomorrow. Saints quarterback Archie Manning is fighting a variety of ailments and did not even make the trip west.

Immediately before the kickoff, the winner of the Len Eshmont Memorial Award will be named. He is the 49er voted by his teammates as best exemplifying the courage of the late 49er running back.

LYLE NEXT — Heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali (above) will probably be defending his title March 3 against third-ranked Ron Lyle. The Madison Square Garden bout was all but assured last night when Lyle knocked out hard-hitting Al Jones during the fifth round at New Orleans. Lyle's record improved to 30-1-1 with 21 kayos. SAN RAFAEL CHAMPS

Big Year For Swimmers

By PAUL STEINMETZ JR.

"C'mon San Rafael: Go!" somebody screams from among the dozens of people surrounding San Rafael High School's swimming pool. Both San Rafael and Marin Catholic's girls swim teams have perfect 5-0 records, and this is the last event of the meet. The score is tied, 53-53, and the winners will be the champions of Marin County Athletic League.

"You don't have to breathe, just swim!" and "Just win!" are the girls' instruction from friends. The starting gun goes off. They're swimming, people are screaming . . . and San Rafael wins!

'JUST GLAD'

"I'm just glad we won," said coach Jan Gostlin, shaking from excitement. "I expected to beat Marin Catholic by more," she added. "I wouldn't want to go through that again."

Jan was wearing her purple swim meet pants. She has to wear pants at the mets, because it is likely that she will be thrown in the pool after a win. Thus, Mrs. Gostlin wouldn't want to be wearing a dress. When Jan teaches class, she wears dresses that she has made herself.

This was her first year as swim coach. The 28-year-old coach didn't know before the season started if the team could win the championship. But after beating defending champion Novato in the first meet, she expected to win it all.

EXCITED

"I was so excited when we won the first meet that the girls felt they had to win the rest so they wouldn't let me down," she laughed.

Jan started swimming when she was 10 for Olympic gold medal winner, Ann Curtis Cueno's team.

After Jan was graduated from San Rafael High School, she was a summer life guard for Mrs. Cuneo, and later coached Mrs. Cuneo's synchronized swimming team. That was all her experience until she became the San Rafael coach.

"I didn't really want the job at first, but I read some books on race swimming and got a lot of help from a lot of people, and now I never want to give it up," she said.

Mrs. Gostlin's hobbies attest to her joy of life . . . cooking, sewing, making pots on a potters wheel in her garage, and gardening. She has a greenhouse in her back yard, and a giant vegetable garden that she and her husband Bryan planted. Small wonder that she also teaches home economics.

But her newest hobby is the swim team. For coaching it, she is paid an additional three per cent of her salary. If she were a man, she said, she would receive four per cent, but she isn't much of a women's liberationist.

Jan is concerned about a problem she has to overcome if the team is to keep winning. Many of the other swim coaches in the MCAL want to ban Amateur Athletic Union (AAU) swimmers from school teams. They are the girls that also swim in AAU meets, and they are usually the fastest swimmers on the school team.

Jan is against the move. If that rule is enacted, she said, the races will be slower, not as exciting, and the Marin County champion will not have a chance at the northern California championship.

RULES

"Even if the rule is made, there are ways to get around it, and I'm going to, and," she added, "I'm going to tell them that when we have the meeting to vote on it.

"It's important for the girls to win," Jan said, "because at the same time we accomplish other things that are important too. The girls are loyal to the team and each other, they are all friends, they work as a unit, and they have fun. Those things wouldn't happen if we didn't have a chance to win."

With or without the rule, Jan thinks her team will be the champs for years to come.

"The girls think that we'll have an even better team next year," she said. "That will be fun."

PRAISE

"We couldn't have won this year without every girl," she added. The girls deserve all the credit."

Not everybody agrees with that. Bob Royal, San Rafael High's principal, sent Mrs. Gostlin a congratulatory memo after winning the championship, which said: "That shows what the girls can do, when they have someone who cares about them."

"I had more fun than they did," said Jan, proudly.

Friday 13th Strange In ABA Action

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Kentucky Colonels and Tom Nissalke may not suffer from triskaidekaphobia but both were victims on a strange Friday the 13th.

It was supposed to be coincidence that the day began with a partial solar eclipse and ended with a meteor shower. It was also coincidence that in between Nissalke was fired as coach of the San Antonio Spurs and the Kentucky Colonels lost the first place lead they held in the American Basketball Association East all season.

The New York Nets, who never heard of triskaidekaphobia (fear of the number 13), ran the Utah Stars ragged in the second half to gain a 100-85 victory and move into first place in the East with their seventh straight triumph.

Kentucky, which has had more than its share of difficulty winning on the road this year, lost in Indianapolis 114-108 to the Pacers as George McGinnis scored a season high 40 points and had 17 rebounds.

San Antonio, meanwhile, lost a coach but won another game. Nissalke, who once was the object of a small player rebellion while coach of Seattle, was done in by management in San Antonio for "conduct detrimental to the team." Nissalke is generally considered a very good coach but his criticism of management apparently outweighed his credentials. He will be replaced by Bob Bass, presently general manager of the Memphis Sounds. In another bit of coincidence, the Spurs defeated the Sounds last night 118-94 for their 18th victory against 10 losses.

Nets 100, Stars 85

Moses Malone, Utah's 19-year old prodigy, impressed Dave DeBusschere, New York's general manager and a former National Basketball Association All-Star, a "frightening prospect" by pulling down 21 rebounds and scoring 18 points.

Pacers 114, Colonels 108

Indiana led by 10 points with 10 minutes left in the game but had to rally after Kentucky came back and twice led by one.

Spurs 118, Sounds 94

Conquistadors 91, Squires 79

Center Lee Davis scored 25 points, 14 in the fourth quarter, and Travis Grant added 18 to lead San Diego over Virginia.

EVIDENCE OF SUCCESS

Nineteen-year-old Chris Evert, who yesterday was named best woman tennis player in the nation, was surrounded in her Ft. Lauderdale, Fla. home by some of the many trophies she has won. Chris also formally announced yesterday that her engagement was off with men's tennis champion Jimmy Connors. (UPI Telephoto)

NBA ROUNDUP

An Ironic Twist Worthy Of Alfred Hitchcock

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

It was an ironic twist worthy of Alfred Hitchcock.

Not only did the Washington Bullets break the Boston Celtics' four-game win streak last night 108-89 before a packed Boston Garden, but they did it using the same fast break for which Boston is famous.

It was a classic dose of their own medicine that did the Celtics in and they knew it.

"Washington really hustled back on defense tonight," admitted Celtic Coach Tom Heinsohn. "The guards were dropping back as soon as the ball went to the hoop and that took away any chance we might have had to break."

Bullet guards Phil Chenier and Kevin Porter were able to concentrate on any Celtics who might try to break away because of the tremedous strength Washington displays under the basket. The starting frontcourt of Mike Riordan, Wes Unseld, and Elvin Hayes was responsible for 35 of Washington's 52 rebounds.

"Elvin is really the key to our forecourt," said K.C. Jones, the Bullets' head coach and former Celtic great. "He has a super attitude and super talents. He can play center or forward and excellent defense. What this does is let Wes and he switch off easily."

Hayes, the game's high scorer with 24 points, led the way in the first half with 14 points and again in the third period with 10 points. Riordan, who was totally silent on offense in the first half, went on a tear for eight points in the third period when Washington pulled ahead 80-71. He broke the game open in the fourth period with another 14 points as Washington outscored the shaken Celtics 28-17 and rolled to the final buzzer.

Braves 108, Knicks 104

New York led 97-86 with 9:14 left then went scoreless for the next six minutes as Buffalo staged an incredible comeback.

76ers 93, Bucks 89 (ot)

Fred Carter scored 22 points, including four in an overtime period, to spark Philadelphia's upset of Milwaukee.

Bulls 109, Jazz 76

Chicago went over 100 points for only the fifth time in 25 games in coasting over New Orleans, which lost for the 24th time in 27 games.

Kings 88, Pistons 84

Kansas City-Omaha moved into first place in the Midwest Division. Nate Archibald led the Kings with 23 points.

Suns 85, Cavs 84

Charlie Scott scored 34 points, including the last four on free throws, to pace Phoenix. Jim Chones led Cleveland with 22 points.

Lakers 100, Sonics 93

Lucius Allen returned in the fourth quarter after having three stitches sewn under his left eye in the third period and finished with 30 points to lead Los Angeles.

This Is NFL's 'Pride Week'

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

Except for the St. Louis Cardinals and Washington Redskins, this is "pride week" in the National Football League.

The Cards and 'Skins are vying for the one remaining division championship, the National Conference East, with the loser of the duel settling for the NFC's wild-card playoff berth.

But for the rest of the league, nothing is riding on the 14th week of action except perhaps a winning or break-even season, maybe a slightly better position in the final standings, possibly a push toward next year's salary negotiations. . .and a lot of pride.

St. Louis and Washington are tied atop the NFC East, each at 9-4 A few weeks ago, the Cardinals appeared to have a lock on the title, leading the Redskins by three games and, as recently as three weeks ago, needing just one more victory to wrap it up.

But the Cards, who blew out to a 7-0 record in the first half of the season, have come upon hard times, losing their last two games and four of their last six. Conversely, the Redskins have won five of their last six to turn a runaway into a dogfight.

Now it comes down to tomorrow's two major games: The Cards vs. the New York Giants in St. Louis and the Redskins vs. Chicago in Washington.

If the Cardinals win — and they're seven-point favorites — they'll take the title no matter what Washington does since they beat the 'Skins in both meetings this year.

But if St. Louis ties or loses and the Redskins, 10-point favorites, whip Chicago, Washington will take the title.

Whichever team wins the NFC East will open the playoffs next Saturday in Minnesota against the Vikings, champs of the Central Division. The wild-card team will play in Los Angeles next Sunday against the Rams, who took the Western crown.

The American Football Conference playoff setup was decided last weekend when Miami took the Eastern title and the Pittsburgh Steelers won the Central Division. The Dolphins, gunning for an unprecedented third straight Super Bowl title, play the AFC West-winning Raiders in Oakland next Saturday and the Buffalo Bills, wild-card winners in the conference, are at Pittsburgh the next day.

In two afternoon games today, Cincinnati was at Pittsburgh and Minnesota visited Kansas City. Tonight, Dallas plays at Oakland.

Along with the Giants-Cards and Bears-Redskins games, tomorrow's season wrapups have Green Bay at Atlanta, New England at Miami, Detroit at Philadelphia, the New York Jets at Baltimore, Cleveland at Houston, Buffalo at Los Angeles, Denver at San Diego and New Orleans at San Francisco.

Gauchos Win In Basketball

Casa Grande High School forward Jon Moyer swished a 20-foot jumper with 12 seconds remaining to give the Gauchos a 70-69 victory over the visiting Justin last night.

In the non-league basketball battle, Casa Grande fought back from a six-point deficit with two minutes to go, utilizing a full-court press and poised ball-handling.

Four Gauchos finished in double figures, as Casa Grande shot 46.5 per cent from the field. Gaucho guard Dan Lutz had 18 points.

In the preliminary contest, the Justin Junior Varsity subdued the Casa Grande JV's, 47-39. In another game, Rancho Cotate knocked off Piedmont, 70-56, in the Healdsburg Invitational tourney. Bob Riby scored 20 points for the victors.

"When we arrive at the point where we play with confidence and intensity," the coach continued, "we'll be a very good team. But we still have a long way to go."

Mike Dinehart topped Marin scorers with 18 points, while pulling down 14 rebounds. Willie Barnes had 17 points for the Tars, and Tony Parenti came up with 16.

Contra Costa of San Pablo beat Yuba, 106-82, in the first game. Marin and Contra Costa are scheduled to trade opponents tonight, with the Tars taking on Yuba at 9 o'clock, and Contra Costa meeting Shasta at 7.

Contra Costa was led by Dwayne Foreman's 18 points and Jimmy Allen's 15.

Oregon Tech continued to look like one of the biggest of the little guys with an impressive 82-66 win at Chico.

MURRAY OLDERMAN

Bartkowski Could Be Prize Pluck Of NFL

THE TIPOFF:

Six months ago he was leaning to a pro baseball career. Now, depending on the needs of the team drafting first, like maybe Atlanta, quarterback Steve Bartkowski of California could be the prize pluck of the NFL for '75

Q. When Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick, and Paul Warfield go to WFL, who will take their place? — Paul Zappala, age 8, Brea, Calif.

Not an illogical question — assuming there will still be a WFL in 1975. The Miami Dolphins don't relish losing their three veteran stars, but already this year they've shown they can ambulate without them. Csonka, hurt part of the time, has had his fullback slack taken up by stumpy Don Nottingham. Kiick has played even less than usual with the sprouting of rookie Ben Malone as a fine back. And Nat Moore, a slick little wide receiver, could compensate for the loss of Warfield.

Q. On the Denver Broncos, Billy Van Heusen not only punts but plays a lot of the time as a wide receiver. Are there any other kickers who also play other positions? W. S., Denver, Colo.

At the moment, no. And the only reason probably that Billy is getting a chance to show his moves is that he told Coach John Ralston he'd quit this year if he didn't get a chance to play full time. He could afford to quit — you've heard of that shirt. It's in the family. Billy, who's had seven knee operations, is also a scratch golfer. Don't want you to get the idea that other booters aren't athletes, too. Running back Donny Anderson of the Cardinals has been a full-time punter at times. Larry Seiple of the Dolphins and Bob Parsons of the Bears could both play tight end. And an old booter named George Blanda has been known to throw a pass.

Q. I was told the Olympic Games motto is "Citius, Altius, Fortius" — translated to Faster, Higher, Braver in 1895 and the more modern version Swifter, Higher, Stronger. Could you verify this for me? Do the contestants also pledge an oath? — Alfred R. Borg, Oakland, Calif.

You're absolutely right on the motto and might be interested to know that it was originated by the headmaster of a prep school in France, Father Didon. Contestants individually do not pledge oaths, but a selected athlete from the host nation takes an oath on behalf of all the competing athletes in the Games.

Q. Can you tell me where Richie Zisk did his most productive hitting for the Pirates? Was it when he was No. 3 in the lineup or when he was No. 5? — Jack Bodenschatz, Summerhill, Pa.

Ah, the Hot Stove League is in session. Intensive research reveals that the young (25) Pirate outfielder batted in the fifth position most of the '74 season, hitting .304 and driving in 73 runs from that slot. He batted third only a total of 11 games, when Al Oliver was out of the lineup with a pulled muscle, and was 19 for 45 (.422) with 11 RBI's. He also replaced Willie Stargell as the cleanup hitter for 20 games and had 12 RBIs. I gotta fess up — I didn't get the above by combining the box scores. Eddie Routzong of the Pirates front office did.

Q. We all know that UCLA has been winning many basketball games in recent years. But at one time Kansas, Kentucky, and Oregon State were attempting to be the first university team to win 1,000 games. Who finally did reach the grand first? What team has won the most games? — Gene Herkins, Westminster, Calif.

The order, going into the 1974-75 season, is Kentucky as the winningest team of all time with 1,115 followed by Kansas with 1,090, and Oregon State with 1,067. I assume they came into the charmed circle in that order, too. Ironically, UCLA, which leads in NCAA championships with a resounding total of nine (followed by Kentucky's four) is not even in the Top 10 in total wins.

Q. Where may I get information concerning player trades of major league baseball teams — also schedules and rosters of teams? — David Wayne Davis, Princeton, Ind.

By writing the respective league offices: American League, 280 Park Avenue, New York, N.Y.; National League, 220 Montgomery, San Francisco, California.

PARTING SHOT:

The real coaching bobble of '74, almost ignored, was Dick Nolan of the San Francisco 49ers sitting down all-pro Ted Kwalick most of the year — on the ridiculous pretense he doesn't block well.

HOCKEY ROUNDUP

Atlanta Penalty Is Costly In Setback

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The Atlanta Flames committed only one penalty in the final period of their game against Philadelphia last night—but it proved one too many.

The Flames' Ed Kea was sent to the penalty box with only 3:17 left to play and one minute, 44 seconds later, Rick MacLeish tipped in the goal that enabled the Flyers to edge Atlanta 3-2 in the only National Hockey League game.

The victory increased the defending Stanley Cup champion's lead in the NHL's Division 1 to 11 points over both the Flames and New York Rangers, who remained tied for second.

In World Hockey Association play, Toronto edged Cleveland 7-6 in overtime and Edmonton nipped Minnesota 5-4.

MacLeish tipped in defenseman Joe Watson's slapshot from the blue line for his 11th goal as the Flyers outshot the Flames 11-4 in the third period and 35-23 for the entire game.

Toros 7, Crusaders 6

Tom Martin's power-play goal from a scramble in front of the net at 2:11 of overtime lifted Toronto over Cleveland. The Toros' victory snapped a six-game home ice losing streak and moved them three points ahead of second place Quebec in the Canadian Division. Other Toros scorers were Paul Henderson with two, Tony Featherstone, Vaclav Nedomansky, Pat Hickey and Rick Cunningham.

Oilers 5, Fighting Saints 4

Rusty Patenaude banged in a rebound with 1:46 left to play to lift Edmonton over Minnesota. The Saints, who outshot Edmonton 40-23, had tied the score 4-4 on Rick Smith's deflection with 7:12 left.

AQUANAUT STAR

Briggs Has Best Age Group Time

Mark Briggs is some swimmer.

The Novato Aquanauts star had the United States' best 1974 Junior Olympic time in the 100-meter breaststroke for 10-year-olds. He was clocked in 1:26.38. Briggs' effort was 34/100ths of a second off the U.S. record in the 10 and under age-group.

Additionally, Briggs had the second best 1974 time in the 50-meter breast (40.18) and fourth in the 100-yard breast (1:18.89).

Waring was ranked second this year in 100 meters (1:00.91), third in 50 meters (28.10), sixth in 200 meters (2:12.71), seventh in 100 yards (54.70) and 10th in 50 yards (25.40).

In girls competition, Ann Haley did admirably. She was involved in two firsts. Haley's 27.60 time in the girls 15-17 50-meter free matched the 1972 record.

Ann teamed with Laura Griffin, Sue King and Jane Patocchi to set a record in the 200-yard free relay at 1:39.80.

Haley had the third best time in the 50-yard free (24.70) and seventh with Patocchi, Griffin and King in the 400-meter free relay (4:10).

Seals In Montreal; Meloche May Start

MONTREAL (UPI) — The California Seals have recorded only one of their six victories on the road and they don't figure to double their total tonight when they call on a Montreal team that has a solid 15-6-10 National Hockey League record.

The Seals were blanked 3-0 at Vancouver Tuesday and humiliated 5-3 by expansion Kansas City Thursday so this is definitely not their week. Yet the Seals next-to-last road win, well back in the 1973-74 season, came at Montreal with Gilles Meloche in goal. He is expected to be back there again tonight.

CSONKA, KIICK, WARFIELD

Last Home Game For Trio?

MIAMI (AP) — Even if the World Football League doesn't survive its financial problems, tomorrow's game with New England may be the last home game for Miami Dolphins Larry Csonka, Paul Warfield and Jim Kiick.

All three have talked of retiring if their contracts to play next year with Memphis in the WFL are wiped out by a league collapse.

Kiick will likely be the only member of the threesome — who signed a joint $3.3 million WFL contract last March — who will play against the Patriots. Warfield and Csonka are being rested for the National Football League playoffs because of injuries since the game is meaningless for playoff purposes.

Unless Miami beats Oakland in its first playoff game and Pittsburgh loses to wild-card Buffalo, Miami will not return to the Orange Bowl this season. Buffalo, as wild card, cannot host a playoff.

Halfback Kiick, 28, unhappy because of limited playing time the past three seasons, said last month, "If I hadn't signed with the World League, I would have demanded to be traded at the end of the season. Or I would have just retired."

Fullback Csonka, 32, has been bothered by foot injuries the past two seasons and will miss rushing for 1,000 yards for the first time in four years. He has 749 yards.

LARRY CSONKA
Lots of thought

Csonka has made over $1 million in the past year. Besides earning over $100,000 with the Dolphins, he received a $600,000 advance from Memphis owner John Bassett to sign with the WFL and made a reported $400,000 in the off-season with endorsements and personal appearances.

Ryan's Strikeouts

Nolan Ryan of the California Angels recorded 367 strikeouts during 1974.

He said it would "take a lot of thought" for him to remain in football if the WFL doesn't make it.

Wide receiver Warfield, 32, also has been bothered by injuries. He said family considerations would be a big part of his decision if the WFL folds. He has moved back and forth from his home in Cleveland to Miami since being traded by the Browns in 1970.

"Sonja will be starting school," Warfield said of his 5-year-old daughter. "She'll be in kindergarten next year. All the moving certainly is not an ideal situation for her or for my wife.

"That will affect a major part of my decision whether to continue playing football or not."

Warfield, who will receive a degree in telecommunications from Kent State University this June, received a $300,000 cash advance from Bassett to sign with the WFL.

A COZY PLACE TO BE

Optimism Grows In 'Terror Room'

By DANA ADAMS SCHMIDT
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

WASHINGTON, D.C. — In the spacious control center down the hall from the paneled office of U.S. Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, a mood of encouragement grows.

The center is set up to combat terrorism, complete with its own communications network and "scrambling" equipment. And the men who run it see more promising signs emerging from these recent events:

The Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), now recognized by the UN, condemned the recent airplane hijacking in Tunis. So did Libya (although Egypt accused Libya of instigating the affair) and Iraq, stronghold of those who reject any kind of settlement with Israel. For once, the Arab world was unanimous in condemning a terrorist act.

The Algerian government, which for several years had been lenient in its treatment of terrorists who sought refuge within its borders, has gradually adopted a tougher shnd.

Mexico, formerly a haven for terrorists, now closes its doors to them.

Cuba, once the mecca of hijackers from the U.S., for several years has been arresting them. In part this resulted from an agreement with the U.S. under which both countries agreed to return individuals guilty of seizing by force an aircraft or a boat.

The U.S. has just about solved its domestic hijacking problem thanks to stringent airport precautions and the fact that Cuba is no longer available as a haven.

The American anti-terrorist effort is unique in that it is based in the State Department and not, as in most countries, in the Department of the Interior.

In his center down the hall from Kissinger's seventh-floor office and around the corner from the operations room where all State Department communications come together, Dr. Lewis Hoffacker, the center's head and veteran foreign service officer, has direct-line access to all parts of the government necessary to his task, including the CIA, Pentagon, and the Departmement of Transportation.

When terrorists strike, he forms a task force that includes the heads of the section of the State Department most concerned. In some cases they just give advice. In some, as during the recent Venezuelan incident when terrorists tried to hold a group of diplomats including an American woman for ransom, he mixed suggestions, ideas, and orders.

The control room then becomes something like a war room, with signals flashing to American diplomats on the spot, reports going to various parts of Washington by Telex, pneumatic tube, and a facsimile transmitter equipped with a scrambler for secrecy.

The tool-par-excellence of anti-terrorism is "intelligence," skillful persuasive diplomacy, and well thought out tactics. The U.S. Government, unlike U.S. business, refuses to pay ransom.

In five years, 25 American diplomats have been kidnaped. Ten have been killed, and 12 wounded.

In the Foreign Service, now on the firing line, Hoffacker's thoughtful approach finds many echoes. The very best diplomacy, many of these officers are saying, must surely be focusing on problems that cause the terrorism.

The American problem generally has been somewhat different from Latin American and Middle Eastern terrorism. American hijackers were usually loners, and often deranged. The Latin and Arab varieties are ideologically motivated and more dangerous.

In an address in New Orleans a few months ago, Hoffacker said:

"We as a government must be cool and tough — and, I might add, sensitive — in responding to these vicious attacks . . . We are not unmindful of the motivation inspiring the frustrated political terrorist . . . As ways are found to convince him to reason otherwise, he must be madeIqto unfecshanl now that it is unprofitable for him to attack innocent bystanders."

Petalumans Plan Ballet

More than 60 young Petalumans will perform in "The Nutcracker" ballet next Friday, Saturday and Sunday at the Veterans Memorial Building.

The production, sponsored by the Petaluma School of Ballet and the City Ballet Guild, is being choreographed by Mary Paula of Petaluma and John Henry of San Francisco. It is an adaptation of the classic fairy tale by Ivanov, according to Mrs. Paula.

The Friday performance, at 8 p.m., will be preceded by a punch and cookie hour at 7 p.m. Saturday and Sunday performances will start at 2 p.m.

Admission Friday will be $3.50 for adults, $2.50 for students and $1 for children 12 and under. Saturday and Sunday admissions will be $3, $2 and $1. Proceeds will be used for scholarships and future productions.

Structural steel in the San Francisco Bay's Golden Gate Bridge totals more than 83,000 tons.

Alcoholic Facility To Be Considered

A proposal for an alcoholic recovery facility at 34 Grove Street will be considered by the San Rafael City Council at 8 p.m. Monday in city hall.

At issue is a bid by the Alcohol Community Foundation to overturn planning commission denial of a permit needed for a recovery home for alcoholics.

The commission on Nov. 12 rejected the permit, saying the facility was inappropriate for the neighborhood.

The council also will review the proposed East San Rafael Drainage Assessment District No. 2.

The meeting will be preceded at 7:30 p.m. by a session of the city redevelopment agency. The agency will hold its annual election of officers.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Usually There's Little Reason For Concern On Toilet Training

Many new mothers worry about when toilet training should be started and how long it will take. I tell them not to worry because no child, to my knowledge, has ever gone to kindergarten in diapers. I also tell them never to compare notes with their friends or neighbors since every child is different.

Rarely does a youngster have full control by age 2, some do not achieve full control until age 4 and most children fit somewhere between the two.

INTELLIGENCE HAS nothing to do with toilet training, which is a matter of sphincter and muscle control. As much as a child would like to please his parents, he cannot possibly cooperate until he is ready — physically and psychologically. Parents who believe the process is a matter of discipline usually have frustrated children. A parent is not the one who determines when it is necessary to turn the bladder on and off.

In "The First Five Years," authors Dr. Virginia E. Pomeranz and Dodi Schultz describe the consectuive steps a child must learn to control the process of elimination.

First, he must recognize and interpret the sensation of a full bowel or bladder. The child must then relate this sensation to the circular muscles that open and close the bowel so that he can keep the opening closed until Mother Nature calls. The next step is to walk to the bathroom, pull down his pants, sit down on the potty and relax the sphincter opening for urination and defecation. The child must also be able to tell you that he has to go to the bathroom, which is impossible if he cannot talk.

TOILET TRAINING sometimes is simplified if your child can't stand a wet or soiled diaper. Even though he complains after the damage is done, take this opportunity to let him know that you are willing to help. Change his diaper and don't scold him. More than one assurance may be necessary but before long, he'll get the point.

Don't overdo the kudos when he masters what is a normal function, that is, answering nature's call "cleanly, efficiently, without ado, and without assistance."

GALLSTONES

K.B. writes: Can gallstones form in the main tube after a person has had gallbladder surgery?

REPLY

Yes, they can. Sometimes the stone was so well hidden it escaped detection during surgery. But new stones also develop. Many surgeons X-ray the bile ducts before they suture the abdominal incision to uncover any hidden stones.

RECOVERY TIME

REPLY

It can take weeks or even months. But recovery does not mean cure because recurrences are common, especially during periods of stress. Generally, the longer the condition goes untreated, the longer it takes to get better.

QUINSY SORE THROAT

REPLY

This super-sore throat is rare today, thanks to antibiotics. In a quinsy sore throat, one of a variety of microorganisms settles in the tonsil, causing a painful abscess, which must be lanced to release the pus.

ANEMIA-RELATED JAUNDICE

C. B. writes: Can anemia cause jaundice?

REPLY

Yes, especially when the blood cells are destroyed (hemolytic anemia) and large amounts of pigment are deposited in the skin.

JOINTS, MUSCLES

W. D. writes: Does rheumatoid arthritis affect the muscles and nerves as well as the joints?

REPLY

Strictly speaking, rheumatoid arthritis effects the capsule surrounding the joint. The nerves are not involved, but rheumatoid arthritis can affect many other organs of the body. It may, for example, involve the heart.

WHITES ARE BLUE

K. K. writes: The whites of my two-year-old granddaughter's eyes are blue. Is this due to poor blood?

REPLY

Not necessarily. Osteogenic imperfecta, a condition in which the whites of the eyes are blue, also causes deafness, looseness of the joints and brittle bones. Toulouse-Lautrec, the French painter, was thought to have this malady. May I suggest that your daughter or daughter-in-law take her to an eye specialist?

SHINGLES

E. A. writes: Does shingles around the waist last six weeks?

REPLY

Snowstorm Lashes The Mountains

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

A wind-driven snowstorm lashed the Rocky Mountains, freezing drizzle hit the Midwest, and fog clung to the South early today.

Winds sent snows swirling across the central Rockies into Nebraska. More than two inches piled up in Lander, Wyo.

As the snowstorm moved east, a heavy snow warning went up for the Colorado mountains and a winter storm watch was posted for Iowa.

Temperatures hovered above the freezing mark as drizzle hit the northern Atlantic Coast.

Skies were clear from the southern Plateau to the Tennessee Valley.

Cotati Seeks Applicants

The City of Cotati is seeking applicants for its general plan citizens committee.

Planning Director Susan Boehlje said the committee will include about 30 members, representing neighborhoods, the area beyond the city limits included in the plan; the Chamber of Commerce; the elderly, Sonoma State College students and faculty, the high school age population, each school district, and the county board of realtors. There will be several at-large positions.

Applications are due at City Hall by noon, Dec. 31, Miss Boehlje said. The city council is expected to appoint committee members in January.

Generals Grounded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Air Force Chief of Staff Gen. David C. Jones has ordered his generals to make a formal request every time they want to fly in a military transport plane.

Jones said the change, which strips the generals of their traditional privilege of flying wherever, and whenever they want, will eliminate 6,000 jobs and save $100 million a year including more than 600 million gallons of fuel.

He said the planes would be taken out of the control of air base commanders and given to the Military Airlift Command.

"If someone, including a general officer, wants to go somewhere, he'll come in and request it on a standardized form," Jones said. "If the justification is sound, that request will be honored."

New Oil Find Is Reported

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — Gulf Oil Corp. announced yesterday discovery of a significant new field in Oklahoma Louisiana waters.

Gulf said the new well was drilled jointly with Continental Oil Co. and Atlantic Richfield Co.

Gulf said 6 production platforms for the lease in water considered that a second well is being drilled about a mile northeast of the discovery.

THUMPER CHECKS THE ACTION

Her first grade class seemed a bit unruly to teacher Dorothy Fourcade this fall, so when she spotted this French lop-eared rabbit in a pet store she brought him to class as a "calmer-downer." If the children promised to speak quietly so as not to frighten him, and walk carefully so as not to step on him, he could stay. Today, two months later, Thumper has found a home, and has the run of the classroom at Mary E. Silveira School in San Rafael. Here Thumper checks the action as Dana Dodson files A-B-C cards, and brother John looks on. He is, according to Mrs. Fourcade, "the most fetching rabbit you have ever seen." (Photo by Jim Kean)

THE LAST WORD

'This Is Your Friendly Attendance Officer, Is Your Mother There?'

By BETH ASHLEY

Many a student who brings home a mediocre report card could get genius marks for the stories he creates for his school attendance officer.

Let me tell you.

As the person who checked on absences for four years at a local junior high, I heard some beauties.

A favorite was the story that went like this: "I was in my pajamas when I let the cat out, and I locked myself out, and I live in an apartment so I was on the balcony so I had to climb down the outside of the building and it was raining so I caught this awful cold so I couldn't come to school."

Ah, Larry, how could they ever have given you a C in creative writing?

IT IS THE POLICY of this particular junior high for the attendance officer to call a student's home when he is absent — to be sure no accident has befallen him en route to school, to find out whether a child is sick (an absence for illness is not deducted from ADA funds) and to tip off parents, if a tipoff is needed, that Johnny is not snug in school but has detoured to the pinball parlor or other local hot spot.

Sometimes the kids would beat me to it.

"Mrs. Ashley," the voice would gasp over the phone, "this is Ron. I'm awfully sorry, but I'm just not going to be able to make it today. I feel just terrible."

"Poor lamb," I would purr. "Is your mother there?"

The first call was inevitably followed by a second. Another strangled voice. "I feel awful. I'm just too sick to make it to school."

"Poor Tommy. Is your mother there?"

The next call, from Mike, was right on schedule. "It's my ear," he groaned. "I've had this awful earache all night."

The guiltier the boy, the more pathetic the voice.

Of course it was never too long after the dreadful tales had been told that the school phone would ring, and Mrs. Jones, the community watchdog, would report: "I have just seen Ron and Mike and Tom on Drake Boulevard. They are riding their bikes and having a ball. Aren't they supposed to be in school?"

Poor innocents. Did they really think they could fool the old master?

SOMETIMES THE LIST of absentees was long, and the phoning process from school to home would get bogged down in long parental descriptions of the student's illness. Nothing was omitted — from onset to escalating temperature to what Johnny could — or could not — keep on his stomach.

I had mixed reactions to all this information.

There was the inclination to dispense medical advice. "It sounds to me like a touch of flu. Just give him bed rest and aspirin."

Or some days, when the list was long and the tales of woe seemed endless, I'd feel my lip curling and the almost irresistible impulse to say: "Look, lady, all I need to know is, is he sick or not. Kindly skip the symptoms."

And sometimes I wanted to run up and down the school corridors to let everybody know: "Bob C. threw up six times last night, Cathy O. has diarrhea, and Matt H.'s poison oak is so bad he's bleeding all over the bed."

It seems to me the school attendance officer could be a valuable resource to parents who just aren't sure whether the 8 a.m. illness is going to last past the hour school starts at 9.

One phone call from school usually tells it all.

(Phone rings. Johnny answers)

Mrs. A.: Hello, Johnny, how are you?

Johnny (bright as a button): FINE!

Mrs. A: This is school calling. We wondered why you aren't in class today.

(Awkward pause)

Johnny (the voice drops, quavers): Oh Mrs. Ashley. I'm SICK!"

Mrs. A.: Is your mother there?

BIBLE STORY PUPPETEERS — Marie Currie and her daughter Yvette rehearse "Daniel in the Lion's Den" with puppets stitched by Mrs. Currie and designed by her husband Paul, a Mill Valley seminary student. Bible Stories Are Told With Popular Puppets

By PAT BALMES

"I have to shut the puppets up in my suitcase fast after a show or the giggling kids practically trample me," said Marie Currie.

Mrs. Currie uses her puppets to teach Bible stories to children at churches throughout Marin.

The wife of a third-year student at Golden Gate Baptist Theological Seminary in Mill Valley, Mrs. Currie takes her homemade puppets along when her husband Paul travels from church to church each Sunday as guest preacher. She and Paul perform a Bible story for Sunday School children before it is time for him to preach.

The Curries also give Biblical puppet shows at old peoples' homes, rescue missions and hospitals. They plan to do a television spot for the Catholic Church, according to Mrs. Currie. They also entertain at birthday parties.

"If I am not doing puppet shows, I am making more puppets or writing puppet plays," she said. Seminary students sometimes ask her to write puppet plays on contemporary themes; recently she based one about attitude changes on the conversion of St. Paul.

Among her 50 children's plays, the adult favorite is a comedy-argument between "Darwin and the Ape." The plays are light and fun: in "Adam and Eve," the puppeteers sing "Don't Sit Under the Apple Tree."

Mrs. Currie's paperback book "It's a Puppet's World" is about to be published. It includes 10 of her original plays and patterns for puppets with instructions on how to work them.

Her husband, an artist, drew the puppet patterns and Mrs. Currie stitched them. Her favorite puppet is a large black vinyl whale which blows from a hidden squirt gun and swallows Jonah.

She Found A Career At A Chateau

By JOAN LISETOR

Unusual and interesting career opportunities can occur when you least expect them. Coralie Castle of San Rafael discovered one in a renovated 12th Century chateau in Strasbourg, France.

The chateau is one of five study centers for Schiller College Europe, which also has campuses in Heidelberg, Madrid, London and Paris.

On a European trip with her mother two years ago the San Rafael woman visited Dr. Walter Leibrecht, founder of the college and an old family friend.

She asked Dr. Leibrecht if he had a representative for the college of the West Coast. He said he didn't. She said he needed one and the job was hers.

SINCE SEPTEMBER of 1972 Mrs. Castle has visited 300 high schools, junior colleges and colleges, as many as five in one day, to spread the word about Schiller College's programs.

THE JOB got too big for one person, so this year Mrs. Castle recruited a friend, Brenda Unrue, also of San Rafael.

In the fall the women are on the road three days a week, visiting schools from San Luis Obispo to the Canadian border.

The women are excited about the college, which makes them excited about their jobs.

"THE COLLEGE offers cultural, travel and academic programs for about the same price as a good quality private college in the United States," said Mrs. Unrue, a native of London. With her husband, a project manager of hydroelectric plants, she has lived throughout Europe.

Mrs. Castle has a humanitarian interest in the college.

"I believe so heartily we are not going to have one world, beat inflation and have peace until Americans get to Europe and learn about the people and their cultures," Mrs. Castle said.

She is the author of three successful cookbooks, and a portion of the proceeds from one, "Soup," was donated to the Marin Community Workshop for handicapped persons, where Mrs. Castle has been a volunteer for many years.

Emphasis at the college is on liberal and fine arts, international relations and business. Students can move from campus to campus and are mixed nationally with 15 per cent coming from the United States.

MRS. CASTLE is also director of admissions for the college's summer academy for high school students. She arranges charter flights and finds adult advisers for the academy.

"It is not a money maker now. It's hard work," Mrs. Castle said, "but I enjoy doing it because I believe so thoroughly in it.

"It is stimulating. It's a fun thing and so different from writing cookbooks, which keeps me at home. This pushes me out."

More Young Seen Divorcing

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Today's rapid crumbling of social traditions is likely to produce a continuing high U.S. divorce rate, according to several social counselors.

"We see more young people who do get divorced, and I think we'll be seeing more," counselor Jane Markle of New Haven said in an interview.

"It is not that they take marriage lightly or that some of them are not fearful of going it alone, but because of their unwillingness to continue in an unrewarding relationship."

The divorce rate has nearly doubled since 1960.

Eugene Eliasoph and Robert Singer, counselors who work as a team, said erosion of the nuclear family as we knew it a generation or more ago is increasing the likelihood of divorce.

Then "there were two or three wage earners in a family and there was often an aunt or grandmother to share in child care," Singer said.

"Now two parents are responsible for all the nurturing."

"Maybe that is why men and women are seeking solace in others outside the family," Eliasoph added. "It is an effort to spread the pressures people are feeling. It is a way of breaking out to more extended relationships."

Mrs. Markle, who prefers the title Ms., said young people are less afraid than older people of returning to a life alone because change has been a more recent part of their lives.

"For them society has recently opened more doors and provided more options," said Ms. Markle, a counselor at the Center for the Person in Transition.

"The older person worries more about the need for living alone. This person has less choice in work, social life and other opportunities."

All three counselors said more women than men seek guidance in divorce even though men are less likely to discuss their problems with others.

"Men reject counseling because they consider it a sign of weakness and because of the cultural bias that men are not supposed to have feelings," said Eliasoph, director of the New Haven Center for Human Relations.

Those who seek professional help "tend to want pat answers rules and formulas, sort of a "how-to-divorce.' " he said. "It is a training process to get them to think, to begin to look within themselves for what they really feel. Somehow women are more in touch with themselves."

Women's divorce problems deal more with how to adjust to being single members of society again, the counselors said.

Tam Student Team Helps Children

By BETTY FROST

For the past six weeks, teams of Tamalpais High School students have been devoting two afternoons a week to an after-school project helping Mill Valley children.

One afternoon the high school students spend in training sessions, the other in conducting programs emphasizing art and craft projects, indoor games, sports and outings for the elementary school children aged 7 to 10

The program is under the auspices of the Switching Yard, Youth Division of the Volunteer Bureau of Marin, Inc. Tim Stanton is Switching Yard director, and Cathy Ritvo, assistant. Both are teachers.

Small groups of elementary schoolchildren meet in classrooms at Park School or Tamalpais High School once a week. A boy-girl supervising team runs a program for from four to six children. The children are referred to the program by-teachers, principals, the department of social services, the community mental health services, or such youth-oriented organizations as the Big Brothers and Big Sisters.

Stanton noted that although the activity is open to any child, it was planned to meet the needs of shy children, children where no one is home after school, or children who may not have youngsters to play with near their homes.

Agreeing that one day a week is not enough, he said, "One day is better than no day."

Parents were asked to attend an initial meeting to meet the group leaders and learn about the program. Parents are also responsible for transportation. Parents are able to assist with such details as phone calls and car pools are particularly helpful, according to the high school leaders.

A fee of $3 to $5 per child for the series is asked. The high school students have supplemented this amount by supplying material for craft projects out of their own pockets.

Friendships develop between the leaders and the children, but there is also a more tangible reward. The high school students may receive credit in psychology classes or the work experience program for this extra curricular activity.

Apparently 7 to 10-year-old children are not much interested in the changing role of women. On Monday, five little girls were happily working on a mural for the room at Park School where they meet. In a classroom at Tamalpais High School six lively young boys decorated Christmas stockings. The segregation was the children's choice, Stanton said.

The program will be resumed at the start of the new semester in late January. It follows the format of the afternoon school activity pioneered by the Switching Yard at Novato High School a year and a half ago. That program is now operated by the Novato Human Needs Center.

Anyone For Christmas Cards Along With Wedding Invitations?

DEAR HELEN AND SUE:

We recently received a wedding invitation for the week before Christmas and in the envelope was also a brief "Merry Christmas and Happy New Year" wish. What do you think of people so chintzy that they must combine their wedding invitations with their Christmas cards? — ASTOUNDED

DEAR ASTOUNDED:

Sounds practical to me. But then I'm not Amy Vanderbilt. — SUE

DEAR ASTOUNDED:

Years ago, my husband and I included a birth announcement with our late Christmas cards (or was it vice versa?). Seemed the practical thing to do, since our son was born on December 24. — HELEN

DEAR RAP:

My parents are divorced and I have lived with my mother since childhood. My father didn't give me child support, or love. I didn't respect him when I was young, and I don't now.

Although I admire the traditional act of the bride being given away by her father, I plan to be "given away" by my mother.

Is there any reason why she can't walk down the aisle with me? I think this will show how much I love and appreciate her. — OKAY?

DEAR OKAY:

Okay! It's the bride's right to plan her wedding in the way that will please her and her bridegroom most. Traditions aren't as important as feelings, in our book. — HELEN AND SUE

RAP:

Is it proper to have two best men? I have two friends I like equally well. Can they both serve in the same capacity at my wedding?

Any law against it? — DOUBLE TROUBLE

D.T.:

As we've said before, in modern weddings, tradition isn't mandatory. Whatever pleases you — do! — HELEN

RAP:

"Old Fogey" should be renamed "Old Fud!" He said girls would get their kicks from tackling boys, and this might lead to sex right on the football field, if females were allowed in male contact sports.

If we go along with his line of thinking, then won't all-male games lead to homosexuality? And wouldn't this ruin his "American Way of Life" just as much as would those "sinning little females?" — S.P.S.

RAP:

I'm a teen-ager against allowing girls in boys' ball games. How would you feel if your son wasn't allowed to play the championship little league game just because a girl could beat him at pitching or batting? — N.N.

N.:

If she could beat him, I'd say, may the best person play! — HELEN

No Way Seen To End Alcoholism

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — There is no possibility of completely stamping out the use and abuse of alcohol and drugs, a U.S. senator said yesterday.

Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, chairman of the North American Congress on Alcohol And Drug Problems meeting in San Francisco, said, however, he did not know to what degree the abuse could be reduced.

"We know, of course, by this time that we are not going to stamp out the use and abuse of dangerous substances, however great our efforts may be," Hughes told the Congress. "It is obvious that every human society is willing to pay the price of indulging in pleasure-giving, pain-alleviating drugs of one kind or another. Realistically, we can't expect to conquer drug dependency as we conquered polio and tuberculosis.

"Perhaps all we can do is educate, minimize the damage and make sure that the measures we take don't compound the problems — as is the case when we retain the criminal penalties for the use of marijuana."

Hughes, who admits to having been an alcoholic, said that hidden factors keep us from currently even knowing the absolute numbers in drug and alcohol abuse.

"When we stop the increase — the percentage of addiction in relation to the population — then we will be just meeting the problem. I do not know how far such abuse can be reduced."

The senator, who did not run for reelection, said one of the problems is that "it is socially acceptable in America to get blasted — especially on alcohol."

"Drinking is a joke. There is no ill will toward the drunken driver and the problem cannot be solved as long as there is such an atmosphere of public acceptance," he said.

Dr. Morris Shafetz, director of the National Institute on Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, spoke about two misconceptions — abstinence and anonymity.

He said that for alcoholics in the advanced stage, abstinence was the goal, but "there are individuals with early-stage alcohol problems who can, with proper treatment, perhaps continue to drink socially. I do not advocate it but we must be aware of it."

Today is Saturday, Dec. 14, the 348th day of 1974 with 17 to follow.

The moon is between its new phase and first quarter. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Saturn. The evening stars are Venus and Jupiter.

James "Jimmy" Doolittle, American hero flyer of World War II, was born Dec. 14, 1869.

On this day in history:

In 1819, Alabama was admitted to the Union as the 22nd state.

In 1972, Apollo 11 astronauts Gene Cernan and Harrison Schmitt blasted off the moon for the return trip to earth.

Declarer's best chance for his ninth trick is in diamonds. South must get to the dummy to lead a diamond, finessing with the 10 from his hand. After this loses, South must get to the dummy again to lead another diamond. This time he finesses with the jack.

As the cards lie, the second finesse will succeed.

The question now is: How does South get to dummy twice in order to take the two diamond finesses?

The answer is that South must win two club tricks in the dummy. This doesn't give him any more club tricks, for he still wins only four tricks in that suit. It does enable him to develop an extra trick in diamonds.

South wins the first spade, cashes the ace and queen of clubs and then leads the jack of clubs. By this time he knows that only one club is out against him. He can afford to overtake with dummy's king of clubs. This puts him in position to take the first diamond finesse.

Later, South can lead the deuce of clubs to dummy's five of clubs. This puts him in position to take the second diamond finesse — and thus produces the game and rubber.

Blacks Gain In Elections

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Joint Center for Political studies said today that 270 blacks were elected to state legislatures in November —up from 236 the previous term.

The center said its study showed the new total was almost triple the number of blacks who sat in state legislatures in 1964, when there were 94; and represented a 39 per cent increase over 1970, when there were 198.

VISIONS OF BALLOONS AND DRAGONS IN SAUSALITO

Broadcast Overhaul Is Urged

RENO, Nev. (UPI) — Roger Tatarian, former editor of United Press International, yesterday urged a sweeping overhaul of the country's broadcast structure which would free commercial programs from government regulation.

Tatarian, now a professor of journalism at California State University at Fresno, also called for creation of a parallel public network on the pattern of the British Broadcasting Corp. He spoke at the University of Nevada as the annual Scripps lecturer.

Urging that Congress undertake a revision of the 40-year-old basis of brodcasting, Tatarian suggested "some kind of Magna Carta for both broadcasting and the public."

He said the Federal Communications Commission should retain its technical authority over frequency and power but added that "it must be taken out of the business of passing on content, particularly when it comes to news, documentaries and public programming."

"If we limit the FCC's role here to strictly technical matters, we run the risk of giving a very limited number of private individuals an open-ended license to exploit the air waves without any assurance of even minimum regard for the public interest," Tatarian said.

He proposed that regulations be placed in a body more insulated from government and politics than is the FCC, such as the self-regulation practiced by the American legal and medical professions.

"There might be a professional review board, for example, to examine complaints against fellow broadcasters from any source," Tatarian said. "Licenses could be made subject to revocation by the FCC when the review board found proof of deception or gross unfairness."

Tatarian said any such changes should be accompanied by an act of Congress setting up non-commercial radio and television networks generally on the pattern of the British Broadcasting Corp.

MUSIC REVIEW

Jazzmen Offer Pleasing Sounds

By JEFF GILLMAN

Last night — the Marin Jazz Quintet put out some very pleasing sounds at the Cafe Au Lait on College Avenue across the street from the College of Marin.

The Cafe Au Lait is just what you might expect to find next door to a college campus. It is completely casual (Levis are acceptable any time) — and cheap, but leaves something to be desired in terms of warmth and comfort.

But though the furnace fails, the jazz Quintet, a chiefly improvisational group of local musicians, fills the place nicely with hot, spicy music.

The group falls apart from time to time. The good boogie rhythms that emerged around songs like "Sunny" (the highlight of the first set) break up and tend to get submerged in some inventive, but often divided improvisation. The group was at its best when the base/ electric guitar/ drum three-way clicked and produced some very clean, hot, sensual jazz.

A brief solo by Pierre Banes on drums inspired heavy foot tapping and table thumping on the part of the audience. Barnes' sytle is basic, with few frills, and he provides a reliable driving beat that keeps the group moving.

Another hit was Miles Davis' "Solar," a thoughtful dialogue between Doug Pulfer who doubles on trombone, and Chris Cochran who filled in last night for Harry Mann on tenor sax. It was the kind of syncopated, yet introspective number that seemed well-suited to the group.

Doug Pulfer is the nominal leader. He and bass player Delano Dean organized the quintet. The two of them have been playing together for eight months now, but the whole quintet has been in existance only since October. The musicians have yet to attain the unity and instinctive response to one another that a few more months of experience undoubtedly will give them.

Electric guitarist Archie Williams has an intense and intuitive style rooted in the blues. He seems to provide a consistent foundation around which the other members of the group rally.

It's intelligent jazz. One can hear the influence of the best of contemporary musicians Charlie Parker, McCoy Tyner, and Herbie Hancock.

Pulfer, who has been studying music since grade school, has a thorough classical background. He listens to everything from Bach and Bartok — to Miles Davis, and one can hear it in his thoughtful and delicate accoustical rhythms. It's unfortunate that the music is amplified, since his playing is often lost in the bigger sounds that naturally come out of the drums and sax.

The Cafe Au Lait is open Monday through Thursday from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. and on Friday from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. "Mosaic," another local jazz group appears there on Thursdays and the Marin Jazz Quintet appears every Friday. Sets usually start about 10:00.

200-Proof Cloud Seen Clue To Life

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — A gigantic cloud of 200-proof booze has been discovered which could shed some light on the origin of life, a group of astronomers was told yesterday.

The cloud of booze is real, according to Dr. Benjamin Zuckerman of the University of Maryland. He said the molecular cloud of ethyl alcohol is located about 30,000 light years from Earth in the direction of the center of the Milky Way galaxy.

"If you purged it of all impurities and condensed it, you would get something like 10,000 trillion trillion fifths of 200-proof liquor," Zuckerman said.

"The molecules are so thinly spread that you could drag a scoop the size of a football field behind a space ship and in one passage through the 30-light-year length of the cloud you'd collect less than one shot glass of alcohol."

Zuckerman told the quarterly meeting of the American Astronomical Society that a group of 13 researchers discovered the boozy cloud during a perusal of the heavens last October.

Zuckerman was one of 350 astronomers meeting at the University of Florida to present over 200 highly technical papers on astronomical findings. The meeting ended yesterday.

The intriguing discovery of the alcoholic cloud in space could possibly shed some light on the origin of life, Zuckerman said. The discovery proves organic molecules containing at least nine atoms can combine in environments considered bleak and far from the warm coziness of the "primordial soup," where life begins.

Zuckerman does not say the alcohol cloud offers any conclusive proof that life may exist on other planets in galaxies outside our own.

But he says the discovery is "consistent" with the theory of life on other planets. "We may be learning something about the origin of life."

Unusual 'Community Sing' Rises Above Yule Concerts

By BLAKE A. SAMSON

The Winifred Baker Children's Chorus and the Dominican College Choir last night presented a Yuletide concert which was raised above the usual Christmas "community sing" by some unusual and interesting pieces.

Performing at the Tamalpais in Greenbrae, the choral groups sang two fine Gregorian chants, a fascinating "Ceremony of Carols" by Benjamin Britten and a series of novel English songs.

The program was part of the Bay Area Artists in Concert series sponsored by the College of Marin.

Winifred Baker, the program's spiritual guide, deserves the major credit for lifting most of the evening above the mundane and usual. If one wanted more than merely to be entertained, there was the Britten piece to dig into. And even the selections sung by the children, aged 9 to 14, had some intellectual charm.

The Children's Chorus started with a two-part round, "Welcome" and graduated to a four part round, "The Pealing Bells." The youngsters sang the songs with gusto and confidence, especially in the refrains, and were disarming without being cute.

Their selections from A. E. Webber's "The Joseph Jazz" based on the Biblical story of Joseph's multi-colored coat, drew frequent chuckles from the audience and they sang the pieces crisply.

Sopranos Mary Knowles and Anne Perry of the Dominican Choir were satisfying soloists. Miss Knowles sang "Come unto Him" from Handel's "Messiah" in a throaty, robiny voice. Her tone is a bit hard when pushed to the forward in the high register, but when placed in the center of her throat, it is full and pleasant.

She would do well to stay within a comfortable mid-range until the upper notes open, but her approach to the Handel was proper, measured and reverent. Miss Knowles was so confident and poised that it came as a surprise to realize, when she was led off stage, that she is blind.

Miss Perry did not always achieve the fluted ring that she hoped for in "Watchman, Tell Us of the Night" but when she did, it came out clearly. Her dark-colored voice has fluidity and a strong lower support. A greater, more open relaxation will improve the top range and the voice could develop into something very nice.

The solos and the traditional carols, "The First Noel," "Joy to the World," "Adeste Fideles" and "Silent Night" were only appetizers to the tasty main course — Britten's "Ceremony of Carols" and the two Gregorian chants.

How does one explain the nature of a well-sung Gregorian chant? The chants were often sung by choirs, split in two, across from each other in large, echoing Romanesque churches. The ring back and forth off the resounding stone walls gave the music an otherworldly, ethereal fragrance.

In the "Veni Emanuel" and "Ave Maria," the Dominican College Gregorian Chant Singers came near to this off-the-ground, echoing resonance. The strong male voices helped here.

The Britten then took this Medieval sensation and explored it, developing a mercurial, fleeting mystery that wrapped around the audience.

Subtle and calm — yet shining and crystal — the work offered much to think about. With the choir's effective, buffered bass, the strong soprano peak (provided principally by Anne Perry) and a glorious harp accompaniment by Mary Ham, the Britten gave the low-keyed evening its major interest.

Luxury Car Sales Aid Dismal Mart

DETROIT (UPI) — Strong luxury car sales continue to support a sagging new car market that fell nearly 29 per cent in early December to the lowest for a nonstrike Dec. 1-10 period in 15 years.

Industry reports released yesterday also showed Dec. 1-10 deliveries of 129,838 cars were the lowest for any 10-day period since the first 10 days of September, 1972.

The continuing sales decline means even more cuts in the industry which already has scheduled open-ended layoffs for more than 115,000 workers.

The lone bright spot in the dismal sales reports for the Dec. 1-10 period were luxury models which continue to sell. Cadillac sales were up 18.1 per cent in tte Dec. 1-10 period with Lincoln deliveries topping a year ago by 20 per cent.

While the total industry has an 86-day supply of unsold cars —more than 150 days in the case of some small models — Cadillac has just enough to last 24 days. The luxury Continental Mark IV has an inventory of 53 days.

Workers at Cadillac's Detroit plants have been on nine-hour shifts and two of every three Saturdays on overtime.

Plunging Stock Prices Cut Into Endowments

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The recent downward plunge of common stock prices has cost the endowment funds of three of the state's major universities millions of dollars, officials say.

At the state-supported University of Southern California, the stock market slide has not caused serious problems.

But at Stanford University in Palo Alto, the plummeting values have forced budget trimming and an effort to build up the multimillion dollar endowment fund.

"This has had an impact on the university's financial operations," said Robert Augsburger, Stanford vice president for business and finance. "With the decline in market values, we have had to suspend some distributions from the funds."

But UC officials say they aren't as worried.

"It's a paper loss," said a UC spokesman, meaning the stocks have declined in value but they have not actually been sold below their original cost.

The UC endowment fund and its pension fund for employees — with combined assets of just under $800 million — have dropped $85 million in value in the last year, a dip largely due to the stock price declines, the spokesman added.

At USC, the drop in stock values hasn't hurt operations because the university does not depend too greatly on investment income, Colin MacCleod, director of financial servic, said yesterday.

Oregon Store Recalls Tuna

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — The Safeway grocery chain in Oregon and southwestern Washington has recalled some 6-ounce cans of Tempest tuna because they contained high histamine levels.

The government said that the problem with the tuna was not considered critical and no deaths or serious injury had resulted from ingesting the material. It can cause a stinging sensation in the mouth.

Canonization For U.S. Widow

By GEORGE CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Through open, early-American country, the young widow traveled by wagon, carrying her children and all their possessions. It was a rough, hilly road, and a hot sun beat down on them.

"We are obliged to walk the horses all the way and have walked ourselves nearly half the time," she wrote from one stopover.

Such were the hardships of Elizabeth Bayley Seton, on a 50-mile wagon trip in 1809 to a wooded valley near Emmitsburg, Md., where she started a community that was to grow into a vast network of Christian service.

This week, that pioneering woman, the mother of five and spiritual mother to thousands, was designated in Roman Catholic canonization procedures at the Vatican as the first native American citizen to become a saint.

She had once been a New York socialite, surrounded by luxury, called "Betty" by her friends, popular in the city's theatrical and fashionable club circles. At 19, she married the heir of a shipping-banking fortune.

But her husband's health and fortune later collapsed. He went into bankruptcy and died shortly afterward, leaving her an impoverished widow of 29, with five small children, three daughters and two sons.

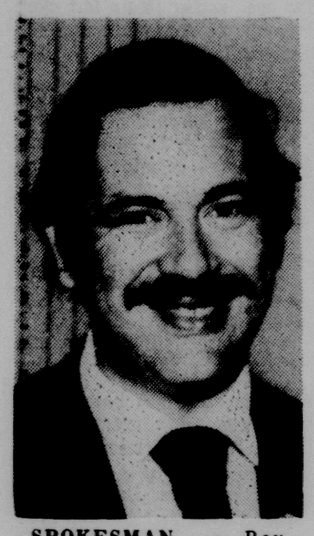
She went to work as a teacher, and then in a boarding school "to cook, wash and mend" for the pupils, one of her letters relates. She had scant provisions for her own children, but says she rejoiced to watch them eat "their bread and milk with good appetite."

It was a period of religious as well as economic struggle. She was an Episcopalian, but on a past visit in Italy she had become keenly interested in Roman Catholicism. About a year after her husband's death, she entered that church, despite sharp opposition from relatives.

In 1808, with encouragement of Bishop John Carroll of Baltimore, she moved her family there and opened an academy for girls. Shortly afterward, she and four other women in the school took religious vows, making the start of the Daughters of Chairty of St. Vincent de Paul, the first native American religious community.

Its handful of members and her children later made the wagon trek to the Emmitsburg area, launching another girls' academy and a tuition-fee school for the poor — a forerunner of the Catholic parochial school system.

Out of that limited, rural beginning has grown the present far-flung Daughters of Charity community, with branch mother houses in Maryland, Missouri, New York, Ohio, Nova Scota, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and about 8,500 members.



SPOKESMAN — Rev. Moishe Rosen, director of the Jews for Jesus, will autograph his recent books and record albums by his group from noon to 3 p.m. next Saturday at the Christian General Store, 2130 Fourth Street, San Rafael. Rosen has been the leader of the Jews for Jesus, a group of Jewish Christians, for the past several years.

Athiest Fasts For Freedoms

NEW YORK (AP) — A Marxist and atheist philosopher, Vaclovas Sevrukas, recently allowed to leave the Soviet Union, is on a prolonged and debilitating hunger strike here in protest against religious oppression in his homeland.

Although he himself rejects religious belief, he says "human faith demands freedom for all," including those who believe in God. "But under Soviet rule, you cannot have real human faith."

Sevrukas, 34, weighed 178 when he started his fast in Rome, Italy, a month ago, surviving only on water. He has lost 32 pounds.

He plans to continue his fast until the end of December, although at the insistance of a doctor, he now has started taking some citrus juice, and friends have expressed anxiety about his declining condition.

A Lithuanian, who taught in the Academy of Science at Vilnius and at an engineering institute there, he holds degrees in literature and philosophy.

First Big Photo Show Since '37

By DIANA LOERCHER
The Christian Science Monitor News Service

NEW YORK, N.Y. — There are signs of class warfare on the art scene. While the fine arts of painting and sculpture have increasingly become the private property of the intellectual and financial aristocracy, minor art forms, notably photography, which are more accessible on every level, are enjoying a democratic popularity.

Photography is becoming not only popular but respectable. The Whitney Museum has mounted its first major photographic exhibition: "Photography in America," an historical survey from 1841 to the present. Moreover, there has not been a photography show of this scope since the Museum of Modern Art held one in 1937.

Another significant point is that this exhibition, which is supported by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and which will run through Jan. 12, opened the same month as the newly founded International Center for Photography here in New York, the first of its kind and a landmark in photographic history.

Photography traditionally has inhabited a shadowy, monochromatic region between art and technology. The fact that a mechanical process figures so strongly in the creation of the photograph and that its mass reproduceability eliminates the mystical appeal of an "original" has conspired against acceptance of photography as a legitimate art.

Certainly it is different from painting and sculpture in which the presence of the artist imposing a vision, manipulating his subject, and entering into direct physical contact with his material, is much more vividly felt. Photography, in comparison, seems detached, and the camera not only a connection but a barrier limiting the flow between the creator and his subject.

Yet as this show exhibition so astoundingly demonstrates photography like any other art form is an act of seeing, and its value is dependent on the quality of vision rather than the medium which records it. Among the photographers included in this exhibition are the early Titans: Alfred Stieglitz, Edward Weston, Paul Strand, Edward Steichen, Ansel Adams, Lewis W. Hine, Walker Evans, Imogen Cunningham, and Minor White, as well as the many fine members of the second generation who have absorbed their influences.

Although the styles are as varied as the personalities of the photographers themselves, two basic strains are apparent: The aesthetic and the realistic. Into the first category fall those photographs in the Stieglitz tradition, which are sometimes romantic, sometimes epic, sometimes abstract, and which share with painting certain overriding aesthetic preoccupations.

The second type (Hine, Evans, W. Eugene Smith, Diane Arbus) use the camera as an instrument for exposing in a compassionate, satirical, or polemical manner personal and social realities. But of course, the two overlap, and guest curator Robert Doty selected only the work of photographers "who intended above all that their work be informed by a conscious effort toward the perfection of an inner vision or an avowed aesthetic content."

The diversity of photographic expression in this exhibition impresses one with the astonishing flexibility of the medium, which is confined in a much narrower way than painting to working with a "given." The photographer, no matter how abstract his final composition may be, is ultimately dependent on "real" objects. (Weston's famous close-up of the cross section of an onion is a perfect example.)

Whatever parallels exist in terms of movements and trends between photography and painting, the major difference that emerges is that photography has remained much more concerned with humanity and nature than painting, and the crowds of attentive visitors to the Whitney, many of them avidly taking photographs, suggest how pleasant it is to look at recognizable pictures again.

Yule Faire Now Open

The second annual Country Christmas Faire, a celebration combining food and craft sales with music, jugglers and other entertainment, opened yesterday and will continue through Dec. 24 at the Evolution Art Institute in Southern Sonoma County.

The institute, an organization dedicated to transforming old materials into works of art, is located in a chicken house at 6030 Roblar Road between Petaluma and Cotati.

Each day's session begins at 10 a.m. and continues to 6 p.m. on weekdays and 10 p.m. on Fridays, Saturdays and Sundays.

A party will be held Dec. 24, according to institute Secretary Greer Upton, and artists from the area will be on hand then to meet the public. Admission is free.

Hearing Set On Attempt To Stop Dividend Offer

DALLAS (UPI) — U.S. District Judge William Taylor has set a hearing Dec. 18 on a preliminary injunction requested by Nelson Bunker Hunt to prevent Great Western United Corp., from declaring a dividend on its common stock.

The Hunts, sons of the late oil billionaire H. L. Hunt, are trying to obtain majority control of GWU, a Denver-based conglomerate that includes the nation's largest refinery producing sugar from sugar beets.

GWU announced recently it was considering a regular quarterly dividend in light of the company's record earnings. The record earnings were attributed to sugar price increases.

The suit said the GWU board of directors was trying to mislead stockholders with the announcement in an effort to defeat a tender offer by the Hunts that would give them 51 per cent of the common stock and control of the conglomerate.

The suit said the directors did not reveal that other pending lawsuits might prevent payment of the dividends.

"The idea is this company doesn't want this tender offer to go over. This type of press release is insufficient, incomplete," said Taylor.

Crewmen Saved From Freighter

TOKYO (AP) — A Japanese tugboat yesterday rescued all 35 crewmen from the sinking freight of Sacramento Venture 1,100 miles east of Japan, the Maritime Safety Agency reported.

The 11,151-ton freighter developed a leak during a storm. The agency said water was pouring in continuously, and it was believed the ship would go down tonight.

The Sacramento Venture is registered in Liberia. It was carrying lumber from Sacramento to Oita, in southern Japan, the agency said.

Canonization Of U.S. Woman Lauded

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford says the elevation of Elizabeth Bayley Seton as the first American-born saint of the Roman Catholic Church "is a milestone in our nation's diverse spiritual history."

Ford issued a statement yesterday after Pope Paul VI announced that Mother Seton, would be formally canonized next Sept. 14.

Waste Recovery As Energy Source

DESPITE EFFORTS to channel more of our refuse into recycling, the problem of what to do with our solid waste grows ever greater.

Recent state legislation requires each county in California to prepare a master plan for solid waste disposal with emphasis on recovery of whatever can be reused while reducing what must be permanently consigned to a dump.

In Marin County, the supervisors named a solid waste management advisory committee of 22 citizens to work with the Department of Public Works in bringing forth the required plan.

Thus far, the county has spent $50,000 to employ a consultant to assist in preparation of the anticipated master plan.

The consultant's recommendations are now before the committee for review before being sent to the supervisors for adoption.

In sum, the consultants recommend and the committee probably will accept as the only practical immediate course, that fill-and-cover operations be continued while efforts are made to encourage ever-increasing recycling.

OFFICIALS OF the Environmental Protection Agency have said there is enough energy in the solid waste from U.S. homes, businesses, and industries "to light every home and office building in the country."

The high and increasing costs of energy, the rising cost of land for dumps, and growing shortages of raw materials now make recycling and energy recovery more practical.

After separation — which now can be largely automated — the bulk of the waste stream is made up of paper, plastics, wood, plant cuttings, and other combustibles. In St. Louis, where EPA financed a pilot plant two years ago, 650 tons of such waste is converted into 520 tons of salable fuel each day. It is used to generate electricity at a plant which otherwise would burn coal.

Trash fuel, incidentally, contains less sulphur and makes less ash, while yielding as much heat per ton as low-sulphur western coal.

In San Diego, reclaimed waste is processed a step further, producing a light oil which is used to fire oil-burning heaters.

In Baltimore, a somewhat different process is used to convert waste to gas which is burned for both heating and cooling.

East Bridgewater, Mass., sells its shredded combustible waste "as is" for fuel. Bridgeport, Conn., is preparing to handle 1,500 tons of trash and garbage per day, recovering glass, metals and energy-producing fuels.

THEODORE C. WELLMAN, chairman of the Marin County committee, expects that in its final form, Marin's plan will look forward to increasing recovery so that within several years at least 25 per cent of our trash will be recycled.

As this trend continues, he hopes, our need for trash dump land will diminish as our rate of recovery of energy and reusables increases.

Making progress slowly seems to be the most we can hope for until some regional entity, embracing a large enough population to make more complete recovery feasible, takes over the job.

Brown Pelican Gaining

In this time of grim tidings, an occasional flicker of good news penetrates the gloom. Thus, when we read in Audubon Magazine that the Pacific Coast brown pelican population appears to be making a comeback, we hasten to spread the word to Marin and Sonoma bird lovers. These birds are particularly sensitive to DDT, which causes them to lay thin-shelled eggs that are easily crushed. Their only nesting ground north of Baja California is in the Channel Islands, west of Los Angeles. In 1970, there were 552 pelican nests and only one chick. The next year only seven. In 1973, there were 34. And now, in 1974, there were a shopping 305 young birds hatched. One species saved!

Four-Leaf Clovers

The winter rains in Marin and Sonoma cause members of the clover family to spring from the earth. Almost by definition, clover bears its leaves in clusters of three. Four-leaf clovers are, therefore, comparatively rare — just rare enough to make finding one in the wild a source of pleasure. In Ireland, four-leaf clovers are supposed to bring luck. There is even a legend that goes with it. The three petals are supposed to symbolize faith, hope and love, and then God added one more for good luck.

Four-leafism is a genetic trait among clovers and it is possible, by selection, to rpoduce plants which are all four-leafed. With luck, that is.

Bouquets and Brickbats

BOUQUET to the San Rafael City Council for its decision to "go slow" on implementing redevelopment. None of the four "alternatives" proposed by the city's redevelopment consultants needs to be selected en toto. With the help of city staff and citizen committee, the council should be able to incorporate the best features from one or more into a plan that really will save and improve the downtown.

BOUQUET to the Novato Unified School District board for its method of selecting a superintendent to succeed James G. Bunker, who will retire next June. Novato trustees are not leaving the selection up to some outside committee, but are involving themselves — along with a teacher committee — in the process.

BRICKBATS to the 90 per cent of College of Marin students who failed to vote in a student body election.

Nixon Brought Peace; Let's Give Him Some

This is Luther Porter. I am writing this letter concerning our former president, Mr. Nixon. For the first time the world is at peace. He gave us world peace, so let the world give him some as he did for us. Every man makes a mistake one time or another. He has done more than any other president but unfortunately he was caught, so let the man live in peace. And I wish him and his family a happy, merry Christmas and a happy new year.

Humane Society Staff Dedicated People

I read in your column of people complaining about our Humane Society and it makes me feel unhappy as I work, as a volunteer, closely with them in various phases.

The personnel at the shelter are very dedicated people, in particular, the director of the shelter, John Gill. He is a most unusual young man and spends many extra hours at his job.

I have yet to phone for help from him that he doesn't go out of his way to cooperate. I feel we are very lucky to have someone like him — this is why we have one of the finest Humane Societies in the United States.

No One But Council Backs Creek Ordinance

After attending the Tuesday, Dec. 10 San Anselmo City Council meeting regarding the proposed creek ordinance, it looks as though we have another case of "Big Brother knows best."

Of the three meetings that I have attended concerning this issue, there have been as many as 300 people in attendance. I have yet to hear anyone in favor of the proposed ordinance but the city officials. The council vote was 3-2 in favor of the ordinance on the first reading.

The attendance at these meetings has not only been those directly affected by the proposed ordinance, but other property owners concerned with the systematic stripping of their property rights by unnecessary restrictions.

The council was elected to represent the citizens of San Anselmo. What must the citizens do to be heard?

Friedman's Proposal Not Deemed Ideal

Let me say that as an applicant for the recent vacancy on the Fairfax Planning Commission, I appreciated the opportunity to present my views in your newspaper on Dec. 4; however, one statement attributed to me does not adequately explain my position. I do not believe that Max Friedman's Marin Town and Country Club is "ideal" for a low-key apartment project. "Ideally" the property should be re-opened as a recreational facility serving Fairfax and surrounding communities. I sincerely hope that the city's position will be upheld in the courts, but should the pending legal action go against Fairfax and Friedman be allowed to develop the parcel, a low-key apartment project would be preferable to massive development. . .

Sugarbush Can't Stand Nice Guy For President

WASHINGTON — "I'm getting sick and tired of having a nice guy in the White House," Sugarbush said the other day.

"But, Sugarbush, it was less than a year ago that you said you were sick and tired of having a crook in the White House."

"I don't want a crook and I don't want a nice guy."

"Then what do you want?"

"HOW DO I KNOW? Isn't there something between a crook and a nice guy?"

"I guess so. What bothers you about President Ford the most?"

"He seems so sincere. He is the kind of guy I would buy a used car from."

"Of course. We'd all buy a used car from Gerry Ford."

"The trouble is you get the feeling he doesn't know what he's selling. One day he tells you to buy a car, and the next day he tells you not to buy one. He may be a nice guy, but he's a lousy car salesman."

"SUGARBUSH, YOU CAN'T be mad at a presient because he's such a nice guy."

"Oh, yeah? Who says I can't? If you have a mean guy in the White House, you can blame him for everything — unemployment, the recession, the price of sugar, the drop in the stock market. It makes you feel good to lay the whole thing right in his lap. But if you have a nice guy in the White House, he makes you feel guilty. I'm sick and tired of feeling guilty."

"People still blame President Ford for everything," I said.

"But there is no real heat behind it. Your anger doesn't come from the gut. Now take Nixon. You could really get mad at Nixon. Every time he came on television your blood boiled. You could scream at the TV set. We all knew he was lying to us, and we didn't feel guilty about hating him. We knew he was responsible for everything bad that was happening to us. Even if he wasn't, we wanted to think he was. As long as you have somebody to blame for your troubles, you can survive. The reason people are mad at Ford is that they can't get mad at him."

"IT'S NOT EASY," I admitted. "Why do you think Gerry Ford is such a nice guy?"

"He can't help it," Sugarbush said. "Some guys are born nice. It might have been his early upbringing. Maybe no one was mean to him when he was a kid. Whatever it was, it wasn't his fault. But why should the rest of us pay because Gerry Ford had a happy childhood?

"When a man becomes president he should rise above his niceness and become the s.o.b. we expect in our presidents."

"You make an awfully strong case against nice guys. Maybe Ford will stop being nice after a few more months in office and a few more articles like this one."

"No way," Sugarbush said. "You just have to look at him to see he'll never change. He doesn't know what it is to be mean. He doesn't have it in him to create the loathing we all need to keep going."

"ALL RIGHT, Sugarbush. You don't want Ford in the White House. Whom do you want?"

"I know you're going to think I'm crazy, but what about Spiro Agnew?"

"Agnew? Why Agnew?"

"He can be awfully mean when he wants to be. He's just as bright as Ford, but no one has ever thought of him as a nice guy."

CAPITOL QUIPS

By PHIL DESSAUER

The Democratic meeting at Kansas City was bound to be harmonious. When the chairman said, "Will the delegates be seated?" he didn't even have to specify which ones.

The Democrats gave a great ovation to George McGovern — but you couldn't tell whether they were cheering him for running in '72 or staying out in '76.

Republicans are going to broaden their base, too. They plan to take in some people who were poor even before the stock market dropped.

President Ford would like to call it a do-nothing Congress — as soon as HE does something.

Settlement By Superpowers Urged To Save Mideast Peace

Last Mondaynight in Washington, George Ball said, loud and clear and for quotation, what a lot of diplomats have been thinking and saying privately among themselves for a long time but no one of prominence had quite dared to say out loud.

He proposed that the United States and the Soviet Union jointly "impose" a settlement of the Middle East on Arabs and Israelis.

Speaking of the trilateral commission (made up of Americans, West Europeans, and Japanese) he urged immediate negotiations between Washington and Moscow leading to the "imposed" settlement in which he would include "joint guarantees by the superpowers, and even, perhaps. . .joint Soviet-American patrols of the buffer areas."

MR. BALL (former undersecretary of state, currently a partner in the New York banking house of Kuhn, Loeb) sees the "imposed" settlement as the only possible way left to avoid a fifth Arab-Israeli war which would certainly involve another Arab oil embargo, which in turn could be economically disastrous for Western Europe and severely damaging to the U.S. It is doubtful that the NATO alliance could survive the shock of such an event.

There are a number of questions arising out of this radical proposal.

First, is the danger as great as Mr. Ball says? The answer is, certainly, yes. The Israelis are set for a "preemptive" strike against Syria. Also the Syrians are heavily armed and many of their leaders would welcome a chance for another round of war.

Second, is there any chance of a nonimposed voluntary settlement between the Arabs and Israelis? The answer is, clearly, no. The Arab governments are not permitted by their public opinion to accept terms which Israel could accept. Conversely, the government of Israel could be toppled in an hour if it agreed to the territorial concessions which must be part of a lasting settlement.

Prime Minister Rabin was in trouble at home last week merely for saying that there could be a further stage of withdrawal from the Sinai in return for Egyptian assurances about Israeli ships in the Suez Canal. But Mr. Rabin's position would be entirely different if the U.S. ever did say "not another gun or bullet or dollar unless or until you agree to the settlement we propose." If he had no choice, he could survive politically at home. Some Israelis also think this is the only real way out of the dilemma.

THIRD, IS AGREEMENT between Washington and Moscow on a balanced and imposed settlement conceivable? Yes, because it could be made the decisive condition for a continuation of the "detente" which Moscow wants and needs just as much as does Washington, probably more so.

Finally, is it conceivable that Washington could bring itself to this drastic step?

Here is where the uncertainty begins.

An "imposed" settlement was seriously considered and explored by Washington both in 1968 and again in 1972. On both occasions there was a good case for thinking the time propitious. In 1968 the Israelis were flushed with their brilliant victory in the Six-Day War of the previous year. And the Arabs were so shaken by their overwhelming defeat that they could have accepted terms which today would be unthinkable.

In 1972 (July 18) President Sadat of Egypt expelled the Soviet military mission from Egypt, closed down Soviet bases, and turned toward the U.S. His eagerness for a settlement was enormous. Israel could have had reasonable peace terms then. In both cases Washington was urged to push the Israelis toward a settlement.

But in both cases it was an election year in Washington. Neither Lyndon Johnson in 1968 nor Richard Nixon in 1972 was willing to use pressure on Israel.

THE RESULT of that reluctance was the October war, the Arab oil embargo, and the present economic plight of the West.

At least, this is not a presidential election year. Conceivably what was impossible in '68 and '72 might be possible now. It depends on President Ford. If the State Department professionals had their way, he would do now what was not done in '68 or '72.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Norway, Russia Dispute Control Of Berents Sea

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Since World War II, all that Norway has asked is to live life in her own way. For this reason she rejected membership in the European Common Market. Even though she is a member of NATO, no foreign troops are stationed on her soil. Sudden oil wealth also is within her easy grasp, but this, too, she has rejected, preferring to protect her fishermen and the stability of her economy.

But since she also is a prisoner of her own geography, other events conspire to force her into the forefront of the power struggle between the Communist and the non-Communist world and into the international battle for economic survival.

IN LATE NOVEMBER, Norway and the Soviet Union resumed talks that began in 1970 on the boundaries of the continental shelf reaching out into the Berents Sea from their own shores and from the Spitsbergen island group which Norway also controls under a 1920 treaty signed by the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and others.

Under ordinary circumstances the question should be relatively easy to solve, except for two important considerations — oil and the proximity of an important Soviet military base on the Kola peninsula, which has a common border with Norway.

Beyond the question of oil and strategic considerations, a third element has entered the picture, also with important international implications.

THESE ARE TRADITIONAL fishing grounds for foreign fleets and the Norwegian decision arouses visions of a new codfish war such as occurred between Britain and Iceland in 1972 and 1973.

The ultimate Norwegian aim is to extend control in three stages to waters 200 miles from shore. The first phase involves a ban on trawling in an area covering 5,000 square miles, mainly off the northern coast.

The government holds that cod and other fish in the Berents Sea are threatened with extinction because foreign fleets are concentrating there after being driven away from Iceland, Canada, Latin America and West Africa.

The government hopes to have the first phase of its plan in operation by Christmas.

THE BERENTS SEA and the northern coast of Norway are important strategically to NATO for the opportunity to observe Soviet military movements. To the Russians, the Berents Sea is equally important for the fact that the gulf stream keeps it ice-free and therefore gives the Russian fleet access to the North Atlantic in all seasons.

Acting under the 1920 treaty which gave signatory nations the right to exploit Spitsbergen's mineral resources, both the Russians and the Norwegians mine coal there. The Norwegian community numbers about 1,000 and the Russian, something over 2,000.

Large oil deposits are believed to lie below the Berents Sea, but the Norwegians are in no hurry to exploit them, preferring to wait until boundary questions are settled.

Moscow is believed to prefer a straight line to the North Pole from the Soviet Union's continental boundary. This would give the Russians about 25,000 square miles more than the commonly used midline division which would zig-zag between various Norwegian and Soviet islands.

At 64, That Nice Old Lady Is Really A Private Eye

By JAMES O. CLIFFORD

OAKLAND (UPI) — At 64 years old, Florence Sperbeck is just starting to catch her stride in the rough and tumble world of the private eye.

"Right now I work for other private investigators but I'll be opening up my own firm very soon," said Mrs. Sperbeck, one of 15 women licensed as private detectives in California.

Mrs. Sperbeck decided to become a detective after a long career as a policewoman and investigator for the Contra Costa County sheriff's office.

Since then she has become the first woman ever elected to the board of directors of the California Association of Licensed Investigators. She also has established a reputation as a master of disguise, with a closet full of wigs and change-of-personality costumes she uses in her work.

Two of her favorite covers are posing as a gregarious, overdressed matron or a shawl-wearing little old lady.

"The little old lady is very effective in my work in supermarkets and department stores," she said. "It's surprising what a little old lady can get away with. People don't pay any attention to her."

Mrs. Sperbeck, a grandmother three times over, says much of her work concerns shoplifting, both by customers and employees.

"Most of the stuff that is lifted is taken by workers," she said.

She also tests security at the stores and teaches classes in how to counteract shoplifting.

"I stole half of one store and no one stopped me," she recalled. "I repeated this in several branches of the same company."

Mrs. Sperbeck, who received her license six years ago, also uses a variety of ruses to gather information on cases.

"A lot of people won't talk to you about a neighbor, say, if they know you are an investigator.

"You can get a lot of information out of people by telling them you are a survey taker. The recent political campaign made it easy for me. I just told people I was gathering information for voter statistics."

The antishoplifting campaigns are far less challenging than some of her other cases. She currently is on the track of a beautiful woman a man met just once in a restaurant, a case of love at first sight.

"This guy knew only her first name," she said. "That's all I have to go on except that she was divorced.

"I narrowed it down by flipping through court papers in divorce cases. It was a common first name but surprisingly there weren't that many women with that name who were getting divorced."

Despite the fact that California now has a no-fault divorce law, Mrs. Sperbeck thinks there is still plenty of private eye work in the divorce field.

"We don't kick open bedroom doors anymore and take pictures but we do a lot of finding out about hidden assets," she said.

Under current divorce laws, the husband and wife split their property 50-50. Sometimes attempts are made to conceal items, and other skulduggery.

"I had one case where a store was trying to get a woman to pay for a table she had never seen," the lady detective said. "I finally traced it to the husband's girlfriend."

Mrs. Sperbeck said that being a woman helps in her work.

"I believe, with many others, that a woman is more disarming. People open the door and invite me in who would never do that for a man."

And she doesn't think her age has been a handicap.

"I even know of one woman investigator who is older than I am," she said. "She won't admit it but she is."

Yule Music Prediction Was Off Key

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (AP) — In 1882, a writer named William Hone flatly noted that Christmas carols would soon be an extinct form of music.

Hone's prediction couldn't have been more off key. For in 1974, millions of carolers will again celebrate Christmas with song throughout the world.

Whether they gather around household pianos and organs or flock to community meeting places, they'll be perpetuating a tradition that has been in existence for many centuries, says the American Music Conference, headquartered here.

What was the first Christmas carol?

Some observers say it was "Gloria," the song attributed to the angels when they first saw the Christ child. The formal caroling tradition is said to date back to 128 A.D. when Telephorus, the first Bishop of Rome, decreed that "Gloria" be sung in his church each Christmas day.

Others trace the formal birth of caroling to 13th-century Italy when St. Francis of Assisi invited friends to sing nativity songs around his replica of the original manger scene.

Yet as early as the fifth century in France, holiday celebrants were gathering in village squares to sing carols. Their songs were accompanied by lutes and lyres, two popular instruments of the day. In the 16th century, oboes were used by instrumentalists to accompany caroling minstrels when they entertained nobility during the Christmas season.

The dawning of the Renaissance lifted the blanket of austerity that dominated church music through the Dark Ages. Wanting a more joyous expression for their religious views, people linked their Christmas songs with dance — most commonly the circle dance. However, in some areas of Europe authorities associated circle dances with witchcraft and banned caroling where witchcraft was suspected.

The caroling custom was also considered out of harmony with the times in mid-17th century England. The Puritans there, frowning on the joyous nature of many carols, made it a crime to print or sing carols publicly. After Puritanism waned, caroling made a comeback.

Since many of the early carols weren't written down but were passed along by wandering minstrels and folk singers, they went through so many word and melody changes that their creators probably wouldn't recognize them today.

The words were probably written by an ancient Hebrew. Centuries later, in 1719, the words were paraphrased by Isaac Watts, who wrote some 52 volumes of published carols. The current music to the carol was adapted from George Frederick Handel's "Messiah" in 1741. In 1830, American composer Lowell Mason rewrote the carol as we know it today.

A sizable number of carols and other Christmas music has been written or sung against a backdrop of war, slavery and the settling of America.

When the English besieged the French in 1428 at Orleans, a truce was set for the duration of the Christmas holidays. The English, wanting to be entertained, requested and obtained for a night the services of French minstrels who played Christmas music on trumpets and clarions.

In 1863, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow expressed war-weary sentiments in his poem, "I Heard the Bells on Christmas Day." In the poem, he compared the peace and stillness of a Christmas morning to the war sounds around him.

"Jesus is Born," said to be the first American carol, told the story of the nativity in Indian fashion. It was written around 1645 by French missionary Pere Jean de Brebeuf, who sang it in the Huron tongue for his Indian converts.

A number of carols were written in the southern part of the United States in the 19th century. Two such songs, "Rise up Shepherd and Follow" and "Mary Had A Baby" were actually Negro spirituals composed by slaves.

Whatever their origin or form, Christmas carols have historically been a musical mainstay for people of all races and nationalities who expressed the Yule spirit through song.

Wanted: More Trained Auto Mechanics

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — J. B. Creal, executive vice president of the American Automobile Association, says there is a serious need for more trained automobile mechanics.

Creal also advocated upgrading the mechanic training under sponsorship of the auto industry and federal and state agencies.

"What must be faced," Creal said, "is that the auto is far more complex today than it was a decade ago."

He said to service an entire car, a mechanic would have to be an electrician, glass cutter, welder, air-conditioning technician and radio repairman.

Creal said mechanics must be able to service thousands of different car models dating back 10 to 15 years, with about 400 variations on just the internal combustion engine.

Army Expands Lectures On Geneva Conventions

By WARREN L. NELSON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On the movie screen in an Army base theater, the figure of an officer trods slowly among the enemy wounded, their moans breaking the silence of a scarred battlefield.

"War brings out the best in men," a narrator tells the audience of Army recruits. "Charity, compassion, self-sacrifice."

"Too often it brings out the worst," the narrator says. "Cruelty, brutality, sadism." The pistol barks again, and the head of one wounded youth explodes.

What the recruits are seeing is Training Film 21-4228, "The Geneva Conventions and the Soldier," produced as a direct result of the My Lai massacre to explain in graphic terms a soldier's legal responsibilities in warfare.

The half-hour film is shown throughout the Army, primarily for new enlisted men and officer candidates, as part of expanded indoctrination on the international rules of warfare regarding treatment of civilians, prisoners and the wounded.

Army Secretary Howard H. Callaway said recently he did not believe any one thing could prevent a recurrence of My Lai, the 1968 massacre of Vietnamese civilians by American troops.

"I do not guess any one thing is going to prevent it, but I do feel sure that it won't really happen again," Callaway said. "Our training takes into account what happened at My Lai and takes into account the seriousness of it."

In the past, the Geneva Conventions were outlined for recruits in brief, dull, easily forgotten lectures. Former Lt. William L. Calley Jr., free on bail after serving three years and four months' imprisonment for killing at least 22 villagers at My Lai, apparently never remembered the lecture.

At his court martial, Calley testified he did not realize his captain's order to kill civilians was illegal and, under military law, must be disobeyed.

The training film carries this stiff warning:

"The American government and most other nations take the law of war very seriously," the narrator says. "After World War II many members of the German and Japanese forces were brought to trial on charges of having committed war crimes. The accused often claimed that he was 'just following orders.' But this was ruled no defense.

"Those who had committed acts they knew, or should have known, were wrong were held responsible for their acts. Convicted, they were jailed and, in some cases, executed."

The same fate awaits American military men who violate international law, the audience is reminded.

Officer trainees such as Calley were told the best way to counter an illegal order, and avoid a nasty confrontation with a superior officer, was to ask questions. The same point is made more emphatically in the film, for enlisted men as well as officers.

The film depicts an enlisted man refusing to obey an illegal order to use prisoners to clear a path through a mine field, and the officer refusing to retract his order under questioning.

"No sir, I refuse," the sergeant finally tells his lieutenant. "We'll take it up with the CO (commanding officer) when we get back."

The film also makes clear that sergeants do not always have the final word over the infantrymen.

But the narrator breaks in: "If you buy this, you're in deep trouble."

In another scene, the narrator admonishes troops to "treat each captured person the way you would wish to be treated if you were captured." And the lesson is illustrated with repeated scenes of an American captor who suddenly takes the place of his bound prisoner.

The Army has doubled, from one to two hours, the prescribed training time for indoctrination in rules of warfare for officers and enlisted men. The basic training course must be taught by a two-man team, a lawyer to describe the law and a combat-experienced commander to make practical illustrations. Use of the film and two similar ones is discretionary.

The Army says it is stressing repeatedly the General Order 100, issued in 1863 by President Lincoln, which said: "Men who take up arms against one another in public war . . . do not cease to be moral beings responsible to one another and to God."

Spaceman Shepard Meeting Challenge As A Businessman

By BRUCE E. HICKS

HOUSTON (UPI) — Alan B. Shepard Jr. took a 15-minute rocket ride to American space history in 1961 and then overcame a physical ailment that threatened his chance to walk on the moon 10 years later.

Today, at 51, the former astronaut and naval officer is meeting a new challenge — that of being a private citizen.

Shepard is immersed in a business career far removed from the glamor of the astronaut corps.

"I can't change that identity and I don't want to because I'm proud of what I've done," the former test pilot said. "It will get easier as the years go by to lead a normal life. I hope."

He's as intense in his new job of running a company that builds shopping centers as he was May 5, 1961, when he climbed aboard Freedom 7 for the first of America's 30 journeys into space.

He still has an aloofness developed as insulation from too much fame, and later the dismay of being grounded from spaceflight by inner ear trouble.

Shepard was reared in the Christian Science religion which does not believe in medical surgery. But when the ailment, called Meniere's syndrome, persisted, he was faced with a choice of surgery or remaining grounded.

Using the alias "Victor Poulis," Shepard secretly entered a hospital in 1968 to have a tiny plastic tube implanted that would drain off the fluid causing his problems.

"Obviously, there was a lot of motivation on my part," he said. "Having been allowed the privilege of making one flight, particularly a short one, it kind of whetted by appetite for more."

The decision wasn't that simple because of his religious background, he admitted.

"Well, if you're familiar with the religion you probably know it requires a great deal of inner strength and belief. People are able to express that in varying degrees. For some it's easier than others to make a decision for surgery."

The return to flight status meant the chance to go to the moon. Shepard, Edgar D. Mitchell and Stuart A. Roosa made man's sixth trip to the moon and the third landing on the surface.

At the time of Apollo 14, in 1971, Shepard at age 47 was the oldest American to fly in space. He also may have been the only millionaire to do so.

Despite constant disclaimers by Shepard, many believe he was worth well over six figures.

A native of East Derry, N.H., where his mother still lives, Shepard used the extra time he had while grounded for six years to become an active businessman and investor.

Although being first American in space obviously helped him find business partners, he never used his name for endorsements of products nor anything but charity functions.

"I think it's incorrect for me to use that (his) name in any manner, in any endorsement of anything except myself," he said. "Sure I do charity things as time permits but only those I believe in.

"But as far as the endorsement thing is concerned, I think there is a clearcut issue there."

Shepard, a good golfer who won't reveal his handicap other than to say it's below 15, delighted worldwide audiences at the end of his second lunar surface walk on Apollo 14 by hitting two golfballs in the one-sixth gravity of the moon.

He avoided any commercialism by never revealing what brand of golf balls he used.

"I've refused to tell anybody, even my wife, the name of the golf balls," he said. "The golf club is now in the U.S. Geological Survey Museum."

Shepard retired Aug. 1 from NASA and as an admiral in the Navy.

Shepard's wife, Louise, still drives to the Johnson Space Center area regularly because she and several other astronauts' wives run a small flower shop.

Giants Played Small Oil Find Roles

By JERRY R. WILSON

TULSA (UPI) — The giants of the oil industry play only minor roles in the discovery and recovery of America's domestic oil.

The bulk of the work, more than 75 per cent, is now and has always been done by independents like E. A. Smith, who brought in his first two wells in 1928. Smith, now 79, is board chairman of Service Drilling Co. of Tulsa, and still an independent after 61 years in the industry.

Statistically, the independent is in an impossible business. The odds are 50-to-1 against him.

On the average, one of every 50 wells drilled produces enough oil to make it worthwhile, and 40 of those drilled are dry holes. It would take an independent more than three years and $30 million to do all that before he sold a drop of oil.

"I don't know of any independent who could stand a load like that, but those are the figures," Smith says. "What we try to do is get down to the minimum of exploratory wells to get a pool. The average is so high because it's a hazardous business and so many don't succeed."

The number of active independents is only 10 per cent of what it was 20 years ago. Smith sees even those few being forced out by congressional threats to the oil depletion allowance and rollback of domestic prices, already considerably below what foreign producers charge, because of "windfall profits."

"You only earn about an 8 per cent return on your investment, so where's the windfall profit?" Smith says. "You can get 11 per cent on certificates of deposit and have no risk — but if everybody did that we'd all be hungry, wouldn't we?"

The depletion allowance, which exempts a percentage of the net profit from taxation, has been the lifeblood of the independent, Smith says, enabling him to encourage investments in his operations.

"If it hadn't been for the depletion allowance, a lot of independents would never have started," he says. "Elimination of the depletion allowance would make this industry go flat and the cost would go up to the consumers.

"The independent just couldn't stay. That would leave only the majors, which is what everybody is complaining about in the first place. The majors can't drill as cheaply as we can, so the price of oil would go right on up."

$1.4 Billion In Education Aid Asked

SACRAMENTO (AP) — The state board of education asked yesterday for $1.4 billion more a year in state money by 1980 to improve public schools, fund special education programs and supplement a proposed statewide property tax.

The proposal could require a substantial tax increase if it took effect this year.

"I realize the economy is in uncertain shape, but I would hope the legislature would give some priority to education," said state schools chief Wilson Riles, whose proposal the board approved unanimously.

The $1.4 billion figure, which would raise total spending on grades kindergarten through 12 in California to $7 billion a year, doesn't include money to offset inflation.

If inflation continues at current levels, officials said, the state may have to double the $1.4 billion by 1980 to meet inflation needs.

The programs paid for by the funding increase would include:

Early childhood education with individually paced instruction; career education; aid to handicapped, low-income and bilingual students, and money to bring the state's poorer districts up to a so-called quality level.

Key legislators say such a proposal has little chance for passage in its present form.

Sen. Albert Rodda, D-Sacramento, who has promised to sponsor the bill in the Senate, has said he is "very pessimistic" about passage of a statewide property tax.

Assemblyman John Foran, D-San Francisco, who heads the Assembly Ways and Means Committee, said yesterday he thought the legislature might approve $100 million this year in new state aid for schools.

The board is asking for $620 million this year.

"I don't know who we would take away from to give to education," Foran said in an interview. "We've got problems from the elderly, Medi-Cal, and everything else."

Foran noted Gov.-elect Edmund G. Brown Jr. has promised not to raise taxes in his first year. The assemblyman also stated his own opposition to a statewide property tax, which would hurt San Francisco.

Such a tax would replace local property taxes with a uniform statewide levey of $4 per $100 assessed valuation by 1980. The money would be pooled and redistributed equally.

It aims at complying with court decisions saying poor districts are discriminated against by the present system of school finance based on local property taxes.

The board of education, winding up a two-day meeting, also voted to ask the legislature to increase from $7 to $17 per student the money schools get from the state to buy textbooks and other learning aids.

Court Rules On Insurance In Dissolution

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Supreme Court ruled that in a marriage dissolution the holder of a GI life insurance policy paid for with community funds cannot be required to name the ex-spouse as beneficiary.

Nor, said the court, can the person be made to cash the National Service Life Insurance policy and split the proceeds with the ex-spouse.

However, the unanimous decision said a trial judge could award the ex-spouse an equivalent amount out of other community property.

A U.S. Supreme Court decision has held that the law gives the serviceman buying such a policy the absolute right to choose the beneficiary.

But the state court interpreted that right as allowing a trial court to award one-half the cash value of the policy to the wife, payable out of assets that otherwise would go to the husband.

It also said the payment may be made over a period of time if there isn't enough community property at the time of dissolution.

Trinity Salmon Run Hampered

REDDING (AP) — Sedimentation, which all but eliminated the king salmon run on the main stem of the Trinity River, has also intruded on the south fork of the river, state biologists say.

The salmon count, which was 11,000 fish 10 years ago on the south fork, was only 30 this year, according to a state Department of Fish and Game report issues this week.

The sediment fills the holding holes in the bottom of the river where the salmon rest on their runs. Main fork sedimentation is blamed on the Trinity Dam, but south fork sedimentation is blamed on road construction and logging.

Another Murder In San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — A resident of the San Francisco Tenderloin district was shot to death yesterday, becoming the 120th homicide in the city this year.

The slaying of Archie Clayborne, 30, pushed the San Francisco murder rate one past the previous yearly high of 125 in 1968.

SAN RAFAEL, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 14, 1974

Ed Nickel Prefers Working With His Hands And Burl

With two years of business administration studies behind him at College of Marin, young Ed Nickel seemed headed for a career in the world of commerce.

But it was at that point that he decided: "I wanted to make my living working with my hands."

So Nickel went to work for Kent Manufacturing, producing school cabinets in San Rafael's Northgate area.

"I WAS LOW MAN on the totem pole, and it was a pretty menial job," admits Nickel.

There was an interruption in 1970 when he went to Alaska as a commercial salmon fisherman. But when he returned late that year to California, it was to begin the career he is still pursuing — the making of tables from redwood burl.

A FRIEND, FORMER Marinite Warren Kirby, was living in Mendocino County and making his living collecting and cutting burl.

On a visit, Nickel's interest was sparked by Kirby's store of redwood burl.

"I could see the special beauty of the burl, and I could picture its possibilities," he says.

"AT THAT TIME," says Nickel, "there were less than a dozen craftsmen in the state turning out redwood burl tables and other products. Now there must be at least 60."

Periodically Nickel travels to Mendocino County and joins Kirby in a burl "round-up." With Forestry Service permits, the two are authorized to collect felled burl left behind by loggers. The two then split their find. Nickel might sell some of his share. But most of it he will keep for his own use.

Nickel, who is single, has set up a shop in the basement of his Lagunitas home.

"I DON'T HAVE a whole lot of expensive or heavy power equipment," he says. "You don't need it. You can do the job with a few small power and hand tools."

And since then he had produced nearly 150 burl tables without a failure, as well as some hanging planters fashioned from burl and driftwood.

"THE ROOT BURL has less sap in it than the tree stump burl," he explains, "and so it is easier to finish." (Burl is defined by the dictionary as "a large, excrescence formed on the trunks and roots of trees" — a description that hardly does it justice).

Generally redwood root sections provide the legs for his tables, although he sometimes uses lumber.

"Redwood root has a real organic look that I, and apparently a great many other people, like," he says.

HE HAS THREE different finishes he uses on his tables. Danish oil or a "finish feed" of beeswax and turpentine give a more natural look. Marine varnish creates a more polished effect.

"Every piece of redwood burl is different, and thus every table is original," says Ed Nickel of Lagunitas. "Nature never turns out two pieces of burl that are exactly alike. With all those grains and shades of color, it couldn't."

"Every piece of redwood burl is different, and thus every table is original," he says. "Nature never turns out two pieces of burl that are exactly alike. With all those grains and shades of color, it couldn't."

Nickel keeps a stock of finished tables at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Nickel, of 8 Sussex Court, Terra Linda, where they are available for inspection and sale.

HE ALSO HAS a couple of tables on display at the Novato Art Center in Del Prado Square, Novato.

"Most of my sales are made through word of mouth," he says. "Some one has bought or has seen a table, and they like it and tell their friends about it." It is a satisfying way to make a sale.

For the most part Nickel has made coffee or cocktail tables, although he has also turned out a few higher dining room tables.

A TABLE REPRESENTS from 25 to 40 hours of labor, "depending on how smooth a cut I get on the burl (which determines the sanding time), how well it fits together and how easily it takes the

Harald J. Taub, Marin's Man From Prevention

By DON KEOWN

Lifelong and longtime Marin residents don't always appreciate their good fortune from the environmental standpoint, according to more recent Marinite Harald J. Taub.

Marinites sometimes fret about the soiling of their Bay, about the scraping of their hilltops, about the pollution of their air, and about congestion and noise from freeways and streets.

But, says Taub, for anyone coming to the Bay Area from other regions, particularly the East, Marin remains a relatively unspoiled paradise.

TAUB IS PARTICULARLY conscious of pollution and its inroads. And for good reason.

From Jan. 2, 1962, until August of this year, Taub was the executive editor of the Pennsylvania-based, internationally-distributed health magazine, Prevention. That was a period that saw the monthly publication's circulation zoom from 267,000 to 1,300,000 copies.

SAYS DR. MARSHALL Mandell, medical director of the New England Foundation for Allergic and Environmental Diseases, in his introduction to Taub's book:

"I think it quite remarkable that anyone should have been able to compile in a single volume the many ways that scientific research has thus far found by which we, as individuals, can keep some of the worst and most dangerous pollutants from attacking us."

Taub with wife Beverley, and daughters Alison, 11, and Hilary, 6, are now residents of Belvedere.

AND TAUB'S CONCERN with environmental conditions played a major role in the decision to move West from Pennsylvania, even at the expense of his relinquishing his position with Prevention.

"I continue to write for the magazine, and to assign articles to West Coast writers and supervise their work," he explains.

HARALD J. TAUB does not fit the popular concept of the lean, trim, fiercely dedicated, actively prosletyzing, spartan living "health nut."

He is a portly 56-year-old, bearded and graying, with a strong sense of humor about himself — and about his work, while in no way denigrating its importance.

He prefers moderation to rigidity.

For instance, despite the many articles on the superiority of natural or organic foods that have appeared in the pages of Prevention through the years, the Taubs now do their grocery shopping at a supermarket.

"THERE JUST ISN'T a health food store conveniently located for us," he explains.

"It's a remarkable world we live in. Technicians, scientists, business leaders have made it so. Thanks to their special skills and frequent genius our lives are far easier than those of our fathers and grandfathers. Yet they are also more perilous. For we can also thank our benefactors for many of our assorted woes." — Harald J. Taub in "Keeping Healthy in a Polluted World."

And such is the bounty of California that the Taubs remain bedazzled by the excellence of the produce from which they can make their selections.

"You people out here just don't know how bad food can be," Taub says. "For instance, in the East, it is unheard of to be able to buy a truly ripe tomato.

"And in the short time we have been out here I have eaten more good melons than I had eaten in all my previous years." All purchased at the supermarket.

ONE PIECE OF advice that Taub does emphasize: Wash thoroughly those fruits and vegetables whose skins are eaten.

In the same mood, Taub says: "I would much prefer to drink non-fluoridated water. But I don't really think that fluoridation is a disaster."

One habit of his that Taub most emphatically does not recommend to others is cigarette smoking.

A heavy smoker, he says: "I started at age 16, and I'm so hooked now that I don't know how to stop, although I've tried.

"ANYONE WHO CAN manage not to smoke — and does smoke — is crazy."

Taub was born in New York and studied mathematics at the University of Pennsylvania. But while at the university he also began writing — and selling to Esquire magazine — some short stories.

"So I was faced with the choice between becoming a math teacher or a writer," he says. "I chose the latter, and I don't regret my decision."

Out of college in 1938, he went to work for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer as a playscript reader, "which paid me a big $18 a week — but lots of people were getting less than that then."

THERE FOLLOWED World War II military service as a technical sergeant in Washington, D.C.

Released from service, Taub went to work for a press agentry firm serving

The Christmas Bulbs Are Glowing Again

By VIVIAN BROWN

As their absence last year reminded many people, Christmas tree lights may provide a psychological lift for the spirit as well as a powerful display.

Without the customary glow, some people felt as if Yuletide had passed them by.

Now more people are aware that the wise use of such lights will have little effect on the energy consumed, and lighting companies are trying to spread the word to reassure merrymakers.

"YOU COULD PUT five 5-watt midget light sets on a tree and consume less wattage than you would burning a 100-watt bulb," insists Gary Mason, a lighting expert for General Electric.

"What's more, twinkling lights use only half as much electricity as standard bulbs, something people often overlook," he maintains.

Clear bulbs provide more brightness and are very popular in recent years, he points out, but you do not need many more colored bulbs to provide a good display, anyway, and that doesn't really affec the wattage.

IN CHOOSING LIGHTS for a tree, he suggests using a formula which provides festive illumination without burdening the tree.

Three times the height of the tree in feet times the width equals the number of standard bulbs that will make a nice display, he says. Multiply the number by two to get the ideal number of midget lights. Look for light strings that approximate the number.

For example, a tree that is three feet high and three feet wide might use 27 standard lights or 54 midget lights.

ROUGHLY A GUIDE for standard lights might be: a four-foot tree, 35; a five-foot tree, 60; a six-foot tree, 80; a seven-foot tree, 105.

If the tree is very full you may want to add to that number.

"It is even possible to save on electricity during the holidays by turning out other lights in the room when the tree lights are on," Mason contends. "We estimate that Christmas home lighting will be only one-30th of one per cent of the total home electricity used."

He suggests observing the government energy office time limitation on lights — a 10:30 curfew.

SOME PEOPLE MAY prefer lighting mantel decorations or running a rope of greens across the dining table or up the stair banister intertwined with lights.

If there are no bushes or trees near the house outdoors, one may make a tree form with furring strips that may be covered with lights and placed against the house for a pretty effect. A small tree would not require too many lights.

IF YOU WANT PHOTOGRAPH OF LIGHTING

Adjustable cameras are ideal for photographing lighting effects, including holiday bulbs. However, owners of simple, non-adjustable cameras can make satisfying snapshots by standing at least 20 feet from the display and using flash.

Indoor tree lights: Put camera on something solid, preferably a tripod, and expose for two to ten seconds at F11.

Exterior shots: Wait for a calm night, preferably when there is snow or water on the ground to give colorful reflections. Exposures run from 10 to 30 seconds at F11 depending on brightness of the lighting.

For added peace of mind, bracket your exposures like a pro. Use your best "guessimate," then make two more shots, one slightly over and one just under-exposed.

Tree lights that are cool to the touch may be used on plastic trees without fear of needles melting, it is advised. Amost 50 per cent of the trees used in 1974 may well be of the artificial variety, one major maker estimates.

AS LIVE TREES become more expensive and artificial trees are made to look more like live trees, more acceptance for them is being gained in traditional households.

This year branch needles have been made an inch longer providing an even fuller forest look, points out Donald Warning, an executive of American Tree and Wreath, who emphasized that the stronger branches of steel wire can support heavier ornaments. In addition to the long-range economy factor, many people put up the Christmas tree early for a longer Yuletide season, and this may be another reason artificial trees are becoming acceptable even in traditional households.

There is less mess wehn the tree is dismantled, another plus.

THEIR BEST-SELLING tree is six and a half feet with seven to 10 sections that can be assembled, they insist, in less than 10 minutes.

Minitrees, some equipped with lights, are ideal for the invalid's bedside table or for use on mantels or dinner tables, and these, too, use a small amount of electricity.

THE STEREO SCENE

New Concert Records For Holiday Season

By WILBUR G. LANDREY

This is the peak time of the year for concert and operatic record releases, the reason being, of course, Christmas.

I'll try to mention a few of the more interesting releases, not previously noted:

One of the musical events of the season has been the production by the Metropolitan Opera of Benjamin Britten's "Death in Venice." It is no accident that we have the world premiere recording from London Records at the same time, with the original cast (OSA-13109 — three records).

"Death in Venice," with libretto by Myfanwy Piper, is an adaptation of the novelette by Thomas Mann about the descent of a famous author towards homosexuality and death, the victory of Dionysus over Apollo.

LIKE OTHER BRITTEN operas, it was written for tenor Peter Pears who sings the lead role. Six of the other parts are sung by John Shirley-Quirk. They also sang these parts in both the original Aldeburgh Festival Production in 1973 and at the Met.

To begin with opera, there are some other recent noteworthy releases.

There is a new recording of "Cosi Fan Tutti," Mozart's wonderful comedy, directed by Sir George Solti at the head of the London Philharmonic and a fine cast including Pilar Lorengar, Teresa Berganza, Ryland Davies, Tom Kraus, Gabriel Bacquier and June Berbie (OSA-1442-four records). It is excellent.

THERE IS ALSO a fine new version of Verdi's "Aida" from Angel (SCLX-3815 — three records) starring Monserrat Caballe, Placido Dominso, Fiorenza Cossotto and Nicolai Ghiaurov. It is directed by Ricardo Muti at the head of the New Philharmonia Orchestra and the Covent Garden Chorus.

RCA is bringing back 12 of its mono opera recordings from the early 1950's. "Il Trovatore (AVM 2-0699) is one of the first with the wonderful voice of Zinka Milanov as Leonora, and Jussi Bjoerling, Leonard Warren and Fedora Barbieri.

Two others already out are "Rigoletto" (AVM 2-0698) with Warren, Erna Berger and Jan Pierce, and "Oarmen" (AVM 3-0670) with Rise Stevens, Licia Albanese, Pierce and Robert Merrill.

CHRISTMAS SHOPPING

Safety Is Watchword In Choosing Toys

For many families this year, the Christmas toy budget is unavoidably tighter than Scrooge's fiscal policy.

Inflation, recession and stagflation have all ganged up to put a little "dickens" in everybody's holiday activities.

Hard-pressed Santa substitutes with a lot on their minds but little in their pockets are discovering top shopping isn't much play this season. What to buy? Even fun and games don't come cheap anymore.

The National Safety Council, involved in the safety of toys since 1925 — throughout the Depression and up to today's current money pinch — has some ideas to "make your dollar worth more in '74."

WHAT DOES THE safety council consider to be a good toy?

The answer for years has been and remains: "A good toy is safe, durable, made of quality materials, offers the child a variety of play possibilities and suits the child's age, abilities and interests."

Comments NSC's Home Department technical adviser Hans Grigo: "Nowhere in that definition are the words expensive or elaborate."

Grigo asks parents to keep in mind that government reports show that an estimated 150,000 children were treated for toy-related injuries in hospital emergency rooms last year. "Safety is a bargain when you consider the physical, emotional and financial costs of these accidents."

OTHER "SAFETY IS a bargain" toy-tips from Grigo:

Avoid the Christmas morning ignore-the-toy-and-play-with-the-box syndrome. Check out the information on the package before you buy the toy. Most toys now have age group suggestions on the box. A toy that is too young for the child is a waste of money since most children would rather "die" than get caught playing with a "baby" toy. A toy that is geared older than the recipient may be too much for him to handle and he may injure himself trying.

What you see is what you get. Don't let the package tell the whole story for you. Don't be afraid to ask for a sample of the product you can handle and inspect. It's your money! Not only will this practice save you from deceptive packaging (a toy made to look bigger or of great quantity through packaging), but from an unsafe item as well. Once a toy is in your hands, you can check it for sharp points, removable spikes or pins, rough or unfinished surfaces, easily broken parts, shoddy construction, features that can catch fingers or loose parts that can be swallowed.

A talk-in around the tree. Learn how to use the toy yourself and take time Christmas morning to show your child how to use it properly . . . and safely. Correct use of the toy will make it last longer. An abused, broken toy can be dangerous.

The doctor will see you now. This December it might be a good idea to give your child's old toys a "physical exam." A "fix-up what you have attitude" isn't such a bad idea in these times. A new coat of non-toxic paint, a wheel firmed on its axle, the rips in dolly's dress sewn up, a good cleaning and sprucing up here and there may be just what's needed to give the "oldies but goodies" a new lease on life. Those items that can't be safely repaired should be tossed.

GOOD TOYS for children should be safe as well as fun, says the National Safety Council. One tip: The parent should study the directions on the box, then go over them carefully with the child.

California Is Growing More Trees

Although California, throughout the years, has been predominantly an importer of Christmas trees, all indications are that in the not-too-distant future, it may well have a majority of home-grown Christmas trees on its market. Steadily, the imports have been diminishing and the locally cultivated, fresh and fragrant California Yuletide tree has been gaining.

Increased local production and diminishing imports have greatly omcreased the California Christmas tree farmer's slice of the Christmas-tree-market pie. In 1968 only one out of every four Christmas trees sold was grown in the state of California, as compared to last year's figure of better than one out of every three.

From north to south, all throughout the state, Christmas tree plantations annually invite the Christmas tree shopper to come and stroll through the splendid rows of statuesque everygreens, select his favorite species and, in the tradition of generations gone by, cut it down himself.

College Of Marin's Jim Dunn May Be About To Move On To New Challenges In Theater

By PAUL W. CANE

From tiny productions of "Romeo and Juliet" in an 85-seat makeshift theater to the mammoth showing of "Oedipus the King" — with a cast and staff alone numbering 85 — only weeks ago in a modern, giant theater.

From a one-man department for a school of 300 to a four-man drama staff for the 7,000 students the college has today.

JIM DUNN BUILT the College of Marin drama program to what he thinks is "the best community college theater program in Northern California." Now — 10 years after founding it — Dunn might be leaving it.

Because, at 41, he's come to a time in his life — the "male menopause," he calls it — where he's looking for something in his work that he's not sure he finds at College of Marin anymore.

"People say, 'There's Jim Dunn with his glamorous drama and directing career,'" he said. "But that's not the real Jim Dunn, with pressures and conflicts that I'm just beginning to notice.

"I'VE DONE A lot, but I don't have a complacent feeling. I have a very turbulent feeling. I have about 25 years of productivity left, and I want to end that time with some kind of peace of mind; to know who I am and to accept who I am by the time I go out. I don't know if that can be done — but I have to find out," he said.

Dunn isn't sure where his quest for that emotional peace will lead. Professional theater direction, perhaps. Maybe he'll find that his calling is to remain at College of Marin after all.

HE'S CERTAIN OF one thing, though: When the change in his job comes — if there is to be one — it will not be the result of a long, anguished debate within himself.

Because throughout his life, his big breaks have come unexpectedly and his decision about them have been made on the spur of the moment.

James C. Dunn (a name, incidentally, that he does not use; he will say, "Don't call me that. I'm just Jim Dunn.") was born in Ross in 1933, and was reared in Marin County.

HE GRADUATED from San Rafael High School, and it was there that he got his initial exposure to the theater — a part in a student play his senior year.

But drama then was hardly his chosen vocation, and indeed, he really had no chosen vocation. A mediocre student with no idea of what he wanted to do with his life, Dunn postponed his decision for two years by joining the Marines.

"I was confused, and those two years gave me insight," he recalled. "If I had started college right out of high school, I never would have finished, but this interlude gave me time to think."

STATIONED "FROM place to place doing very uninteresting kinds of things," Dunn did recall one incident during his military service that directly affected his career.

"Someone gave me a copy of the book, 'Mr. Roberts,' and I read and liked it. Then I picked up the paper once while stationed at Camp Pendleton and I saw it was playing in Los Angeles. So I went to L.A. on a weekend pass to see the play, and I was just knocked out by it — it was so fantastic — and right then I knew that's what I wanted to do with my life."

Out of the service, Dunn returned to the county to attend College of Marin. Although a theater arts major, Dunn was also involved in many other activities.

"I LITERALLY DID everything back then. I was student body president, a member of the football team, a member of the Ross Valley Players. I tried to explore everything I could. I'm not sure how well I did it all, but I was into everything," he recalled.

Gradually, his other activities faded into the background, and more and more of his time was occupied with dramatics.

"I was exploring, probing, poking. I'd eliminate the things that didn't turn out too well," he said. "Drama became more and more important to me, and by the time I transferred to San Jose State, I was totally into the theater."

HIS ENERGIES IN the field, however, became more and more channelled into directing plays rather than performing them.

"By the time I was a senior, I found that my potential as an actor was kind of limited," he said with a smile. "So I directed a play a friend wrote for a student drama competition. That's how I got into direction."

After graduation, he acquired a teaching credential, and went to work teaching speech and drama to high school students in the South Bay. In addition, he was director of the San Jose Theater Guild, a community theater group.

PUT TOGETHER, it was a busy schedule for Dunn.

"When you're a director for one of those community theater groups, you do everything — make costumes, hang lights, even hand out programs. Those three years were tough on me, but I learned my craft," he noted.

It was 1964. Dunn was looking around for a college job, a place where he could teach, as well as direct. That's when a phone call came from Edwin A. Kadogan, head of the fine arts division at College of Marin.

"WE'RE GOING TO start a drama department here. Are you interested in joining us?" Kadogan said.

Dunn jumped at the chance, and he's been there ever since.

It was this kind of freakish unplanned job offer that has marked his life, Dunn said. "Most jobs I've just gotten by chance; whenever I have set my sights on something, I haven't got it."

THE COLLEGE OF Marin — and a lot of other things — are different now, 10 years later.

Harlan Hall, a tiny room with some closets-turned-dressing rooms, was the first theater.

"One of our first plays was such a success we couldn't seat all the people who wanted tickets," he recollected. "So we opened up all the big side windows and let people watch from the trees through the windows for free!"

Now, there's a fine new 600-seat theater in the fine arts building, equipped with "everything a theater could possibly have," Dunn said.

AND THE STAFF is different. From a few scattered theater classes with no formal department, the drama department has grown to a full-time faculty of four, with a retinue of part-time teachers and a secretary.

And the people have changed. A flood of top drama prospects — all Marin County residents — have been trained by Dunn for professional work.

A woman, Kathleen Quinlan, has done major guest star roles in television shows like "Mannix," "Lucas Tanner" and "Ironside."

ANOTHER MAN, David Dukes, has acted for the American Conservatory Theater (ACT) in San Francisco, and has a leading role in a major movie now under production.

Over 25 of Dunn's students have gone on to major professional training schools across the country.

Another thing that has changed is the availability of money. Tight budgets in recent years have caused restricted drama budgets, and if that continues, the program will suffer and degenerate into mediocrity, Dunn believes.

"ART AND DOLLARS have never, never, mixed. We have an incredibly outstanding program, but we have to spend money on it or we'll foster mediocrity. That's something I can't abide," he said.

And Jim Dunn has changed, too. And is changing.

And he's not certain he will remain at College of Marin much longer, although he's refused offers to leave in the past.

"I COULD GIVE all sorts of fine, idealistic reasons why I've stayed, but I guess the main one is that Marin has been an easy, secure, beautiful place to work. The county's an easy place to be lulled and patted — it's easy to be seduced by it all. The people I've worked with have been fantastic, and the residents of Marin very supporting. All this, and my colleagues are so fine — it's hard to say, 'Gee, I think I'll go someplace else.'"

So whither Jim Dunn?

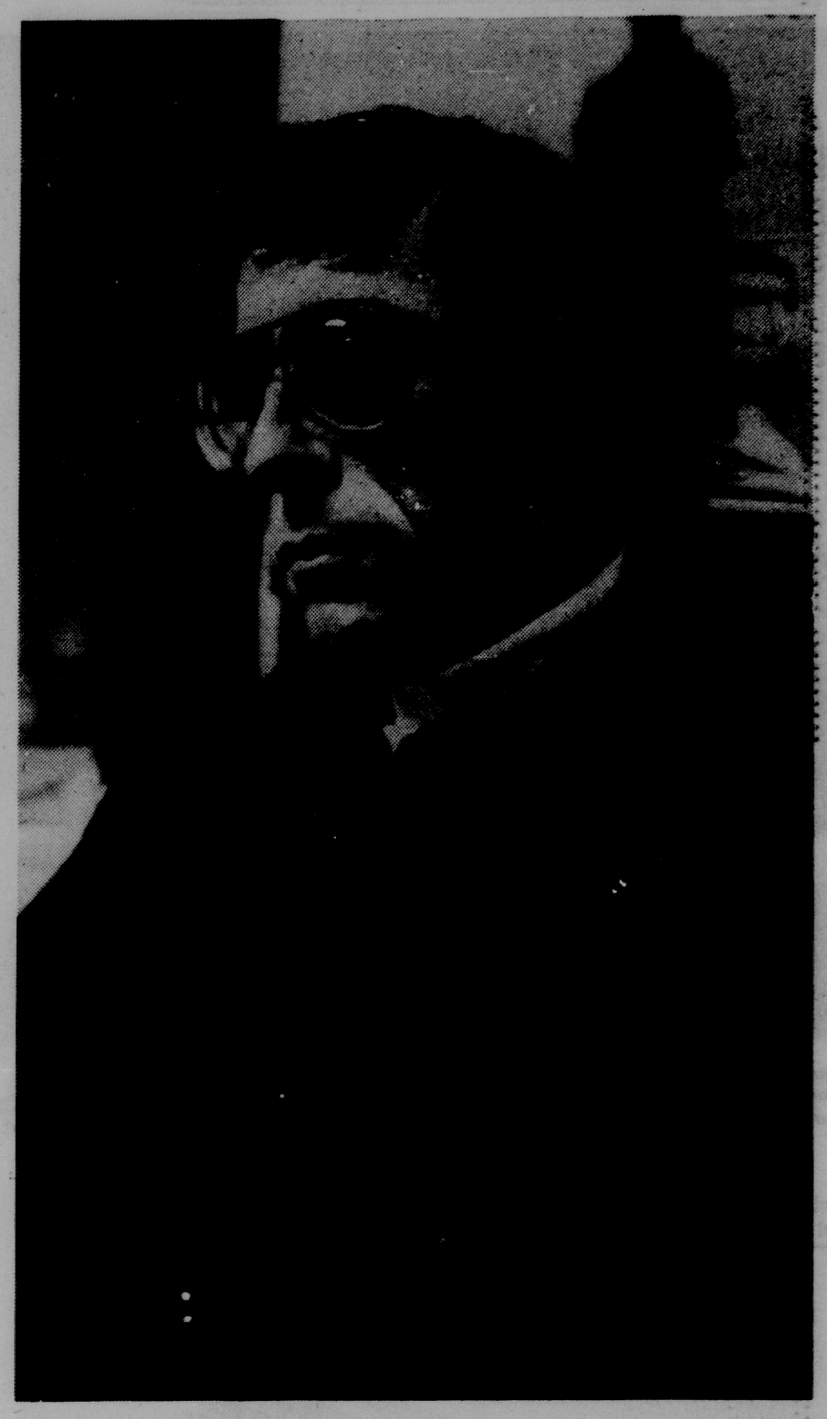
Now, he's a man on the run — director of ACT's production of "Horatio," and director of the college production of "Much Ado About Nothing," one in a series of classics being performed this year.

HE'S ALSO ARTISTIC director for the drama or theater arts department.

But something's missing.

"My head's always full of ideas for productions, but I've done all that now. You have to worry when all this security sets in on you.

"I might need to move on soon — to what, I don't know. But I can't stand the mediocrity that might come from too much security."



JIM DUNN of the College of Marin's department of theater arts has enjoyed his 10-year stay at Kentfield, "an easy, secure, beautiful place to work." But now he's thinking about moving on — "to what, I don't know. But I can't stand the mediocrity that might come from too much security. I would rather go down to abysmal defeat in daring something bold than to settle for something safe and mediocre."

SIGHTS AND SOUNDS OF THE SEASONS: From A Bike Seat

By ELIZABETH TERWILLIGER

Bicycling with one's family is such fun. The family is together, and yet, each one has a feeling of freedom and joy, and the physical exercise makes everyone just sort of glow all over.

To say "hello," or "hi," or "good morning" to a passing bicyclist or jogger or stroller brings a smile to that person's face. And his response is interesting to listen for and is usually different.

Good bicycle manners are important. Remember a bicycle is like an automobile, and before you ride, you must know the rules. Before your family goes on the bike path or along the streets, repeat the rules, so no one will get hurt.

RIDE ONLY ON the right hand side of the street or path. Ring your bell before you pass anyone, so you won't startle him, and cause him to swerve. If you don't have a bell, be sure to call out "passing on your left!" If you have to stop, do it just off the side of the path so no one will crash into you.

If you are riding on a street, you may go two-by-two if no car is coming, but, if a car comes, call out, "single file" or "car coming" and everyone follow single file along the edge of the road. Be sure to stop at the stop signs. Give a left hand turn signal, if you are going to turn left. Before crossing any street, be sure to look both ways. Wait until it is safe.

Riding on Corte Madera Creek bikepath right now is exciting as there is so much to see. The Mallard Ducks have come to stay. Watch for the green heads of the males, and see if you can see the beautiful little black curled tail feather just at the base of his tail. He is the only duck to have this. The bright orange of his feet and legs are a brilliant contrast to his soft beige shirt and rich brown scarf. Have you seen the bright handkerchief he keeps in his hip pocket?

THE TINY RUDDY Duck has also arrived for the winter. You can quickly spot the male because he has a white patch on each cheek like a little snowball. No other duck has this. He has a perky short tail that he sports, except when he has just popped up from a dive, and it's all wet. A good shake puts it right up again like a little flag.

Mrs. Ruddy is brown all over. And what is exciting is that in the Spring, Mr. Ruddy's bill turns the most magnificent blue, his feathers a reddish brown. He bobs his head rapidly as much as to say, "Look at me, am I not elegant?" And then he stretches out his neck and lets out a most wonderful prolonged hiss!

Canvasback ducks are in groups, and are so named because of their white canvas-like coat. They are the only ducks that are white all the way around their middle.

Put your hand on your forehead and make a straight line down to the tip of your nose. Only the Canvasback has this profile. Even if you can't see his color, his head to bill tip line identifies him.

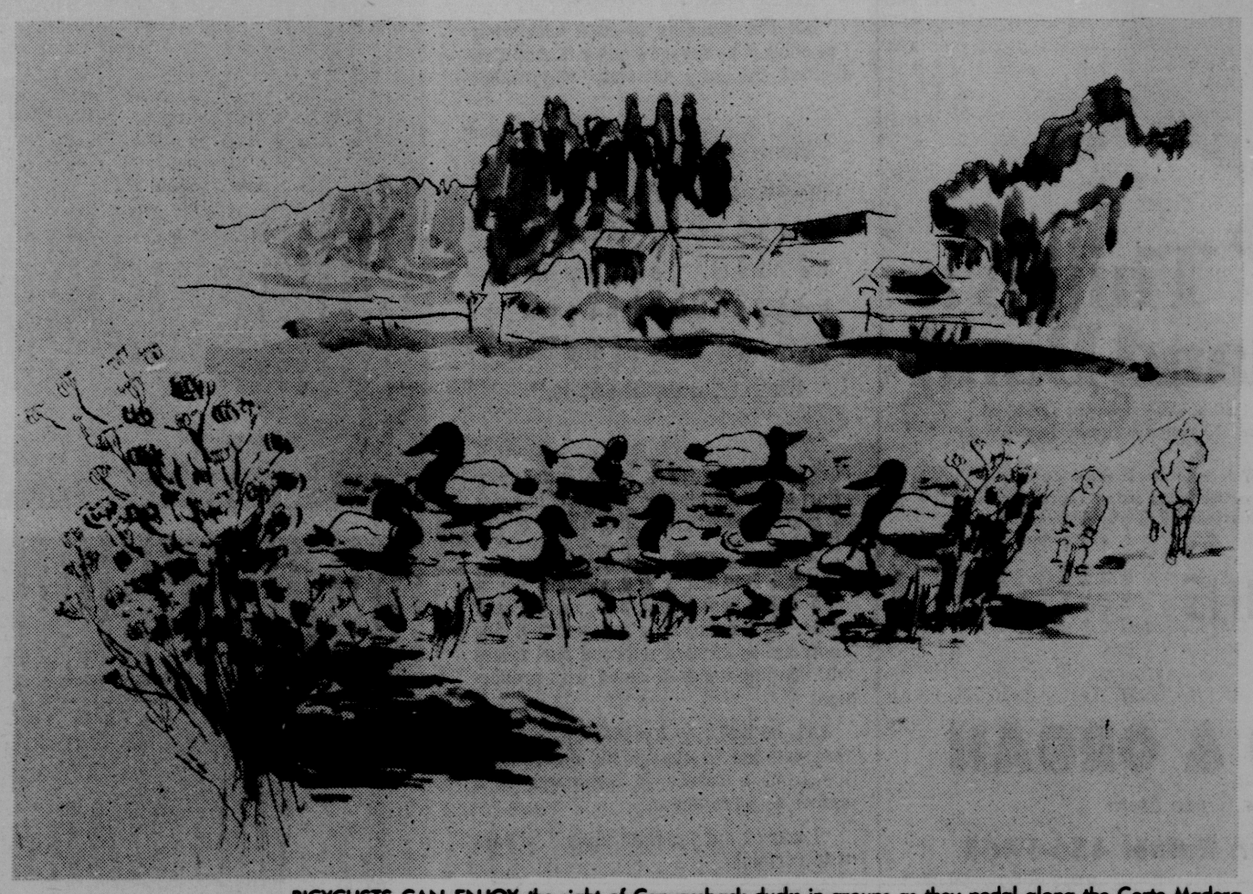
One interesting observation is that opposite the sanitary facility on the Tiburon bike path, where clean treated effluent flows into the gbay, you can stand and watch the Canvasback ducks sip the fresh water and preen themselves.



BICYCLISTS CAN ENJOY the sight of Canvassback ducks in groups as they pedal along the Corte Madera Creek Bikepath or Tiburon Bikepaths, or other members of the always entertaining duck family.

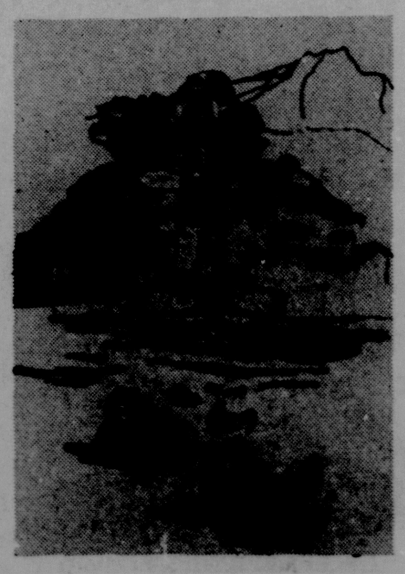
In 1936, San Francisco was the first city in the United States to treat its waste and reuse it for park purposes. In the middle of Golden Gate Park is a treatment plant, and all the liquid is treated, then aerated by flowing over man-made waterfall structures, and then put into lakes. Excess liquid is used for watering the park. Solid waste is also treated and used for plant fertilizer.

Marin County is just throwing away this valuable commodity. There should be a pond adjacent to every treatment plant, so that ducks could have a resting place and not be constantly moved by the tide.

THE EFFLUENT, which is what the liquid waste water is called, could water golf courses, the cemetery, the parks and many other uses.



Thousands of people enjoy feeding the ducks on the ponds in Golden Gate Park. In each pond, except one, is an island on which ducks may rest and be fairly safe from dogs and raccoons. The island in the Civic Center should be separated, and be an island, and willows and cattails and tules allowed to grow, so ducks may rest safely.

Feeding ducks is joy for all ages. Since 1885, Lake Merritt has been doing this. They have an island for their ducks. We need islands and ponds in each community for ducks and for the enjoyment of people. Passive recreation is as important as active recreation.

As you pedal or walk along the creek where it runs through the College of Marin campus, watch the leaves floating and drifting through the air and dropping into the stream. They resemble miniature boats floating away to adventure.

AND WHEN A gaily painted leaf seems to continue floating sideways, and there is no wind, it turns out to be a Monarch butterfly on his way to Muir Beach, to spend the winter in the pine trees, just out of the direct wind path from the ocean. He knows the sun shines along our beaches this time of year.

When the Monarch butterfly is cold and tired he rests on a leaf with his wings folded in back of him. Then, one sees only light brown and black, resembling a dead leaf. When the sun comes out, the Monarch is warmed and then the orange color interlaced with black is seen. Jim Kean's beautiful picture of Monarchs' feeding on the Tower of Jewels, Nov. 5, 1974, on the front page of the Independent-Journal, was an excellent example of this.

If you ever find a Monarch on the ground, and storms and freezing weather cause them to drop, open up the wings. On each of the lower two wings look for a black dot along one of the veins. Then you will know you are holding a male.

If ever you find a Monarch with a tiny white tag on its upper wing, read what it says. One side will have a number, and the other will say "University of Toronto, Zoology." Send this tag to that address and you will receive an answer telling you who tagged it, where, and when, and how far that butterfly flew. This university is making a study of the Monarchs.

AS YOU CONTINUE along the path toward Ross, listen for a splashing in the creek. Look into the ruffled water. Carp, black ones, are busily feeding. They are six to 15 inches long. They twist, turn, and race away. Then, they rush back. As far as the tide reaches, they move.

And as you reach the end of the path, creek willows that say, "I like wet feet" will be dropping their pointed narrow leaves and reaching their branches like many slender curved golden finger to the sky. Run your hand along the stems and feel the waxy covers encasing next year's buds.

By now you should be hungry! Pick the seed pod just below the blossom of the wild radish whose flower may be white, yellow or lavender. Nibble it. Tasty. Not as hot as the red ones in the store, so children can eat them. Feel its leaf. It is rough like a towel. . .Mother Nature's "handy wipes!"

(NOTE: For family bicycling on the Corte Madera Creek bike path, park at the Ross postoffice. Come down the path through the College of Marin campus. Carefully cross College Avenue, then continue along the creek to Marin General Hospital and return to your car.)

IN THE SMALL shop he has set up in the basement of his Lagunitas home, craftsman Ed Nickel works happily at his chosen career of turning redwood root burl into handsome, glistening tables. Nickel works without expensive power equipment. "You don't need it," he says. "You can do the job with a few small power and hand tools." And he alternates among three different kind of finishes for his tables.

Ed Nickel Chose Craft Over Commerce

finish." Those 25 to 40 hours, however, do not include time spent in finding and transporting the burl.

The tables vary in size from about 18 inches by two and a half to three feet for his smallest creations, to 26 inches by seven feet for his largest. Prices range from $125 to $350.

Nickel, who was born in Grass Valley but was brought to Marin County by his parents 27 years ago as a 1-year-old and who graduated from Terra Linda High School, says he is beginning to feel both an economic and a competitive squeeze.

"MY COSTS ARE beginning to hurt," he says. "Sandpaper, for instance, that used to cost a nickel now costs a quarter. My finishes have gone up 30 to 40 per cent."

And, as noted earlier, the number of craftsmen making burl tables from California redwood has mushroomed.

"But I'm planning to stick with what I'm doing," he says. "I enjoy it. And I've decided the way to (only way) meet competition is just to put a little more effort and time into my products in order to make them better than those of the other guy."

"Most of my sales are made through word of mouth," says craftsman Ed Nickel. "Some one has bought or has seen a table, and they like it and tell their friends about it."

A SOFTSPOKEN and slender young man with a beard, long hair, and an easy smile, Nickel says he is confident the appreciation of such redwood burl tables will continue to grow along with production.

And, he adds, he has no regrets about that decision to change his direction in life from a career in commerce to a career as a craftsman.

"I know I did the right thing," he says with certainty.

Is your inner self someone you don't want to know?

It's not surprising. Many people would have you believe that there's somebody else in there. Lord knows who it might be, so why take the chance, right?

We don't think people are quite so schizophrenic. We don't believe that inside every young, Montgomery Street executive pounds a heart longing to go to the mountains of Tibet, or that inside every woman with a home and family lies the dormant soul of a Broadway stripper. We think it's mostly you in there. It may be a you that's somewhat altered by the demands of everyday life. But it's you, all the same.

At Awareness Center, our goal is to teach you to do what you do, better than you're doing it. Maybe you've heard of programs similar to ours. Have you ever wondered who goes to them? At Awareness Center, you'll find people pretty much like yourself. Maybe you'll even find you.

WHEN HARALD TAUB and family decided to move from Pennsylvania to the Bay Area, he resigned his position as executive editor of Prevention magazine. But as editor-at-large, he now does articles and research for the publication from his office in his Belvedere home, and supervises the magazine's West Coast writers.

"It is generally agreed that from our normal diets we each eat five pounds of chemicals a year. And, as the Food, Drug and Cosmetic Act is written and interpreted, these chemicals get the same judicial benefit as a man on trial — they are presumed innocent until people start dropping from their consumption." — Harald J. Taub in "Keeping Healthy in a Polluted World."

A CHANGE OF environment for the better was a major factor in the decision of the Harald Taubs to move to Northern California. And one of the benefits of West Coast residency that continues to amaze them is the bounty of fine produce available in the markets — "unthinkable in the East," they say. Here daughter Hilary, Taub and wife Beverley admire a bowl of fresh fruit.

There Are Ways Of Beating Pollution, According To Taub

It was an association that brought Taub into contact with the likes of Stanley Kramer, Otto Preminger and Kirk Douglas.

"Then, in the late 1950s, the film industry went sour," Taub relates, "and I began looking around for other means of support."

TAUB HAD CONTINUED to write magazine articles and maintain his contacts in that field. Consequently he became a contract writer for Coronet, a magazine that went out of business in June of 1961 despite a circulation of three million, "leaving me flat."

Taub then began a book that was never to be finished.

"It was on the health field — on additives," he says, "and I wanted to use the extensive library resources of Prevention magazine in my research."

He wrote to Prevention in Emmaus, Pa., asking permission to visit the library. Robert Rodale, son of Prevention founder J. I. Rodale and who has since succeeded his late father as publisher, sent a cordial reply, inviting Taub to Emmaus.

"IT DEVELOPED THAT Prevention had just lost its editor, although I knew nothing about that," relates Taub. "And in the course of our conversation, and although I had had no previous editing experience, Bob Rodale offered me the job."

Taub accepted and thus began an association of 12½ years.

Along with a rapid climb in circulation, Taub brought changes to the magazine that emphasized a more literate and more interesting writing style, plus greater scientific accuracy in the articles.

"PREVIOUSLY, THERE had been too much unsupported opinion creeping into the articles," he says. He estimates that he personally wrote something like 50 per cent of the articles in the magazine.

MARIN MAGAZINE

Taub's tenure saw the magazine move its editorial offices from a converted dwelling in Allentown to a new wing added to a building at nearby Emmaus that had first been constructed to house Prevention's business operations.

"The facilities at Prevention are excellent," says Taub. And at a time when soaring postal and newsprint costs, along with other factors, have placed many publications in jeopardy, Prevention is financially very sound, he says.

THE BEGINNING OF the end of the Taubs' residency in Pennsylvania came three or four years ago when Robert Rodale began urging his editor to take a trip to the West Coast "to see what was going on out here. He insisted I would find it inspiring."

"I kept fighting him off, but finally I capitulated, and my wife and I took a two-week trip to California," Taub adds. "And we fell in love with the coast."

Upon his return to Emmaus and at the very next meeting of the Prevention board, Taub proposed that the entire operation be moved to California.

"MY SUGGESTION was greeted with a kind of stunned silence," he recalls. "But I was quite serious. California seemed to me a much better location for a health magazine than Emmaus, which is kind of isolated."

Beverley Taub was equally enthusiastic about the Far West.

"THEN I REACHED the point where I just decided I just was not going to spend the rest of my life in the Lehigh Valley, and so I told Bob Rodale I was quitting. And he said: 'I can see that you mean it this time. I don't want to lose you. So let's sit down and work something out.' "

Thus the editor-at-large arrangement.

And the Taubs came West. Originally the Taubs had hoped to locate in San Francisco. But unable to find an area in the city suited to the rearing and schooling of the children, they finally settled on Belvedere and its easy access to San Francisco.

"There is hardly a known disease that is not matched, in symptoms and trauma, by reactions to the toxic substances in our environment and our poison-laden food and drink." — Harald J. Taub in "Keeping Healthy in a Polluted World."

And now the Taubs enjoy "that remarkable clarity of the air" that was one of the attractions that first caused them to fix upon the Bay Area as their future home.

"Sure there is smog in the Bay Area," Taub says. "But except for spots, compared to other metropolitan areas, it's nothing. In the Lehigh Valley you could wash your car, and it would need another washing in 24 hours."

THE TAUBS MARVEL, too, about such commonplace (for Marinites) things as "being able to walk into a market and buy alfalfa sprouts. Back East you could never do that."

"And the fresh lettuce is really fresh!"

At their Belvedere home the Taubs haven't the space for a vegetable garden. But back in Pennsylvania they did grow some of their own produce — "and we pretty well followed the organic procedures."

"But," he adds, "I'm no fanatic about these things. I'm personally not too concerned about fertilizers, although pesticides dismay me. The scientific information I have tells me that it is not going to kill me to eat food that has been fertilized inorganically.

"AND THE WAY things are going now, if we really confined ourselves to totally organic things, a good many of us might starve."

Furthermore, he notes, there's the problem of knowing for certain that foodstuff labeled "organic" is truly organic.

On the other hand, Taub believes that the use of natural fertilizers does result in superior food quality.

He recalls the time when he spent a few months on the Baltic island of Bornholm where the farmers were, by necessity, organic growers, using seaweed and dead herring as their fertilizers. "And the food I ate there was the most delicious food I ever tasted anywhere," he says. "I don't know if it was any better nutritionally. But it sure tasted better."

"NOW," TAUB SAYS, "I follow the rule of thumb that if it looks good and tastes good, it probably is good. And if you take an adequate mineral and vitamin supplement, you don't have a lot to worry about."

His book, "Keeping Healthy in a Polluted World," deals to a large extent with the roles that Vitamins A, C, D and E and the minerals calcium, magnesium and zinc can play in offsetting or reducing the harmful effects of pollution.

"Unfortunately, the economic aspect of every situation always seems to come first in the human mind," laments Taub. "It seems to me that we should pay less attention to complicated mechanisms. Something as simple as requiring a certain minimum gas mileage from our cars would do a better job of controlling automobile emission pollution than the devices we have been fooling with. It would reduce the amount of gasoline burned. And so there would be an energy saving as well."

TAUB SAYS HIS book takes this kind of commonsense approach to safeguarding health against pollution.

Some of his suggestions are proven. Some are approaching that point. Some are still at the experimental stage. And some are only suspected.

In the last two categories, for example, is the proposed consumption of kelp or other high iodine food by women to possibly offset the estrogen, suspected as one cause of breast cancer.

"IT IS ONLY a possibility," Taub admits. "Even the doctor most involved in this research says he cannot at this time state that the kelp is going to do any good."

But he adds: "On the other hand, kelp isn't going to hurt anyone. So why not take it — just in case?"

Taub concludes his book: "When you get right down to it, it's not very hard to be aware of the hazards that modern civilized living has introdued into our homes, and to guard against succumbing to them. With just a little effort you can make your home quieter, more peaceful and safer, a place to rest in and restore yourself so that you can go on battling aginast the threats of the outside world — and win the battle."

THE 232 PAGES that precede that optimistic assertion outline the strategy Taub advances for the winning of that battle. And the steps newcomers Harald and Beverley Taub and two daughters are adopting in their Belvedere home are designed to make it one of those "quieter, more peaceful and safer" places in which "to rest and restore yourself."

Harald Taub hasn't been in the Bay Area long enough to suffer any real disenchantment from the starry-eyed view he held of the region after that first visit to California.

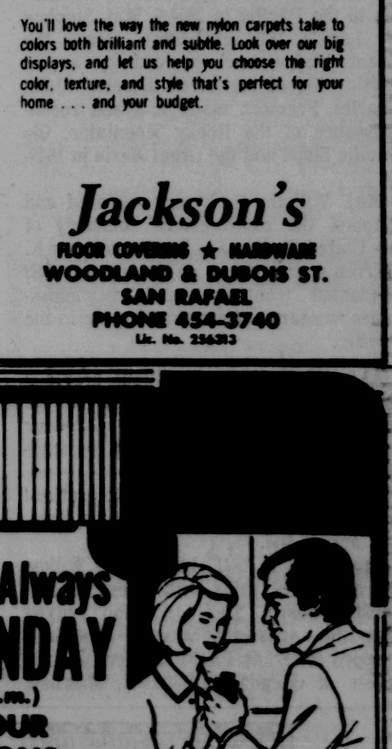
But he has been here long enough to develop at least one concern.

"I HAVE THE feeling that entirely too much sewage is going into San Francisco Bay untreated," he says. "To pollute that magnificently rich and fabulous bay beyond redemption would be outrageous."

As for his future plans, along with his continuing work for Prevention, Harald Taub has in mind a geriatrics publication.

"It's a field that interests me tremendously," he says. "We will operate with a board of distinguished doctors to pass upon our medical advice for the elderly. And we would include some financial advice, as well.

"As I see it, finances have become the major health menace for the aging."



EXCEPT FOR ISOLATED SPOTS, the San Francisco Bay Area is relatively free of the smog pollution that bedevils most other metropolitan areas, says Harald J. Taub, author of "Keeping Healthy in a Polluted World." Here Taub with wife Beverley and daughters Hilary and Alison enjoy from their Belvedere dock the clarity of air and the quiet that first attracted them to this area.

BUYING A CARPET is not like buying a decorative accessory, or even a major piece of furniture such as a lounge chair or sofa. Accessories can be rearranged or moved from room to room. Chairs and sofas can be moved around, or in time recovered.

Your room size rug or wall-to-wall carpet will stay in place, and chances are you'll live with it for many years to come. Bearing this in mind, one axiom to remember is: do a lot of looking.

Take advantage of the reputable carpet dealer's desire to help you find the carpet you'll be happy with, and look at many, many carpets to your heart's content. If you're in doubt about color or texture, ask about seeing how the carpet would look in your home (a small sample can reveal a lot on the scene).

Ask questions about carpet fibers, the different textures and weaves available, the pros and cons of wear. And if you do see a rug or carpet that you love at first sight, give it strong consideration. That's probably the one you should buy, for it's probably the one you can live with happily for a very long time.

For expert answers to your carpet questions, or a happy browse through a dazzling display of designs and colors and textures by America's finest carpet manufacturers, come in and see us.

You'll love the way the new nylon carpets take to colors both brilliant and subtle. Look over our big displays, and let us help you choose the right color, texture, and style that's perfect for your home . . . and your budget.

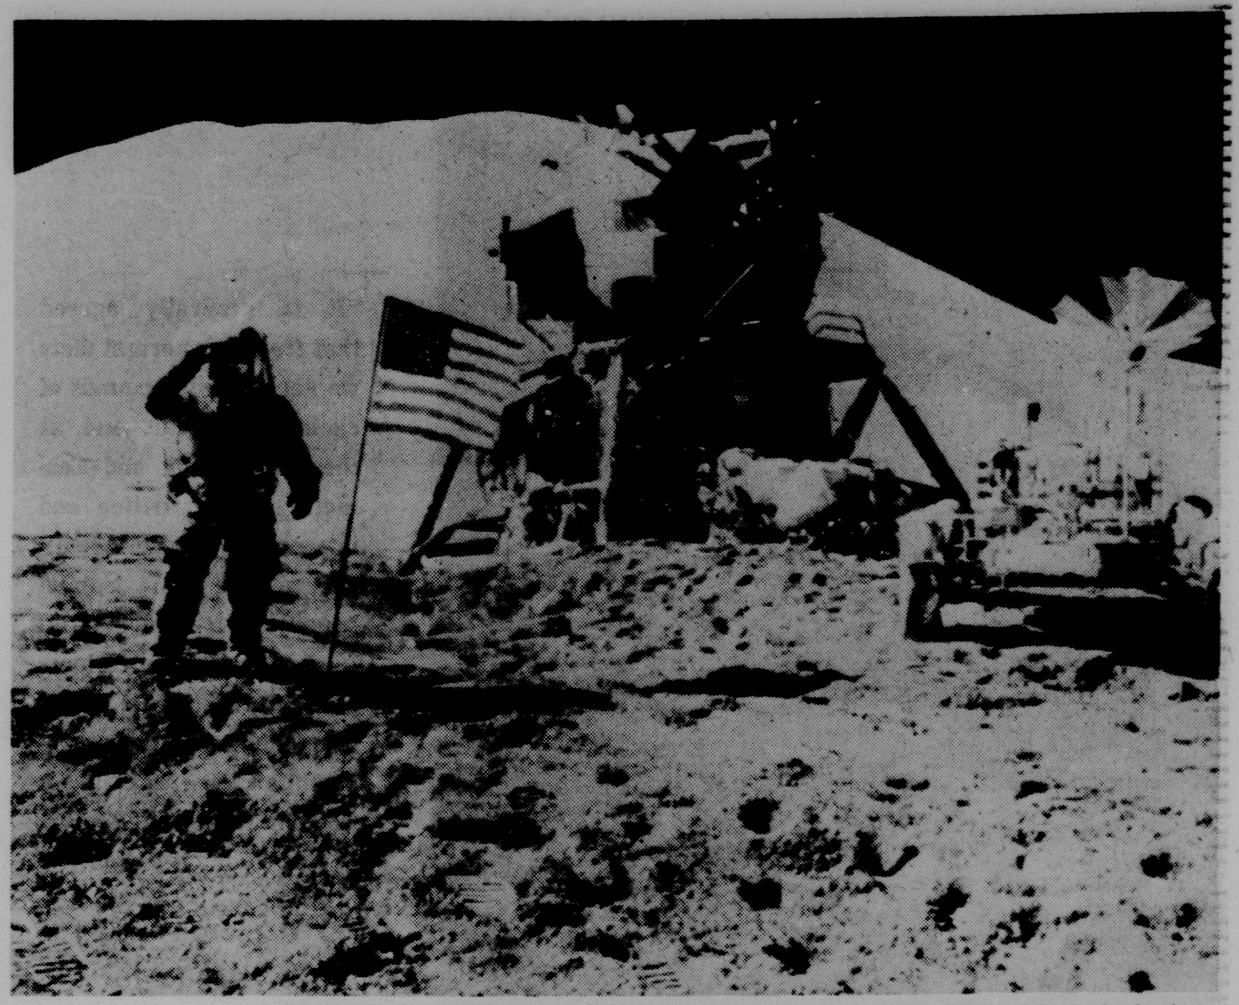
In Search Of An American Dream — Through Science



THE SPACE EXPLORATIONS of 20th century America, as shown in this NASA photograph of a lunar exploration, were the culmination of the country's involvement with science that had developed in the 19th century and which had presented the nation's scientists and philosophers with meat for some of their hottest arguments.

(Editor's Note: This is the 12th of 18 articles exploring the theme, "In Search of the American Dream." This article discusses the inevitable role of science in the growth of America — and the consternation attendant to that growth. The author is Stiles, professor of American Studies at Texas University).

The American Dream has always been related to scientific progress for two important reasons: (1) to survive and prosper in a vast wilderness, its people needed new techniques and new knowledge about their environment and (2) America was founded in an age in which the scientific revolution set the intellectual style.

Thus Americans could make use of European scientific discoveries and inventions rather than having to start from nothing. Accordingly, science in early America was cosmopolitan.

Philosophically Americans viewed all nature as a "great chain of being" reaching from the lowest organism to the angels. It was a static creation of the mind of God. To discover and classify the components of the "chain of being" revealed the thoughts of the Creator and by implication the future prospects of all mankind.

AMERICAN SCIENCE in the early republic contributed greatly to this larger cosmic vision, but it was also very practical in promoting the American Dream.

In 1818 Benjamin Silliman of Yale founded the American Journal of Science, devoted to the "useful" sciences and arts, and for more than 60 years it was the most important scientific journal in the United States.

Beyond this, each of the states began to sponsor natural history surveys aimed at making an inventory of exploitable natural resources. Teams of geologists, mineralogists, paleontologists, zoologists, botanists and cartographers blanketed New York, for example, from 1836-1843, minutely examining its contours and its economic prospects.

WHILE THE STATES feverishly conducted their resource surveys, the federal government sponsored exploration across North America.

Lewis and Clark, instructed by Jefferson to make a record of all interesting animals, plants, and rocks, journeyed up the Missouri River and down the Columbia to the Pacific in 1804-6. Maj. Stephen H. Long's 1819 expedition across the Great Plains saw the country as an exotic "Great American Desert." John Charles Fremont made a grand reconnaissance of the Rocky Mountains, the Pacific Slope and the Great Basin in 1843-44.

Maj. William H. Emory explored and mapped the southwestern boundary of the United States; and Lt. Gouverneur K. Warren's teams of explorers in 1853 conducted transcontinental reconnaissances in search of a railroad route to the Pacific.

ALL OF THESE expeditions provided the first resource inventories of the American West, revealed its grandeur and stimulated the interests of fur traders and pioneers.

Most of these continental explorations were led by Army officers, but the Navy was active, too.

From 1838 to 1841, Lt. Charles Wilkes led a fleet of ships with scientists and artists aboard. The expedition proved that the Antarctic was a continent, mapped the South Pacific and cruised the coasts of Oregon. In 1855 Lt. Matthew Fontaine Maury published his "The Physical Geography of the Sea," creating the science of oceanography.

BY THE 1840S IN America the sheer volume of scientific data that had been collected presented a problem of classification and organization. But in 1846, with a bequest of James Smithson, an Englishman, the Smithsonian Institution was established, and it came to serve as a national clearinghouse for scientific information.

By the 1860s, however, even the Smithsonian proved to be inadequate in this role, and Congress turned to several other devices. In 1862 it granted land in each state for a public college whose focus was to be primarily scientific and practical. The colleges were to make it possible for everyone across the country to have access to scientific knowledge and scientific education as tools for achieving the American Dream.

The land grant colleges were later supplemented by massive federal bureaus for disseminating information, like the United States Geological Survey.

IN THE POST Civil War era American science had come of age. Enthusiasm for it, especially its practical application in resource exploitation and technology, was unbounded.

The publication 1859 of Charles Darwin's "On the Origin of Species" was the most dramatic theoretical breakthrough in 19th century science.

Darwin's evolutionary hypothesis of survival of the fittest through natural selection was championed by Asa Gray, a botanist at Harvard, and it was soon accepted by much of the scientific community. Public acceptance of Darwin's evolutionary scheme was greatly aided by the publicist E. L. Youmans, editor of Popular Science Monthly, and by the writings of the British philospher Herbert Spencer, whose "Principles of Sociology" was a best seller in the United States.

HE TRANSFORMED Darwin's "struggle for existence" into "survival of the fittest," a world view that saw the whole human race inevitably improving as its weaker members failed to survive the demands of the natural and social environment. Spencer's version of Darwin's hypothesis provided a perfect rationalization for the rapaciously competitive business practices of late 19th century America, and a "scientistic" Darwinist myth gradually replaced the pastoral nature myths of earlier America.

But Darwinism was fraught with many dangers.

In 1874 Charles Hodge, a Princeton theologian, published "What is Darwinism?" correctly pointing out that Darwin's true hypothesis, contrary to Spencer's teleological interpretation, was based on the idea of chance mutations of species and hence a chance universe that by implication denied the role of God.

DARWINISM AND Spencerism also caused consternation among reformers.

Spencer's version declared reform to be a foolish and harmful tampering with nature's inevitable processes. This view was made explicit by one of America's foremost sociologists, William Graham Sumner of Yale, who positively embraced the "root-hog-or-die" philosophy. Likewise those who accepted the chance universe also had little reason to support reform activities, since all progress or regress was due to chance anyway. Others, like Edward Bellamy in his utopian socialist novel "Looking Backward" (1888) and Thorstein Veblen in his "The Engineers and the Price System" (1921), appeared to call for utopias based upon an inevitably evolving technological juggernaut.

Still others, such as the sociologist Lester Frank Ward, took a middle view and argued that man had evolved to the point where his rational intelligence could control his own destiny.

ASA GRAY SAW "chance" itself as the working of God's mysterious providence.

A satisfactory solution to the problem of the chance universe posed by Darwin was eventually formulated by the American pragmatists, especially C. S. Peirce, William James and John Dewey.

Accepting the logic of chance, Peirce saw reality as a series of problems; their solution forced man to depend upon a scientific method that looked to the consequences of an idea of hypothesis and assessed those consequences according to a calculus of probability. James saw reality as the data of consciousness, truth as the consequence of belief, and a correct solution when the problem disappeared for the individual.

DEWEY WAS MORE socially minded than James and he felt that real problems were social problems.

Dewey soon became interested in educating the young for problem-solving and the socialization process. His University School at Chicago became the most famous school of applied pragmatism. For Dewey, the more people intelligently involved in the decision-making process in a democracy, the greater the cultural progress. As utopian pragmatist, Dewey had developed an ethic of means which he called "instrumentalism."

Clearly the pragmatists could not only live with science but they positively thrived on the uncertainties of the Darwinian chance universe. For them the new "open-endedness" of science promised a freedom that was synonymous with the American Dream.

THE PRAGMATISTS stood in sharp contrast to the shrewd historian and cultural analyst, Henry Adams, who declared, "Chaos is all that science can logically assert . . . Chaos was the law of nature; Order was the dream of man."

But while Adams was asserting the futility of science, Charlotte Perkins Gilman was employing all the data of both natural and social science to re-define the role of women. She asserted that not Darwinism, not entropy, but history and outmoded mores controlled human progress. Limitations on women, Gilman argued, were "disadvantageous to our progress as individuals and as a race."

While Adams, world-weary at the end of the century, was scorning science and existentially "opting out" of America's mechanical civilization, Charlotte Perkins Gilman was in the forefront of those who saw in science a justification for the equality of women in all walks of life. In their own way, they, like many before them, were linking science to the democratic ideal.

WHY A SANTA?

Why do we need a Christmas Santa Claus?

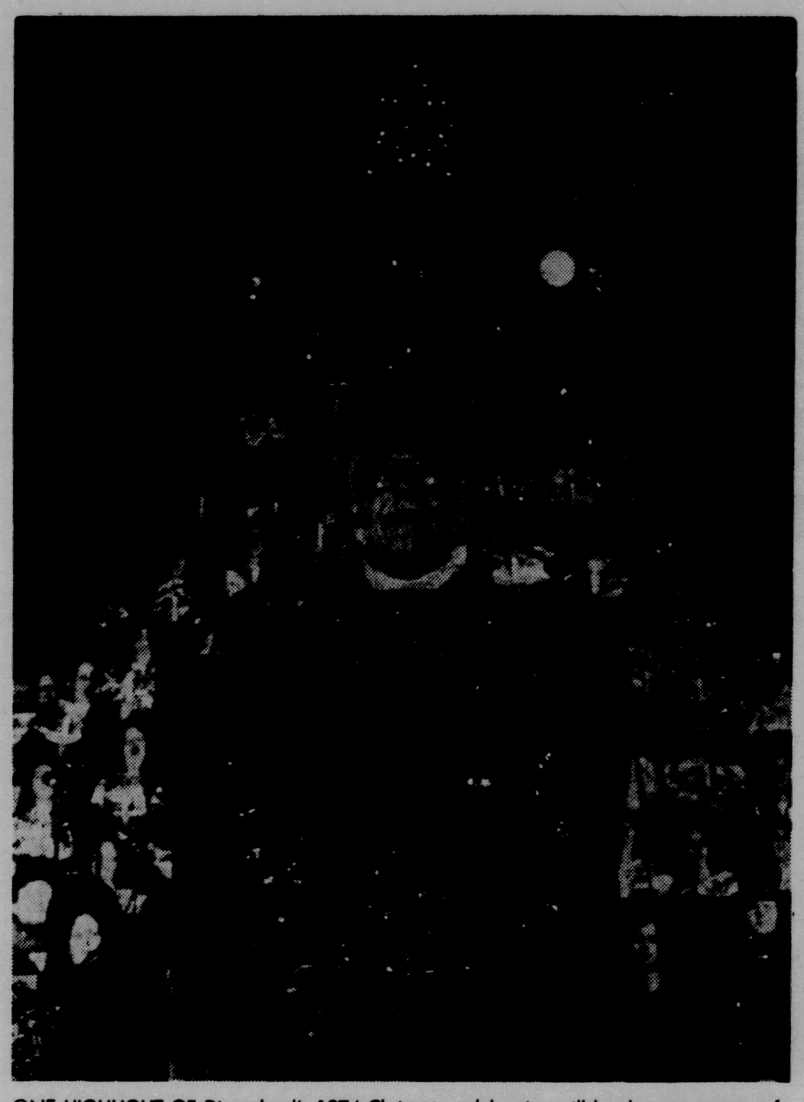
A TRADITIONAL FAVORITE of the Christmas season in Disneyland are the "Fantasy on Parade" marching toy soldiers from the Disney film, "Babes in Toyland." The current holiday season will offer 26 performances of the pageant as part of a Disneyland yule celebration that begins next Saturday and runs through Jan. 4.



ONE HIGHLIGHT OF Disneyland's 1974 Christmas celebration will be the appearance of motion picture great Cary Grant, accompanied by more than 1,000 choir voices, to narrate "The First Christmas" as part of a Candlelight Caroling Ceremony the nights of Dec. 21 and 22. The program will begin at 6 p.m. both evenings.

THE STAR OF THE Christmas show, at Disneyland as elsewhere, is Santa Claus, of course. And he will greet youngsters in the big amusement park as part of the "Fantasy on Parade" presentation each evening, Dec. 21 through Jan. 4. The spectacle features the talents of more than 500 performers in colorful costumes.

Disneyland To Mark 20th Holiday Season With Gala Celebration

Disneyland will celebrate its 20th Christmas season this year with a spirited schedule of Yuletide festivities, including parades, stage shows and special entertainment from next Saturday through Jan. 4.

Sporting its seasonal best, Disneyland will be brightly decorated for the holidays with such trimmings as a 60-foot Christmas tree and miles of holly and hemlock.

Highlighting the daily array of activities will be a family favorite, "Fantasy on Parade," which combines the make-believe world of Disney with the joyful moods of Christmas for a light-hearted pageant of childhood dreams come true.

SCENES FROM SUCH Walt Disney classic films as "Fantasia," "Pinocchio," "Mary Poppins," "Snow White" and "Robin Hood" are brought to life during this sprightly promenade down Main Street, which features the talents of more than 500 performers.

Riding a toy-filled sleigh in the pageant, pulled by eight comical reindeer, will be Santa Claus himself.

Santa's "helpers" during the parade will be Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, Cinderella, Dumbo and many more famous Disney cartoon characters.

On the evenings of Dec. 21 and 22 the meaning of the Chirstmas season will be captured when the park presents its solemn Candlelight Caroling Ceremony.

MOTION PICTURE star Cary Grant, accompanied by more than 1,000 choir voices, will narrate "The First Christmas" during the ceremony, featured on Main Street at 6 p.m. both nights.

"Fantasy on Parade" will also debut next Saturday. Performances will be offered at 2 and 9 p.m. daily, with the exception of Dec. 24, 25, 31 and Jan. 1, when the parade will be staged at 2 p.m. only.

Disneyland's stages will also be alive during the season with a variety of sounds, from pop to big band, day and night.

After dark on Dec. 21-23 and 26-30 popular recording group The Hues Corporation will be spotlighted on Tomorrowland Stage, followed by Bo Donaldson and The Heywoods on Jan. 2-4.

MAIN STREET'S Plaza Gardens will host Les Brown and His Band of Renown on Dec. 21-23, Bobby Sherwood and His Orchestra on Dec. 26-30 and Si Zentner and His Orchestra on Jan. 2-4.

Daytime entertainment will be provided by the New Christy Minstrels on Tomorrowland Stage Dec. 21-23 and 26-30.

A spectacular celebration will welcome in 1975 when the Park hosts its New Year's Eve Party from 8:30 p.m. to 2:30 a.m. on Dec. 31.

Special tickets for the night will entitle holders to unlimited use of the park's more than 50 major attractions (except shooting galleries) and musical entertainment, provided by the Pointer Sisters and the Association on Tomorrowland Stage, along with Bob Crosby and his big dance band, featuring the Bobcats, at Plaza Gardens.

A MIDNIGHT countdown to 1975, from the forecourt of Sleeping Beauty Castle, will be hosted by the comedy duo of Skiles and Henderson.

During the holiday season Disneyland will be open from 9 a.m. to midnight on Dec. 21-23, 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Dec. 24, 10 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Dec. 25, 9 a.m. to midnight on Dec. 26-30 and 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Dec. 31, before reopening for the special New Year's Eve party.

The park will be open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. on Jan. 1 and 9 a.m. to midnight on Jan. 2-4.

In Hawaii, Partridge In Pear Tree Becomes Mynah Bird In A Papaya

Christmas in Hawaii is wrapped in local ingenuity.

The sleigh-and-reindeer routine isn't quite appropriate because few homes in the Islands have chimneys. Those rooftop protrusions are more likely to be air conditioning units.

THE HOLIDAY MUSIC that fills the air are traditional Christmas carols, only the lyrics are translated into Hawaiian. "Silent Night" comes out "Po la'i e" and "Joy to the World" becomes "Po mai kai wa." Even the "Twelve Days of Christmas" is localized, and the partridge in the pear tree is a "mynah bird in one papaya tree."

Christmas decorations in Hawaii are intriguing. Palm fronds, breadfruit leaves, and papyrus branches are used to create tropical wreaths. Outdoors, tinsel and twinkle lights are woven through the branches of mango trees, bamboo bushes, or palm trees.

There is an array of Hawaiian-styled Christmas gift items and decorations at the Festival of Trees each year. It's held at the Honolulu International Center on Oahu and at the Keauhou Beach Hotel in Kona on the island of Hawaii.

AMONG THE EXHIBITS there are Hawaiian Madonnas fashioned from pandanus leaves, angels shaped from coconut husks and fiber, and other holiday accents made from materials indigenous to the Islands.

Hawaii's life style is reflected in the gift selections that find themselves under the tree Christmas morning. Among those awkward-to-wrap presents for the kids may be a surfboard, diving gear, or a bamboo fishing pole.

Holiday treats will include cans of Chinese puffed rice (a crunchy confection made from toasted rice), tropical preserves such as mango or guava jam, chocolate-covered macadamia nuts, and pineapple-flavored taffy.

THE NATIVITY SCENES enacted by Hawaii's multi-racial youngsters provide a dramatic depiction of the spirit of "peace on earth, goodwill toward men." A Chinese girl may be cast as the Virgin Mary, a Hawaiian-Portuguese lad may play Joseph, and a United Nations-like assemblage of the Three Wise Men and angels will gather around the manger.

One of the most stirring Christmas Eve services is held at historic Kawaiahao Church in downtown Honolulu. This candlelight worship service is conducted in both the Hawaiian and English language.

London Is Dream City For The Theater Buff

By JIM WILLIAMS

LONDON — This city is a playgoer's dream.

It's not what is available, but what you can pack in during a week's visit.

West End, the traditional theater district in the center of the city, offers a dazzling array — from the long running "Oh! Calcutta!" to more experimental offerings by the Royal Shakespeare Company.

DURING A RECENT visit to the capital city of the shrinking British Commonwealth, it was not hard to obtain a ticket to even the top offerings — a revival of Shaw's "Pygmalion" with a super cast headed by Diana Rigg and Alex McCowen at the Albery Theater to the lavish musical, "The Good Companions," based on a story by J. B. Priestley, at Her Majesty's Theater, off Picadilly Square on Haymarket Street.

And with the inflated economy, tickets are not a severe crunch on a tourist's pocketbook. A top ticket for "The Good Companions," probably the most expensive show in town, was $7.65 (based on the current exchange of $2.32 for an English pound). In comparison top tickets for musicals presented by the San Francisco Civic Light Opera are $11.75. And the ticket range is even higher in New York City.

Another musical, which will probably enjoy a long run, is "Cole," based on words and music by Cole Porter. It is being presented at the Mermaid Theater, just a stone's throw from the Thames River.

In all there are 60 theaters in operation in the city — a noble feat in the days of high production costs.

Some other useful tips when visiting the storied city:

To cut food cots, explore the famed London pubs. They offer very tasty lunches at reasonable prices. A meat pie and a half-pint of lager is under $2.

Avoid taxi cabs whenever possible. It's more fun to explore the city by bus or subway (underground). Connections on the underground are fast and easy and it is very hard to get lost with helpful signs posted in entrances to the underground. If you like to see more than advertisements in subway stations, explore the city using the efficient bus system.

THE GRAND CANYON WINS AN ELECTION

By MURRAY J. BROWN
UPI Travel Editor

The Grand Canyon is the top natural attraction of interest for tourists in the United States, according to a recent survey carried out by the U.S. Travel Service.

The unofficial nation-wide poll, in which more than 60 attractions were nominated by nearly 1,000 voters, was aimed at selecting the "Seven Natural Wonders of the USA," the Service said.

The Department of Commerce agency, which is the national tourism office, said the ballots were cast by members of the U.S. travel industry, travel writers, senior citizens, elementary school children among others.

The 217-mile-long canyon in Arizona — "its most scenic 100-mile stretch is situated within the boundaries of the National Park established in 1919" — was an easy winner, the USTS said.

"Size, form, color and geological significance combine to make the Grand Canyon one of nature's greatest masterpieces," the USTS release said. "Carved over the geologic ages by the powerful Colorado River. . .the story of the earth itself is recorded in the canyon walls."

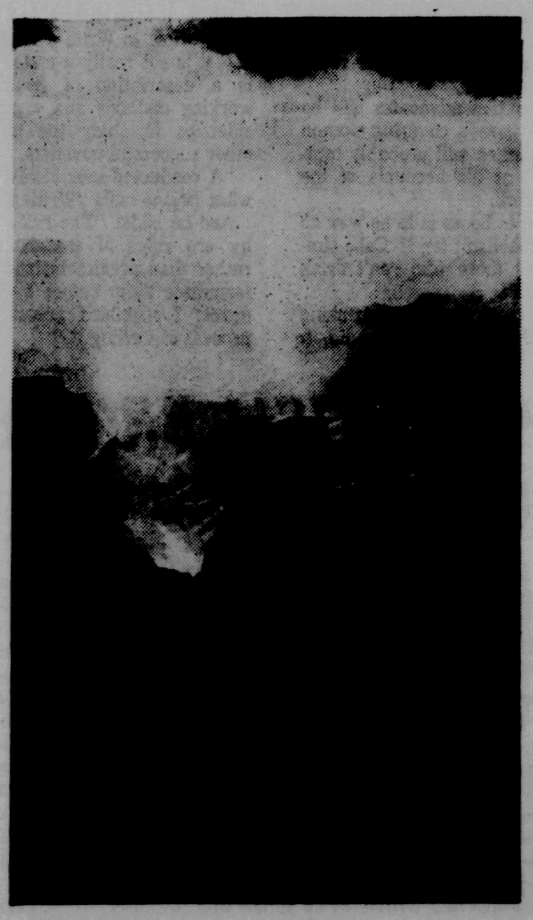
While the North and South Rims are the main centers for sightseers, the release notes "hardier visitors may explore the canyon on foot, on mule or by river raft."

The other "wonders," listed in order of voting preference, included:

Yellowstone National Park, Wyoming. The first 1872 and the largest (200,000 acres) National Park, Yellowstone offers "a great diversity of attractions," including Old Faithful and other geysers, wild life and spectacular scenery. While most visitors "confine themselves to the popular vantage points accessible by road, a vast wilderness awaits more adventurous travelers."

Niagara Falls, N.Y. actually three falls, two in the U.S. and the other in Canada, carved through limestone rock by prehistoric glaciers. "Seven hundred thousand gallons of water per second cascade over the brink of the 180-foot falls. . .one of the most breathtaking sights" in the U.S.

Mount McKinley, Alaska. At 20,300 feet, the highest peak in North America. Only 250 miles south of the Arctic Circle in a 3,030-square-mile National Park with only one road and one area of major development. "An immense sanctuary of glaciers, forests and blue lakes. . .inhabited by numerous types of wild life, including grizzly bear, moose and caribou."



THE BEAUTY of the Grand Canyon as viewed here from Navajo Point has been an unforgettable experience for millions of visitors. (American Airlines photo)

California Big Trees — the Sequoias and Redwoods. The largest plants in the world, some of which "were standing long before the birth of Christ." Most of the Sequoias are protected in national forests and the Sequoia National Park. The largest, known as General Sherman, measures 30 feet in diameter and is 272.4 feet high. The Redwoods grow nearer the Pacific Coast in a 450-mile-long belt.

Hawaii's volcanoes. The still-active Mauna Loa and Kilauea, the principal attractions in the Hawaii Volcanoes National Park on the big island of Hawaii. Halemaumau, largest of Kilauea's craters, is the legendary home of Pele, the Hawaiian goddess of volcanoes. Also the dormant Haleakala on the island of Maui.

Florida's Everglades. "A sea of sawgrass marsh dotted with small tropical tree islands called hammocks" which was known only to the Seminole Indians until the mid-19th century. Now part of a 1.4 million acre National Park with only one paved road — a 35-mile stretch from the Royal Palm entrance on the eastern border to the Flamingo Recreational Area. Visitors can walk on elevated trails branching off the main road or ride airboats deeper into the interior.

Other wonders receiving votes in the poll included Carlsbad Caverns, Yosemite National Park, the Grand Tetons, Crater Lake, the Great Lakes, Glacier Bay, Mammoth Cave and the Mississippi River.

The poll was all part of a government program to direct tourist attention toward the sights at home, and particularly our national parks. Such a trend, it is pointed out, not only fits in well with our upcoming bicenteanial, but also serves the purposes of helping with the energy crunch and with the balance of payments problem.

AS OIL TANKERS GROW, SO DOES THE PERIL

SUPERSHIP by Noel Mostert; Alfred A. Knopf, 332 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Steve Anderson.

It takes a while to begin a book like "Supership." It takes even longer to read it, but when finally the enormity of Mostert's story takes hold, you are awed, you are frightened, you are dismayed, you are catapulted into a Brave New World in which the sides change as often as the oil shortages.

"Supership," which went on sale last month, is the story of oil tankers — big oil tankers.

Specifically, Mostert relates his epic voyage on a ship known the Ardshiel, a ship "nearly a quarter of a mile long, wider than a football field, and still by today's standards only a 'medium-sized' supertanker."

Mostert takes it from two sides: What it does to the crew and the perils it forces these crewmen to take; and from advantage of what the supertankers mean to ordinary citizens like you and me. He brings it down to our terms . . . oil spills, the possibilities of explosion, catastrophic upheaval of the tedious eco-system in which we exist.

He relates it to capitalists and peasants and middle-class folks. He relates it to economic pressures and dangerous swells where waves rise "like cliffs 60-feet high that can fall upon and break even the mightiest supership, letting its immense and life-destroying cargo bleed black under the wind."

We don't see many supertankers here; we aren't faced with immediate disaster of a raging pier fire, but we do see our bays getting greener and sicker and denser with debris. We see smog the oil-burning buildings lay thick over San Francisco. We see the destruction of our fish population in the bay.

We see, too, the depletion and the crippling effects of man's economic vault in rising costs, in bare hills where there need to be trees, where apartment houses dot land where deer used to roam, where water connections must be restricted, where traffic is so heavy that even the Golden Gate Bridge, with its rows of lanes, is out-dated and a funnel that slows traffic leading in and out of the city.

As part of his research, Mostert tells us that these supertankers — the Ardshiel on which he rode carried a mere 200,000 tons of crude oil, "enough," he says, "to supply the total energy needs of a city of 40,000 for an entire year" — are, in a word, unsafe. They are built with an estimated lifespan of 10 years. They are not sound, Mostert argues, and he points out that a U.S. agency has estimated that just the deliberate dumpings of oil alone total 1,720,000 tons a year.

Jacques Piccard, the Swiss oceanographer, places total oil pollution of the oceans at five to 10 million tons a year, and he says if it doesn't stop, sea life will end in 25 to 30 years.

Where does it end?

Mostert wonders. So do I. So should you.

THE TANKER Mactra is shown split down the middle after an explosion in the Mozambique Channel in this photograph by John Seccombe from "Supership."

A MILLION-TONNER? 'IT'S INEVITABLE'

In World War II, the largest oil tanker ships were about 16,000 tons deadweight (cargo carrying by weight capacity).

George A. W. Ingram of San Anselmo, retired superintendent of marine insurance for Hartford Insurance Company at San Francisco and an internationally known authority on shipping has traced the growth of oil tankers from the 85,515 tons deadweight Universe Leader of (815 feet length, 43 feet draught) to the Blobtik Tokyo of 1972, 483,664 deadweight tons, 1248 feet long, 91 feet draught.

In an article for Wildlife Review earlier this year, Ingram discussed the possibility of the million-ton tanker. His conclusion: Such a monstrous vessel's appearance on the world's seaways is inevitable.

"It is just a matter of time."

How Much Influence Does Attitude Have Upon Your Health?

BE WELL by Dr. Mike Samuels and Hal Z. Bennett; Random House and The Bookworks, 156 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

The co-authors of "The Well Body Book" that created so much interest have collaborated upon this follow-up that both expands upon and refines their thesis that by our own thinking we can bring on or prevent disease.

"Every doctor knows that people heal themselves by their own healing abilities, including the abilities to produce antibodies, to mend damaged tissue and to regenerate dying cells," they write. "And no one but the patient can create an attitude of well-being for him or herself, thus to free their self-healing abilities to work at their best."

Their newest book is devoted largely to instruction on how to create that attitude of well being.

The key words are "the feeling pause." It is that time when, on the verge of commitment, the person pauses "to take stock" — to decide if the course he has been taking or is about to take is truly harmonious with his inner feelings and needs. Or when one relaxes and "listens" to those inner feelings or signals to search out the root cause for physical discomfort or sensations. Our thinking can then become a healing tool.

"After a short time you will find that the feeling pause is very easy to do, that you can do it almost without thinking," they promise.

There's an outlined technique for relaxing, and another promise: "Having developed your ability to relax yourself in this way, you possess a healing tool which you can immediately begin using in your life."

It's an interesting, intriguing concept. And Dr. Samuels and Bennett are better than most at explaining in practical and specific terms a concept that might have seemed vague and intangible.

Mike Samuels, a Bolinas resident and co-founder of the Headlands Clinic, a holistic health service, holds a medical degree from New York University. Bennett formerly resided in Marin County where he ran a day care center, but now lives in Richmond. The two men are collaborating on yet another book on "visualization techniques."

And in "B Well" they have left medical professionals and laymen alike with some fodder for deep thought. Are we really bringing on a great deal of our own ill health with unhealthy thinking? Will thoughts of "ease" ward off "dis-ease?" Is there inside us a "universal self" which if heeded will serve us well?

Dr. Samuels and Hal Bennett answer "yes" emphatically to all these questions.

The Memoirs Of Africa's Louis Leakey

BY THE EVIDENCE by Louis S. B. Leakey; Harcourt, Brace Jovanovich, 276 pages, $9.95. Reviewed by Patricia A. Latimer.

"By the Evidence" is the long-awaited account of the intensely dramatic and worthwhile fact-finding anthropological expeditions of Louis and Mary Leakey.

Their imagination and compulsiveness drive them to unearth many outstanding examples of never-before discovered fossils and primitive artifacts. His great persistence and her loyal, tireless support result in the establishment of a revolutionary theory on the evolution of man.

Leakey proclaims Africa, the Dark Continent, as the probable site and homeland of humanity. He moves the time of man's birth backwards by more than a million years. With his startling, often controversial conclusions he significantly changes and questions the direction of modern science.

Leakey writes in a detailed, occasionally laborious style, recalling a deliciously descriptive cast of characters, thoughts and comments. He unveils an incredibly fascinating concoction of great moments in anthropology, natural history and African culture.

His original memoir "The White African," deals with his first 30 years while "By The Evidence" deals with the next 20. With intriguing arrangement of material, this second volume takes Leakey from his post at Cambridge University to his home in Africa.

Growing up as a young boy in the tiny village of Kikuyu, Leakey is born of loving missionary parents who see he is exposed to and initiated into the beliefs and customs of the local natives. His knowledge of the African life style cause him to work towards the education of the white man in regard to the misdoing and misunderstandings that lead to race hatred. His anthropological interests influence him to preserve ancient African traditions and philosophies. With great obstacles, Leakey and his wife work to unravel the ruins and hidden histories of the rotting Olduvai Gorge.

This is a choice book for adventurous, informative, introspective reading. Those who thrilled at television documentaries focusing on the Leakeys will be enthralled, too, by this book.

THE MUSIC IS LOVELY

THE NOTES OF A BROWSING BOOKMAN

The title of Maxine Brady's book, "The Monopoly Book: Strategy and Tactics of the World's Most Popular Game," is something of an exaggeration. We can all name games more popular in number of players or in intensity of play than Monopoly.

Miss Brady begins with a history of the game from its invention by unemployed salesman Charles Darrow in the dark days of 1930, and its acquisition by Parker Brothers followed by an explosion of popularity in the 1930s. Since then, Monopoly has had its ups and downs, but it has hung on, and it is currently on an upward trend.

Statistics are sometimes awesome. For instance, Parker Brothers has now constructed more than 2,560,000,000 of these little green houses.

But the bulk of Miss Brady's book deals with the rules and the strategies of playing the game, especially important to players in that so much ambiguity and confusion has developed in Monopoly through the years. Buffs will welcome this clarification of the rules. And evaluate and debate the suggested tactics.

David McKay Co. is the publisher of the $5.95 book. And it is an original idea for the Christmas gift for those who crouch around the board and persist in those long, drawn-out, even fatiguing but somehow fascinating contests of pseudo-high finance.

SOMETHING DIFFERENT in the way of a gift for the crossword puzzle addict is Norman Hill's "How to Solve Crossword Puzzles" ($6.95).

Hill and his publisher, Funk & Wagnalls, stress that this is not one of those dictionaries designed especially for the puzzle fan, but rather a complete guide to the tricks and strategies and systems used by the experts to solve the crosswords. There is also attention paid to various other kinds of puzzles that are offshoots of the crossword.

Speaking of the crossword craze as an "incurable disease," Hill adds: "Today the affliction is more powerful and virulent than ever."

Any newspaper editor who dares to drop the crossword puzzle from his columns learns quickly just how virulent the affliction.

All are pitched at the beginner level, and require only the simplest accessories. McKay is the publisher.

Author Severn has been performing tricks since he was 12, and is still an active performer as well as the author of earlier books in the field of magic. Included is the also recently published "Mental Magic Tricks," put out by Henry Z. Walck Inc.

A TASTY BANQUET for the connoisseur of mystery fiction is the Knopf-published "Ross Macdonald Selects Great Stories of Suspense."

Your $12.50 buys you four novels — Macdonald's own "The Far Side of the Dollar" plus Dick Francis' "Enquiry" and yarns by Agatha Christie and Kenneth Fearing —; the Robert Louis Stevenson classic novella, "The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," and a stellar list of short stories that includes the work of Graham Greene, Dashiell Hammett, Stanley Ellin, James M. Cain, Margaret Millar and Roald Dahl among others.

Quite probably there has never been anything like this one before in terms of sheer reading enjoyment — hours and hours (822 print-packed pages) of it.

THE UNDISPUTED "master chef" among America's food writers is the one and only James Beard. And "Beard on Food" (Knopf, $10) finds him at his fascinating best.

It's a collection of his columns personally chosen by Beard, covering a wide range of gastronomical topics from "In Praise of Pasta" to "The Knack of Fluting Mushrooms." It is part cookbook, for there are recipes, but it is a great deal more than that — a wonderfully perceptive examination of diverse matters pertaining to the palate.

For the cookbook fancier already well stocked with the big encyclopedic tomes and the smaller ethnic and specialty recipe collections, "Beard on Food" is something different, opening up totally new horizons for the enjoyment of the kitchen and the dining table.

A PAPERBACK original from the Warner Library for the pro football fan, "O.J. Simpson: Football's Greatest Runner" is by John Devaney and includes eight pages of photographs. At $1.50 it's a bargain in a year in which sports biographies and autobiographies have been many — perhaps too many.

Juan Corona Case Viewed Without Bias

Twenty-eight-year-old Tracy Kidder, a Vietnam veteran and Harvard graduate, has done a better than average job on this "instant history" account of the Juan Corona affair.

His idea of getting to know the itinerant wino Caucasian men who work in the fields of California and who made up the 25 murder victims in the Yuba City case is a good one.

One can muse that in the hands of a Steinbeck, the book might have been another "Grapes of Wrath," but then, Kidder has done a different type of thing.

It's in part a mood piece, but also is a reporter's account of the trial of Juan Corona and other events surrounding the case.

Unlike many young writers who tackle such projects, Kidder writes with a good deal of impartiality, and it is difficult at the end to determine whether he believes the enigmatic Corona was guilty or not.

Some day, though, maybe a Steinbeck will deal with the modern-day migrant workers, the California valley towns and the lives of those who live there.

For A Balanced View Of Patty Hearst And SLA

EXCLUSIVE! The Inside Story of Patricia Hearst and the SLA, by Marilyn Baker with Sally Brompton; Macmillan, 240 pages, $8.95. Reviewed by Albert Nussbaum.

Marilyn Baker is the San Francisco television reporter credited with finding virtually every important piece of information in the Patricia Hearst kidnapping, staying well ahead of the FBI and state police agencies. Anyone who feels he knows the whole story won't have to read very far to discover the media coverage was sketchy at best.

Besides completeness, "Exclusive!" has something else going for it — a radically different tone than most other accounts. Many articles pictured the SLA as high-minded underdogs — heroic figures and later martyrs. That isn't Marilyn Baker's view and she isn't bashful about letting it show.

No matter what posture readers eventually assume regarding the SLA, they should try to base it upon as much objective evidence and varied viewpoints as possible. If they don't, they can't claim an opinion, only a bias or prejudice.

"Exclusive!" is the account that has been needed to balance all the others.

A Tippler's Tribute To Booze

A reader can get a psychological glow on reading about the pleasure of drink which seeps out of a series of essays by the noted tippler, Charles McCabe, who has conducted nearly a lifetime of research.

Women's Liberation advocates will be outraged by his essays covering women in bars, but Irishmen will probably mutter "how true" at his accounts of the Irishman and drink.

SLEUTHS & SUSPENSE

"A Deadly Shade of Gold" is one of his liveliest. Adventurer McGee finds himself drawn into intrigue and danger by first the appearance of his old pal, Sam Taggart, and then by Taggart's murder. A primitive figurine of gold apparently furnished the motive. All that occurred in Florida, the usual scene of the McGee yarns, but the trail takes our hero first to a resort village on the Mexican Riviera and then to Southern California.

WRITING A NOVEL by John Braine; Coward, McCann and Geoghegan, 222 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

And even from those with natural capability, it seems that persistence is a second essential. If they try, try and try again, their gift just might finally be recognized. Even then their financial reward might be a pittance.

The English writer John Braine, best-known for his "Room at the Top," has authored a book aimed at dispensing for the novice some of the clouds of mystery that srround the craft of novel writing.

While the publisher has subtitled his work "How to Write a Publishable Novel," it is not really a textbook. Instead it is a description of Braine's personal working methods and experiences, with sidetrips to study the manuscripts of other successful novelists.

And he adds: "The rules which I write by are rules of thumb, rough guides rather than precise instructions. I didn't formulate them before I wrote my first novel; I stumbled across them in the process of writing it."

The fledgling novelist is thus free to borrow what appeals to him, to discard that which does not, and to modify as he sees fit. Hiw own talent remains the basic, essential quality. Without it, neither John Braine nor anyone else can be of help. But with that gift, he might well benefit from Braine's experience and observations.

What is the optimum length for that first novel? Should one always write from experience? Must inspiration strike before the novelist begins writing? How many drafts of the manuscript? Should ethnic or regional accents be produced phonetically? How much dialogue in a novel? How generous should you be with your adjectives? What is the best single test for your narrative prose? (Answer: Can it be read aloud?) What is best for the beginner, first person or third person narration? (Answer: First person).

These are questions John Braine brings up in "Writing a Novel" and to which he supplies the answers that he has come up with during his career. He provides, too, some sample drafts and synopses. And he provides a list of books, generally non-fiction, for reading, adding: "Any book that you read with pleasure has something to teach you."

HOW BRITISH BROKE THE CODE

"The Ultra Secret" is an "inside story" — the "inside story" of how the British Secret Intelligence Service obtained and duplicated a German electronic coding machine to break the German cipher and decode top secret message transmitted among Hitler and his generals during World War II.

F. W. Winterbotham, who wrote it, was senior air staff representative in the Secret Intelligence Service. He writes from memory, since the documents resulting from the interceptions are still locked up and kept secret.

Although this was a British project, the American forces benefitted from it, with General Eisenhower and his field commanders receiving the same information from the intercepted signals that went to British commands. It is a fascinating story.

Reading a book like this, written by an author who obviously was on the inside (and who allows no false modesty to shield how close were his relations to the top commands), one is inclined to accept everything at face value — unless he comes to something of which he has personal knowledge that raises a doubt.

In this reviewer's case, this came on page 169, where Winterbotham describes a visit to Gen. William Slim, who was commanding the British 14th Army in Burma. He writes:

"My real business was obviously with the Fourteenth Army at Comilla in Assam . . . We flew down to Calcutta, . . . thence northeast across the Ganges delta, ovr the tea gardens and forests of Assam, to Comilla, gratefully cooler than Calcutta."

Comilla is not in Assam. It is in what was then Bengal — or, to be exact, the tiny feudatory state of Tripuri, ruled by an Indian maharajah, but completely surrounded by Bengal. Now, of course, it is Bangladesh. I was there at the time Winterbotham relates calling on General Slim.

Tea is not the main crop between Calcutta and Comilla; it is jute. The tea gardens are farther northeast, toward and in Assam and around its capital of Shillong. The day I flew off the Comilla airstrip for China, after completion of the Burma campaign, the temperature was 98 degrees and the humidity was 94. It was about the same that day at Calcutta.

So maybe Winterbotham embroidered his recollections a bit. But anyhow, it is a fascinating story.

GIFTS FOR GARDENING WILL GLADDEN THE HEART

If you have a gardener on your Christmas shopping list, you're lucky. "Gifts to garden with" will make your friend the happiest person on his or her block.

New pruning shears and saws will delight a gardener — since much of the year's pruning and trimming chores are done during winter months. You can find shears in all sizes, from large hedge trimmers to comparably minute clippers suitable for the most delicate Bonsai pruning. Add a can of pruning paint compound and your gardening friend will be set.

How about that gardening book your garden buff has been wanting? As soon as you see that glowing happiness on his face as he thumbs through it, you'll know you are a top candidate for Santa's "Elf of the Year" award.

For the children of the family (or inquisitive adults) a set of clear plastic pots are novel and fun. Everyone will be able to see plant roots growing and wandering through the soil.

As for gifts for garden care — a new hose, fertilizer sprayer, bags of fertilizer and/or soil amendments (think of the fun you will have watching your gardening friend trying to decipher what is in that package), garden stakes and ties, a mister for house-plants, and for the occasionally forgetful plant feeder, some slow release fertilizer tablets (with these, he'll only have to feed many plants one time every year).

There is a wide choice of suitable stocking stuffers too — nozzles, vegetable and flower seeds, bulbs, sprinkler heads, snail bait, even decorative faucet heads; like a bronze quail or squirrel.

For a new gardener, a bundle made up of a rake, hoe and shovel with a big bow is ideal. Or, assemble a "let's get started" kit consisting of a trowel, clippers, and seed packets set in a basket for gathering the flowers and vegetables when they bloom.

For a really fun and elegant gift for the new gardener, fill a wheelbarrow full of gardening supplies!

If you're still in doubt about gifting for a gardener, a gift certificate to a local nursery or supply store is a good choice — that way, your gardener can pick and choose to his heart's content.

BULB FLOWERS are an unusual Christmas gift idea for the plant enthusiast. Stuff a stocking with the bulbs, or fill a gift box with them. Nurseries still have a selection of bulbs including the hyacinths shown here in their spring glory.

The Living Tree Idea Delights The Children

Nothing outcharms a living tree at Christmas time. Its "evergreen, ever-fresh" looks cannot be matched by any cut tree off a lot.

And children love the idea of a growing Christmas tree. They enjoy picking it out and then trimming it with miniature lights and lightweight ornaments.

Mostly, kids are delighted by the fact that because they choose a tree that is alive and growing in a tub — the same tree will be back for Christmas year after year. Each year when the tree is brought inside, they will marvel at how much it has grown — it is a tree that grows with them.

THE DEODAR CEDAR has long been a favorite living Christmas tree choice. Its silvery green foliage is full and lacy in texture. That, plus its perfect, conical shaped growth and the fact that it does very well in a tub, makes the Deodar Cedar a good yuletide selection.

The Colorado Blue Spruce has fir-like foliage that has a definite blue cast to it. It is conical in shape and is extremely full and attractive. Both make lovely accents to holiday decor.

ANOTHER GOOD CHOICE is the Italian Stone Pine, specimens of which have been pruned to a fine shrubby character in tubs. The more naturally compact Scotch Pine is also desirable as is our native Monterey Pine which is becoming more and more popular as a tubbed tree.

How To Give Bathroom A Garden Look

The wide variety of live, green plants available today makes the garden look a dramatic and practical new decorating idea for bathrooms, according to the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

To determine innovations and trends in bathroom decor, the bureau surveyed fixture manufacturers, home builders, interior designers, plumbing contractors and homemakers. One of the most popular trends, the Bureau found, is that of bringing the garden look into the bathroom.

A nationally-famous decorator referred to the trend this way: "Perhaps as a way to get back to nature, the interest in green plants is soaring. A new kind of store, the plant shop, is springing up everywhere. This popularity of green plants, combined with the natural humidity of the bathroom, makes the Garden Bath idea a natural."

To assist homemakers in planning a bathroom, a planning guide, "The Gerber Garden Bath Book," has been created by a fixture manufacturer in cooperation with interior decorators and plant experts. The 32-page book contains scores of ideas illustrating how the garden look can be brought to bathrooms of any size. It's also a guide to plant selection, arrangement and care, and includes bathroom design ideas illustrated in color.

The book is available for $1 to cover the cost of printing and mailing from Gerber Plumbing Fixtures Corp., Department NR. 4656 West Touhy Avenue, Chicago, Ill., 60646.

Redwood In The Kitchen

Redwood paneling in kitchens and bathrooms is becoming increasingly popular as the "natural" trend in interiors continues. The California Redwood Association recommends two or more coats of a high quality clear polyurethane finish to avoid any possible water spotting on redwood used in these two rooms.

A HOUSEPLANT given as a Christmas gift takes on a special glamor when it is presented in an unusual container, such as the antique iron that is housing the Schefflera shown here. You can put your own creativity to use in coming up with a novel container. And the array of plant possibilities is endless.

Soil Conservationist Is Strong For Mulch

Should home gardeners worry about erosion? This question was put to Jim McGuire, soil conservationist with the Soil Conservation Service headquartered in Petaluma.

"Absolutely," he replies. "Erosion is bad even in small amounts. It means that some of your limited topsoil is lost. But erosion does more than steal your topsoil. As soil leaves your home garden or town lot, it moves into ditches and streams, where it becomes mud and a pollutant."

"Undoubtedly mulching is the best conservation practice for the home gardener," McGuire says. "Mulching has many benefits, and often eliminates the need for ditches, terraces or walls.

According to McGuire, a mulch will:

By protection, prevention of erosion, and adding organic matter it actually improves the workability, or tilth, of the garden's soil.

"A mulch can be almost any organic material," McGuire says. "Compost, straw, cotton hulls or lawn clippings are all useful. Those who want more information on mulching can call the Petaluma Soil Conservation Service Office.

CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

✔Plant Daphne now for fragrant blooms in late January and February.

✔Remember that rains can't reach plants growing next to the house under wide overhangs. Don't let the plants dry out.

✔Plant Snapdragons, Stocks, Pansies, Violas, Calendulas and Iceland Poppies from nursery flats this month. They will assure you of garden color from mid-winter into warm weather.

✔Get out your gardening book and review your pruning "basics." That time is upon us again.

HERE'S THE ANSWER TO YOUR QUESTION

By ANDY LANG

Q. — In talking to contractors about reroofing your home with asphalt shingles, I have discovered there is a wide variation in the nailing procedures used by roofers. Is there any way I can tell how many nails should be used and where they should go?

A. — Even with self-sealing shingles, incorrect nailing can lead to problems. Nails for reroofing should be galvanized or aluminum roofing nails, long enough to penetrate at least three-quarters of an inch into the wood deck or through plywood decks. Nails should be one and a quarter inch for shingles on new construction or where the old roof has been removed, one and a quarter to one and a half for reroofing or old asphalt roofing, and one and a half inches for reroofing over old wood shingles, and one inch and 12 inches in from the sides. Nails should not be placed in or above the factory-applied self-sealing stripe, since high nailing makes the roof vulnerable to blow-offs. And if the roofer is using fewer than four nails for each shingle, he's skimping. Manufacturers of asphalt shingles usually print nailing instructions on the bundles. The roofer won't go wrong if he follows those instructions.

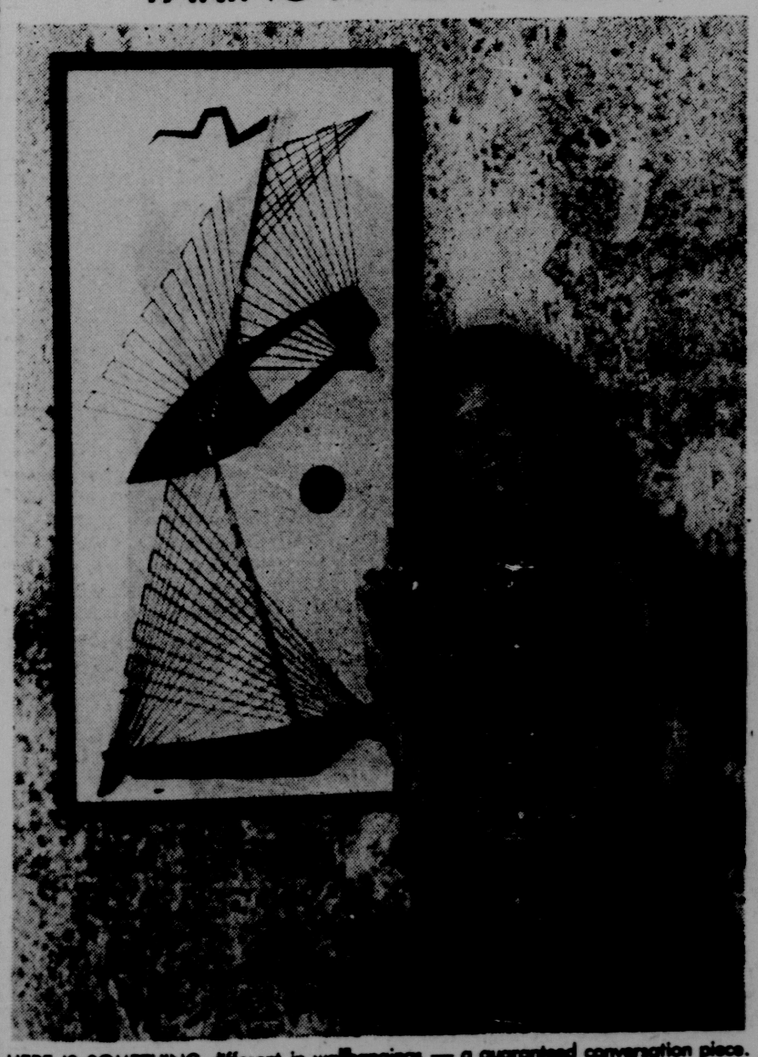
Q. — Can I use the white glue that comes in a squeeze bottle for a piece of wood furniture that is to be used outdoors.

A. — This type of glue, which has many uses, is not intended for outdoors, since it is not waterproof and can be affected even by heavy moisture in the air. I have seen some applications where it has held up well outdoors, but in such cases the objects had been given several coats of paint, so the glue was well sealed from the elements.

Q. — Two of the posts along our wooden fence are wobbly. What is the best way of strengthening them? The wood in the posts appears to be in good condition.

A. — The simplest way is to drive wooden wedges into the ground on opposite sides of each post so that it makes a tight fit. Sometimes this will last a year or two, sometimes indefinitely. Secure the tops of the wedges into the post with galvanized screws. Soak the wedges in a wood preservative before using them. A more permanent repair, if the posts are set in concrete, is to dig down and fill the spaces with new cement, being sure to go below the frost level.

TAKING A NEW TACK



HERE IS SOMETHING different in wallhangings — a guaranteed conversation piece. It's a three-dimensional abstract, and actress Karen Huston is justifiably proud of her work. Not only is it attractive, but it was inexpensive, for she did it herself with the help of a Steve Ellingson pattern. And in a single evening's work. Materials required for this sailboat study are a piece of Celotex for the background, molding for the frame, map tacks and yarn. The Celotex or any other insulation board should be painted white to accentuate the three-dimensional effect. Colored yarns may be selected to match or contrast with your room decor. Send $1.25 to Steve Ellingson, Independent-Journal pattern department and ask for Yacht Yarn Mural Pattern 452. The pattern comes full-size, with every detail explained, right down to the locations of the tacks. Then once the tacks are in, you just string the yarn as directed.

CHECK FOR DRAINAGE PROBLEMS NOW.

Every homeowner in Marin should get in touch with his walls immediately. Your walls can warn you about hidden water leaks or drainage problems.

Some water problems are obvious. Puddles around the house or in the garage can be easily seen (and should be corrected). But water trapped under your house, seepage under your concrete-slab floor, or hidden plumbing leaks might not be noticed. Unless your walls warn you.

Inspect the base of your inside walls on the lowest level of the house. Look for darkened circles in the paint or wallpaper. Feel along for wet or slimy areas. Sniff for musty odors in all the rooms. Be sure to move large pieces of furniture and look for mildew on the wall behind. Also look behind boxes in the closets.

These are signs that water is standing under your house instead of draining away. The water is soaking upward, spreading dampness through the walls and floors.

In time, the dampness will warp floors and damage wall and floor coverings. But far more dangerous, the dampness makes your home's understructure vulnerable to all of Marin's most destructive pests — termites, boring beetles, and dry rot. All are attracted by dampness.

So if you read the writing on the wall, call Hinkley & Gordon. We're a licensed structural pest control company. We're licensed general contractors. And with two generations of experience in Marin, we're experts at correcting drainage problems.

CHANNEL 9 AT 9 P.M. ON SUNDAY

JACKIE GLEASON jolted the show business world recently with the announcement that he will return to TV as a star of a dramatic series. The Great One, slimmed down from 250 pounds to a svelte (for Gleason) 205 pounds, will star in "Panama Fargo," a two-hour mini-series, scheduled for ABC-TV lineup in the fall of 1975. There will be eight episodes. (UPI Telephoto)

'Lucas Tanner' Overcame The Ratings Game

By BOB THOMAS

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When David Hartman was in New York to announce the Thanksgiving Day parade, an NBC executive commiserated, "Gee, I was sorry to hear that 'Lucas Tanner' was being dropped-such a good series."

"But it hasn't been dropped," Hartman protested. "It's been renewed!"

The public has been misinformed, too. Hartman continues getting copies of petitions sent to the network pleading that "Lucas Tanner" is too good to kill.

Until a couple of weeks ago, the series did indeed seem a candidate for extinction. Then it suddenly leaped into the top-20 ratings and won a reprieve.

Hartman analyzed why:

"Any show has a building process. If you give the viewers bang-bang and crime, you can catch their attention in a hurry. A series without those elements takes time to reach its audience. 'The Waltons' proved that.

"It was even harder for 'Lucas Tanner,' because it didn't have that period nostalgia. We chose to do a contemporary series about today's problems, without car crashes, shooting, raping and killing.

"We made mistakes, too. It took one act for Lucas as a teacher in the classroom atmosphere to get involved in the problem. Now is is also a counselor, so we can start the plot more quickly.

"Another problem with ratings is that we were pre-empted three out of the first seven weeks. But after we were on five weeks running, we landed in the top 20. A good sign."

It has been a good year for David Hartman, a strapping, rawboned native of Pawtucket, R.I., who convincingly plays the baseball star turned schoolteacher (he once had offers from the big leagues). Besides his weekly appearance on "Lucas Tanner," he will be seen in the nation's theaters during the holiday season as star of "The Island at the Top of the Earth."

At $7 million it is the most expensive film in the history of Walt Disney Productions, and it is Hartman's first theatrical movie.

"What a difference," he remarked. "I do more dialogue in one day of 'Lucas Tanner' than I did in the whole movie. We make an hour television show in six days; 'Island at the Top of the Earth' is an hour and a half, and it took three months.

"Three months for the principal actors, that is. For a year before, Disney crews were shooting film in Norway, the Arctic and all over.

He has a plain American face, which he refused to beautify — "when I was doing commercials in New York, an advertising man told me I'd never succeed until I had my crooked teeth straightened.

"I declined, and within two years styles had changed and crooked teeth were 'in' for commercials."

TV Music Might Be Art— But Who's Going To Notice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Writing music for a television series is sort of like building snowmen at the top of Mt. Everest: It may be art but who is going to notice?

Oh, there are a few themes that catch on and win recognition for the composer, such as Lalo Shiffrin's "Mission: Impossible," Henry Mancini's "Peter Gunn," Jerry Goldsmith's "Dr. Kildare," and Nelson Riddle's "Route 66."

But they are few and far between. For the most part, composers involved with dramatic television series remain behind the scenes, consciously trying to write music that doesn't call attention to itself yet enhances what is being seen on the screen.

"Music is very important," says David J. O'Connell, producer of the long-running "Marcus Welby, M.D." series. "It helps convey mood and tell the story and punch up dramatic act endings and introduce situations."

But Lee Rich, executive producer of "The Waltons" and "Apple's Way," adds a generally accepted qualifier:

"You attempt to create a mood with music, but you can't depend on it. You've got to have a good story and good characters. I think 'The Waltons' would work without music. The music enhances it but it's part of the whole; it can't stand by itself."

This is not always true in movies, where sound track albums are common. The difference is not in the composers, ince most of them shuffle back nd forth between television d films.

The difference is time — the answer which explains so many of the qualitative differences between movies and television.

"A composer on a feature movie has six to eight weeks and that gives him a chance to explore things and reject them," says James McAdams, producer of "Kojack."

"Whereas in television it's very often a case of going with your best instincts and just doing it."

A composer on an hour-long dramatic show usually has two weeks to write 10 or 20 maybe as much as 35 minutes of music. And if the show comes in late, he might have a week — or a weekend. The decision on how much music to write and for what scenes are made during a viewing of the show with the producer.

Comments Leonard Rosenman, composer for "Kojack" and the recently canceled "Nakia"

"Writing 25 minutes of music in 10 days: quantitatively that's the size of a Mozart symphony. Very often the demands are so great that you have to make do when in other circumstances you'd like to think about it a little more.

"Generally, television demands more technique than inspiration."

Are the frustrations and anonymity worth it?

Rosenman thinks so. Cranking out television scores is the bread and butter that allows him to operate his own chamber orchestra and to write serious concert music.

Of his concert music he says, "It takes me a year to write what I do in a day for television. There are different kind of values involved."

For composer Walter Scharf, however, the weekly grind got to be too much and he quit doing dramatic series eight years ago. Previously he had composed for such series as "The Man from U.N.C.L.E.," "Slattery's People," "Mission: Impossible" and "Ben Casey," in addition to more than 150 films.

What About Those Children's Ads?

By JAY SHARBUTT

NEW YORK (AP) — Question: Could the networks afford to reduce the number of commercials on weekend children's shows by charging sponsors higher prices for fewer commericals?

Dr. Alan Pearce, a Federal Communications Commission economist, thinks so. He suggests in a study that even with fewer commercials at higher prices, advertiser demand would stay relatively constant.

But NBC and CBS executives disagree, saying advertising demand for children's programs has already slackened for a variety of possible and actual reasons. ABC officials say they don't know what would happen with fewer commercials at higher prices, but as one put it, "we're getting pretty close to the point of no return already..."

Pearce's study, released in June, was made for the FCC as part of the agency's consideration of a petition filed 4½ years ago by Action for Children's Television, an activist parent's group.

Among other things, ACT sought a ban on advertising on children's programs. The FCC in October rejected this course and instead issued a policy statement intended as a guideline for children's programming.

The statement in part called on the nation's TV stations to reduce their level of advertising on such programs in accordance with recent changes the National Association of Broadcasters and the Association of Independent Television Stations have asked of their members.

The NAB, whose code of standards is subscribed to by the networks and 412 stations, now allows them 12 minutes of "non-program material" — commercials, promotional announcements and so forth — per hour on weekend children's shows.

This level, reduced in January 1973 from 16 minutes, will drop to 10 minutes at the start of 1975 and to 9½ minutes in 1976.

Even after deducting program and other major network costs, Pearce says, the networks' pretax profit on weekend children's shows in 1973 was an estimated $27 million.

"It is profitable, but not very," responds George Newi, a sales vice-president at ABC. "And I think that's a point about which a lot of people have misconceptions."

Edwin Vane, a senior vice-president at ABC, says revenues for ABC's children's programs are down as much as 15 per cent from three years ago, primarily because of teh NAB's "non-program" cuts.

He says there's been no slackening in advertiser demand for the shows, "but the heart of success in television is to present the advertiser with a price he can afford on a program he wants to be associated with.

"Now if you overprice, even though he wants to be a part of that show, he just can't afford it or may feel he can find better advertising efficiency elsewhere," Vane said.

Among network executives interviewed, Newi was the only one willing to say his company's weekend children's shows were profitable. NBC and CBS officials declined comment on competitive and corporate grounds.

Don Carswell, NBC's vice-president for business affairs, says BAR reports show gross network revenues for weekend children's programming came to $70.7 million in 1972-73, and $63.3 million in 1973-74.

"Any way you slice it, that's a 10.5 per cent loss," he says, adding that it's too early to tell how the networks will fare this season.

What caused the reported drop?

"It could be any number of things," Carswell said, asserting that the demand by advertisers for weekend children's shows was decreasing even before the NAB's cutback in "non-program material" action in 1973.

"You can't hang it on the reduction of commercial minutes, particularly," he said.

"What you can hang it on, I guess, is the decision by advertisers to spend less money on Saturday morning.

An Old-Fashioned Currier-and-Ives Christmas Cookbook

By Bruce Catton: Man's Death Sentence For His Own Kind

"I've Always Been a Food Hound!" Says Valerie Harper of "Rhoda"

Ask Them Yourself

Want to ask a famous person a question? Send the question on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N. Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR O. J. SIMPSON

As a fan I'm disturbed by your talk of quitting football in two or three years. I always thought Jimmy Brown quit too soon. Are you going to follow his lead?—William Rooney, Utica, N.Y.

● I've always admired Jim Brown for his decision to quit while he was on top. I think that's why he can play all those parts as the Super Cat, breaking up the Mafia and stuff like that and have people believe it—because they still remember him as a super player. Some superstars who stayed on too long are now remembered more for their fading years than their great years. When you leave sports you're afraid, because you've never really done anything else. I know I won't be as good in something else as I am in football, but I'm trying to prepare for a career in television.

FOR ALICE FAYE, star of Broadway's "Good News"

Why did you resume your career after being away from it for so long?—H. L., Vancouver, Wash.

● I got tired of sitting home waiting for Phil [her husband, Phil Harris] to call and tell me how much fun he was having fishing with Bing! Seriously, though, I got bored. A lot has happened since I walked out of movies in 1947: My two girls are married; I've got four grandchildren. When Phil's not fishing, he's away working. This isn't a comeback for me—it's "doing something" after being idle for so long.

FOR SHIRLEY COTHRAN, Miss America

You're a guidance counselor. What's the No. 1 problem young people have today? – Elizabeth Lindsey, Jacksonville, Ala.

● Loss of contact with their parents. It's all because many of these parents—in their early thirties—are still struggling to make a place for themselves in their business and social lives, and that keeps them busy. Many young children respond to a friendly ear. But it's not the same as pouring out your problems to Mom and Dad.

FOR HANK AARON

Do you believe that Frank Robinson's color will give him trouble as a big-league manager?—T. A., St. Bonaventure, N.Y.

● Not with the players. His problems will probably come from the press, who will be watching his every move, putting him under a microscope. A lot of people will be expecting him to walk on water, and that's going to be unfair. But I think Frank Robinson is going to do all right.

FOR GOV. GEORGE C. WALLACE

● All of us should respond to whatever God has called us to do. But I have not been "called" to the ministry and therefore have not considered such a move.

FOR JULIA CHILD

Why is it supposedly wrong to cut green beans with a knife when you're preparing them for a salad?—Mildred Hanrahan, Escondido, Calif.

● I've always heard that too—and I have no idea. Perhaps that was in the days before stainless steel knives. I do either one—cut or tear—whatever suits my mood and my greenery, and I can't see that it makes any difference at all.

FOR ROGER MOORE

What's the most surprising thing that happened to you while making a film?—M. P., Boise, Idaho

● After we finished location shooting for my new James Bond movie, we had a poolside party at our hotel in Bangkok. My costars, Britt Ekland and Maud Adams, came up behind me, pushed me into the pool and poured a bottle of my favorite Dom Perignon champagne over my head. As I flapped around in the water, they made the dreadful pun: "You're now bottled in Bond."

FOR JOSE FELICIANO

Can you tell me something about your childhood?—A. R., Rapid City, S.D.

● I was born in Larez, Puerto Rico, the second of 12 children, three of whom died before we moved to a three-room Spanish-Harlem apartment (too hot in the summer, too cold in the winter). Since I was blind, I couldn't play outside. So at nine, I got a secondhand accordion, and learned tunes from scratchy records. Then a friend bought me a $10 guitar.

FOR MONTY HALL, host of "Let's Make a Deal"

Why don't women moderate game shows?—Arnold Cheskin, Morristown, N.J.

● We in the game-show business have tried for years to have women included. So far, the networks haven't looked kindly on the idea—without offering any concrete reason. (Twenty years ago Arlene Francis did moderate a game show.) But there's no doubt in my mind that we will have a woman game-show emcee in the next two or three years.

FOR THE ASK THEM YOURSELF EDITOR

What started the feud between Frank Sinatra and Rona Barrett?—B. G., Ogden, Utah

● Rona Barrett says it began when Sinatra objected to her reporting that he was divorcing his second wife. Fuel was heaped on the fire when he bowed out of Cher's TV show. He rehearsed in the afternoon, then sent word he was ill and couldn't return. Cher's representative explained his throat was bleeding and he was spitting blood. Miss Barrett's interpretation was that Sinatra was hemorrhaging. Sinatra demanded an apology, saying he only had a sore throat. Rona thought she was right, and didn't retract. Time hasn't healed the feud. At his recent Madison Square Garden concert, Sinatra said of Rona, off camera: "What an ugly broad. When she was born, the doctor slapped her in the face."

Man's Death Sentence for Man: Our Belief in Our Own Creations

"What protected man in the old days was his awareness that there were things he just could not do. That awareness is gone. . . ."

Daniel Kramer

War does one thing pitilessly: It holds up, before the eyes of the society that is waging it, the essential reality on which that society is based. It is a cruel mirror, apparently as distorted as the mirrors in an amusement park, actually (on the long, cold glance) not distorted at all. I speak to you now from the world of my youth, at the time of the First World War. And what war showed us in 1916, for that and subsequent generations, was that the race had entrusted itself to a new belief. Its highest faith now was in the machine rather than in the spirit; in the mechanical devices man's brain could invent rather than in the illimitable miracle that originally set that brain free to speculate, to plan, to dream and to hope. The only reality worth mentioning is the one that can be seen, touched, tinkered with, improved —or, at times, exploded. Get into the machine you have made and ride wherever it takes you. There is no other road to salvation; or to damnation either, if that makes any difference.

In that year, 1916, I was a young prep-school senior in Benzonia, Mich. A prep-school senior is not well equipped to follow such a line of thought to its proper conclusion, and anyway things are clearer now than they were then. About all I got out of it at the time was a general feeling that something was wrong somewhere, as if the rules of the game had been changed without due notice.

Dimly taking grotesque shape somewhere in the background, not yet really recognizable, was the one dismaying fact that governs our progress across the Sinai Desert of the modern world: We have set all our other qualities aside and have entrusted ourselves entirely to our mechanical ingenuity. Proud that we have escaped from age-old superstition, we have condemned ourselves to live in a world of our own creation, a world that we fondly believe has no mysteries. We are made helpless by our own omnipotence.

The richest fruits of this began to be visible in the First World War, which shows perfectly what happens in a technician's world. Obviously, if your enemy stands in your path (as in wartime he does) you want to destroy him, and if you are going to do that it is well to be thorough and businesslike, not to say scientific, about it. Instead of going at him with bare hands, clubs and stone knives you bring up the most ingenious and intricate destructive instruments your scientists and inventors can provide, and the only guideline to follow here is the idea that if you can just bring to bear on your enemy more of these things than he can bring to bear on you, you are going to win. All of this, of course, has to be done without restraint; if it is good to drop a ton of high explosive on your enemy, it is ever so much better to drop a thousand tons on him, and better still to multiply that by a factor of at least one hundred. In the end, if all goes well, you obliterate your opponents and all that remains is to go in and pick up the pieces. You are absolutely certain to win provided you just wheel up enough machinery.

The first trouble with this is that your enemy is wheeling up machinery as fast as you are; and the second trouble, which is much graver, is that this adds up to making war without doing any thinking about it—a sure road to disaster. The one thing that is clear now about the 1914 war is that mankind's intelligence was in a coma. The brains that devised, ordered and persisted in

A Complete
Nutritious Meal
For Cats
A Tasty Combination of 3 Separate Flavors

INTRODUCING MEOW MIX.

The cat food cats ask for by name.

While man may love his cat, man and cat do not speak the same language. The same can be said for woman and cat.

A situation which has given rise to all sorts of communications problems.

For example, over the years cats have been accused of being finicky eaters.

Well, maybe we've never really understood what they've been asking for. (After all, you'd be finicky too, if you had to put up with just one taste at every meal.)

So we at Purina have come out with a whole new way to feed your cat. Not just a new variety of cat food, but a cat food with real variety in it.

We call it Meow Mix.™

The tuna is red ◆ the liver is brown ● and the chicken is yellow ◆ So they look as different as they taste.

Now, your cat doesn't have to wait till his next meal for a change of taste, he can get it in the next bite. Which should keep him biting. All day long.

It should also help keep him healthy. Because Meow Mix contains all the proteins, vitamins and minerals cats are known to need.

And Meow Mix even has something for you, convenience. There's nothing to mix. Just pour some Meow Mix into a bowl and the fresh, tasty morsels will stay fresh and tasty all day long.

such offensives as those at Verdun, on the Somme, along the Chemin des Dames and in front of Passchendaele were not, properly speaking, brains at all. There was a certain amount of activity by the central nervous system, of course, and the purely mechanical problems involved in getting men and machines up to the point of action and removing the debris afterward—such debris as could be identified and picked up for salvage, that is—were handled quite smoothly, in the main. But to say that human intelligence was actively involved in these matters is to talk obvious nonsense. The men who directed that war succeeded only in turning it into something nobody could win. They wrecked their own countries, made Europe practically uninhabitable for decades, and left the world doomed to fight another disastrous war simply to get out from under the wreckage left by the first one. Human stupidity has had no greater triumph.

The full extent of this colossal mismanagement was not, of course, visible at the time. It was years before people would see what an incredible mess had been made of things. At the time we could only confess that what was going on resembled nothing that had ever happened before; we comforted ourselves with the faith that something good would somehow come out of it all and that somebody somewhere must know what ought to be done. (That sentence contains four of those miserable uncertainty-words — something, somehow, somebody and somewhere—and on due reflection I think I will leave them there. We were uncertain, and the uncertainty was not confined to a preparatory-school campus in northern Michigan, either.)

What was really bothering us was a point that might have been clear enough if we had known how to identify it. The world had simply gone awhoring after false gods. Having committed itself to them it had to go where they took it, and this was bound to lead to confusion, because of all the gods man has ever worshiped, the most completely inscrutable are the ones that stand behind the altars in the age of applied technologies. They give man the illusion that he at last controls his own destiny; he becomes able to reshape his physical surroundings as he sees fit; he discovers that at last he can produce more than enough of everything to go around, and unhappily he fails to see that among the things of which he can produce a blessed abundance are intolerable woes. What protected man in the old days was his awareness that there were things he just could not do. That awareness is gone, and if in its departure it took with it the last barrier on the road to the bottomless pit, we shall probably find out about that in due time. Man knows now that if he tries hard enough he can do anything he wants to do—fly through the air, leave the planet altogether, create life out of sea foam and sand (well, those aren't exactly the ingredients, but they are near enough) and unlock the power that holds the eternal mountains above the plain. By the unformulated tenets of his new religion, what he can do he must do. The one impossibility now is to turn back, or to go at half speed. This machine (to repeat) operates only at full speed. Unfortunately, it cannot be steered.

Daniel Kramer

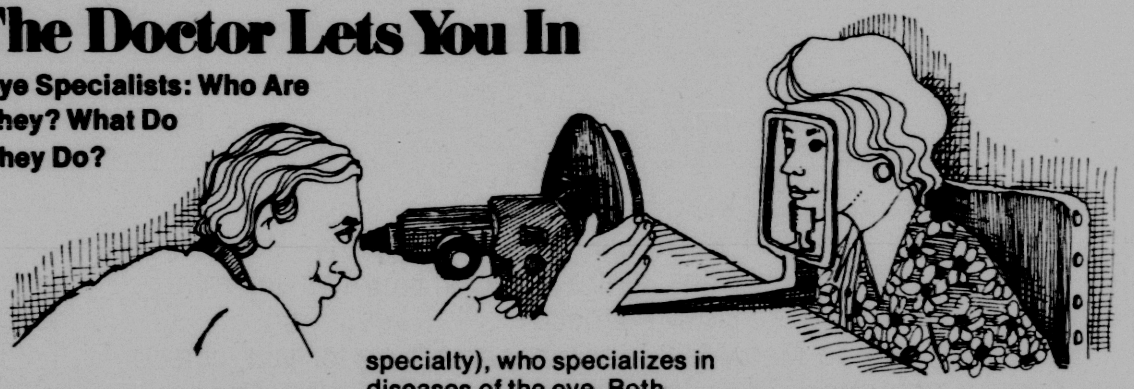
The Doctor Lets You In

Eye Specialists: Who Are They? What Do They Do?



You need to see an eye doctor. To whom do you go? Ophthalmologist, oculist, optometrist, optician? Who's who? What's what? There is a difference. First, there is the ophthalmologist or oculist (both words refer to the same specialty), who specializes in diseases of the eye. Both these men are MD's. In addition, they examine a person's eyes to determine if he needs glasses. This exam is called refraction. Also, while examining for glasses, the conscientious ophthalmologist will test for glaucoma. It is a simple, painless and important test that only takes minutes. These eye doctors give you a prescription for eyeglasses that the optometrist or optician can fill. This brings us to the next O—the optometrist. He is also trained to do refraction. If the optometrist notices conditions in the eyes that need treatment, he refers the patient to the ophthalmologist. The optometrist determines what glasses are necessary, makes them and fits them. (Note: Frames should also be properly fitted, so that the pupils are looking through the proper portion of the lenses.) The final O is the optician. An optician does not examine the eyes at all. He only grinds and fits eyeglasses according to the prescriptions that are given to him. But he is just as qualified as the optometrist to fit eyeglasses.

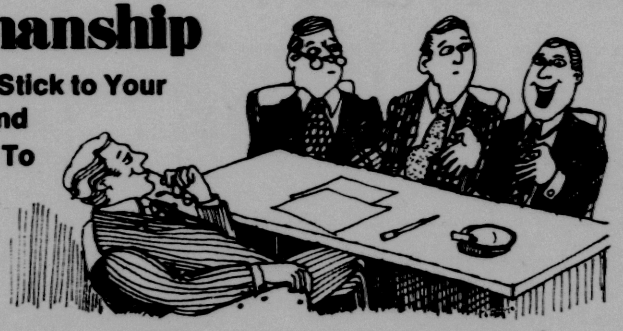
Jobmanship

When to "Stick to Your Guns"—And When Not To



Many a boss says, "I don't want people 'yessing' me all day. I want the truth." But does he? If you as an employee learn to be careful how and when you say "no," you may be able to block decisions that seem wrong to you, and also further some of your own projects. The last thing you want to have is a reputation as a crank and an obstructionist. So: 1) Study your boss and learn the difference between a real request for your opinion and meaningless talk. Many bosses will say, "What do you think of . . . ?" When they've really made up their minds. Don't waste a "no" here. 2) Learn when your boss is using you as a passive wall to bounce ideas off. At those times, the boss himself doesn't clearly know what he wants or what the problem is. 3) Realize that bosses are people, and when the time arrives for a genuine discussion, avoid making counterproposals in front of others. Don't put your boss in a position where he may have to ignore you in order to maintain his own standing. 4) When you do disagree, use all the tact you can. Telling the boss, "You've overlooked this . . ." or "I guess you've never heard of . . ." is sure to get his back up. Phrases like, "Might it be useful to find out . . ." or "You're right. Should we also consider . . ." are much more practical ways to tell the boss the truth.

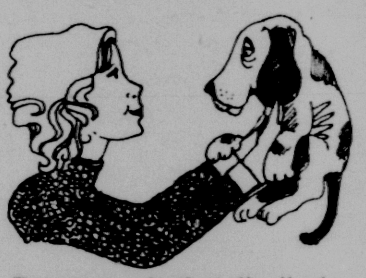
Pet Corner

Think Hard Before Buying That Christmas Pet



Pet stores do their liveliest business before the holidays. If you are thinking of giving a pet to your child, think hard. Don't buy on impulse. Analyze your family's needs, the ages of your children, the size of your house and yard or of your apartment. Who will take care of the pet? Is anyone allergic to dog or cat dander? What can you afford? Dogs and cats are the most popular gift items in the pet world, but you should give a lot of care to their selection. Purebreds cost from $25 to $200. Mixed breeds can be obtained for a nominal sum from the SPCA or animal shelter. But both require inoculations, and all dogs need training. A dog or cat will be a member of the family for many years. Be sure you choose one that will fit into your life without becoming a nuisance.—By Jean Burden

A Celebrity Cooks

Valerie Harper:

Valerie Harper stars in her new series, "Rhoda," on CBS-TV.

"I'm much more aware of what goes into food. I've started reading labels."

By Valerie Harper
In conversation with Helen Dorsey

I've always been a food hound! Losing weight has never been easy for me. I've probably tried every diet known to man. Invariably in the past, when I set myself up by making sweeping pronouncements about how much weight I was going to lose, it was always a failure.

Going to Weight Watchers was very helpful to me. But it was really becoming a semi-vegetarian that finally took off those last few pounds! I'd like to be thinner, but it's hard after years of carrying a certain amount of weight. Now I feel great.

Since my husband Dick grew up in the Midwest, he always had plenty of meat. All we've done is cut out all red meats: lamb, pork and beef. That means chicken livers, too. Now we eat plenty of chicken, fish, eggs and cheese.

I'm much more aware of what goes into food. I've started reading labels. We buy most of our vegetables at the health-food store. Cooking isn't all that difficult. We eat many, many salads—how I love them—baked or steamed vegetables and plenty of baked or broiled fish and poultry.

It's fun to entertain in our new house when and if we ever have the time! We do the buffet bit of setting up the table in our atrium, which is really a walled-in outdoor patio. We have a fabulous barbecue and refrigerator out there. It's very easy because all people have to do is help themselves.

Most of all, Dick and I love to get away from it all on our boat. I fix up little food-care packages for us. That's great relaxation. But the only trouble is, being outdoors only sharpens our appetites!

"I've Always Been a Food Hound!"

BARBECUED CHICKEN IN BARBECUE KETTLE

Heavy-duty aluminum foil
About 70 charcoal briquettes
Starter fluid
2 cleaned, whole, dressed chickens, about 2½ lbs. each
Corn oil
Freshly ground black pepper
Soy sauce
Paprika or cayenne

1. Prepare to roast chicken in covered barbecue kettle as follows: Tear off sheet of aluminum foil large enough to extend about 3 inches beyond chickens placed side by side. Fold over edge of foil, fitting corners to form drip pan.

2. Place foil drip pan in bottom of barbecue kettle; arrange about 25 briquettes on each side of it. Saturate briquettes with starter fluid. Ignite. Place grill in position. Allow 30 minutes for briquettes to be ready for roasting.

3. Tie wings and legs of chickens. Rub skins with oil. Season generously with pepper, soy sauce and paprika.

4. Place chickens on grill. Place lid on kettle; open all dampers in both lid and kettle.

5. Allow about 1½ hours to roast. Add a few briquettes to each side of drip pan after first hour. When through cooking, close all dampers and briquettes will burn out. Makes 6-8 servings

1 large cucumber, peeled, diced small
3 tablespoons green-olive slices
3 tablespoons radish slices
1 tablespoon chopped chives
⅔ cup diet salad dressing
Freshly ground black pepper

1. Shred or chop lettuce; chop watercress and romaine. Combine with eggs, cheese, avocados, tomatoes, chicken, cucumber, olives, radishes and chives. Toss well with salad dressing.

Now—for the first time—an international Jet-Setter reveals the "inside" story:

How The Beautiful People Get Rid Of Both Cellulite And Ordinary Fat—Without Dieting!

Those stunning, sleekly-slim couples who grace the pages of the fashion magazines and society columns...who spend each new Season in New York and Cannes and Saint Moritz and Saint Tropez...who live surrounded by a horde of admirers and photographers must remain youthful and slim right up to 50...60...70!

And, if you were to ask them what they do to maintain their Beautiful People Bodies, the answer would always be the same: "I don't do ANYTHING; I don't diet!"

That's right! The Beautiful People Don't Diet! They enjoy the finest food in the world and yet the needle on the scale barely moves! How do they do it?

For the first time, Luciana Avedon (former Princess Pignatelli and now the wife of the European cosmetics executive, Burt S. Avedon) reveals the "BEAUTIFUL PEOPLE MIRACLE FORMULA" responsible for all those lusciously svelte figures on the society pages. How they NEVER go on fad diets, NEVER take dangerous amphetamines, diuretics or diet pills, and NEVER give up their favorite foods either! How they simply go right on eating the foods they like—but in a special way that keeps them always fashionably slim, without their having to jump on and off the diet merry-go-round.

To give just a few examples:

One California socialite says: "I always keep my weight fluctuation within two pounds. It's bad for the face when you go up and down."

Another stunning fashion leader says: "I weighed more at age 25 than I do now." (She's now 37!)

Another says: "Sitting down to nothing but clear soup or health food depresses me; it makes me feel like an invalid."

But yet they know how to splurge like this without incurring disaster on the scales! They get their food kicks—constantly—but their figures never show it!

They eat the finest food in the world (even the delicacies and "tempters" you'd be horrified to touch), but they do it in a way that never lets them put on more weight than they can simply "peel off" in a few days any time they decide to!

(In fact, these Beautiful People secrets of delicious figure-maintenance are so powerful that, when one young, overweight model was introduced to just one of them, she lost 22 pounds in one month and stayed at that weight from then on! And another young girl, when shown how, lost 20 "impossible" pounds in two short months, even though not a single meal demanded special preparation!)

So, From Now On, Forget About Debilitating Diets! The Beautiful People Don't Use Them—Why Should You?

Once again, let us emphasize that the Beautiful People think dieting is a "bore." They eat well—very well—and they are not fat! They wouldn't think of doing without their favorite foods and the needle on the scale barely changes!

Why then shouldn't you follow their plan and lose weight—pounds and pounds and pounds of it! The process is the same, even if you start with a 50 pound handicap. And you do it all by yourself (without "fat" doctors, or the group therapy approach of diet clubs.) And, yet, (to repeat once again) you do not "sacrifice" the foods you love for a single minute!

Yes, you can still enjoy parties, restaurants, business lunches or dinners, and "super-relaxed" vacations. You can eat all the foods you usually do, and still find the pounds and inches gradually, but permanently, melting off!

Listen, As The Beautiful People Tell You How To:

Condition yourself by developing your own built-in "Fat Radar" so that the minute your weight starts to shoot up, you can shoot it down!

Take off fat while it's still "soft"...before the body has had a chance to make it part of the muscle structure. Before it marbelizes, as in a fat steak, and becomes even harder to lose!

Make the natural diuretic power of food even MORE effective, so that accumulated tissue water drains out of your body faster and you NEVER get that bloated look!

Lose tons of weight—all in the right places—and NEVER get "scrawny" looking in the face. Actually melt unwanted pounds right off your body, and still retain that "youthful" bloom in your face the Beautiful People way!

PLUS...

How to be thin as a model, and still have the energy and stamina of a truck driver!

The Beautiful People's special "Secret Elimination Diet" that disintoxicates your system...drains out internal poisons...at exactly the same time that you are painlessly losing weight!

The Beautiful People "Easy-Diet Plan", a permanent part of your life, so that you continue to lose weight for as long as you wish, and yet NEVER feel deprived!

How to prevent your body from automatically "adjusting" to your first massive weight loss, so that it actually prevents you from taking off even more pounds.

What to do if you are a "sandwich fiend" and don't want to cut them out of your diet.

Why the Beautiful People make sure that they never lose more than 18 pounds at a time.

How they painlessly "retrain their nervous system so that they don't go on eating binges during an "anxiety attack."

Why the Beautiful People feel that American men are a "disaster...overweight, over-tobaccoed, over-alcoholed, and undersexed." And, what Beautiful People Males "over 30," do to retain their very special attractiveness.

The Beautiful People "cure" for sporadic over-indulgence. In other words, how to eat your cake, and have a knock-out figure too!

Yes, The Beautiful People Have Been Looking Fabulous For Years THIS Way. Now You'll Learn How, WITHOUT RISKING A PENNY!

You are just as capable of keeping younger, prettier, slimmer and more attractive as any of the Beautiful People you'll read about in this book. And once you know their "secrets", you'll be well on your way to joining the ranks of all the Beautiful People all over the world, who realize that being beautiful also means being slender

SPECIAL ADDED BONUS:

How The Beautiful People "Smooth Away" Ugly Cellulite, The EASY Way!

Yes, while these Beautiful People are incredibly slim and supple at all ages—actually glowing with good health—they have also learned how to FREE themselves of ugly and distorting CELLULITE! (Cellulite, as you may know, is "orange peel fat"—the hard lumps of hideous fat that stick to the back of the thighs, knees, arms, buttocks and back. The same ripply fat pockets that cause desperation and unhappiness in thousands of American women who cannot walk down a beach, or up to a husband or lover, without feeling unattractive or just plain ugly!)

This is not ordinary fat, by any means. And it can't be gotten rid of by ordinary means. Instead, it's bumpy, hard lumps of toxic material—really a gel-like substance—that become trapped in bubbly, immovable pockets just beneath the skin. It's found in pencil-slim models and housewives alike. In fact, it's reputed to disfigure almost 90% of the women in the world! But not the Beautiful People! Why?

BECAUSE OF THESE TWO SIMPLE "CELLULITE CHASERS" THAT YOU CAN USE YOURSELF RIGHT IN YOUR OWN HOME, STARTING IN JUST A FEW MINUTES A DAY!

No, you don't need fancy doctors, or expensive health spas to be able to bid farewell to these unsightly globules. You can achieve spectacular results simply by following these two simple steps beginning on Page 26:

First, attack the cellulite you're carrying around right now through this special self-massage treatment designed to break it up and quickly "wash" this figure-distorting mess right out of your body!

Second, follow the unique Anti-Cellulite-Food Program that will actually help your natural circulatory system to rid your body of annoying substances BEFORE they can build up and become IMMOVABLE CHUNKS OF FAT!

Both these Cellulite Fighters are yours, as just one section of this great Beautiful People Over-All Body Beauty Plan...yours to read from cover to cover, entirely at our risk!

An Authentic Saga of Historic Import

We are both proud and excited at being able to offer you these acclaimed new Americana collections. There are two series of six wonderful figurines each: "Famous American Men of the West" and "Famous American Indians of the West." Here are not mere symbols of America's legendary West, but authentic recreations in miniature of famed flesh-and-blood Americans, white and red skinned, who fought and died for an America in which they believed.

Sculptures That Capture the Spirit of the Old West

Each figure has been captured in split-second action in pewter-finish lifetime metal and stands from 2 to 2½ inches high on a name-inscribed pedestal. The rich pewter glow with its antique finish and the breath-taking reality of the detailing merge to create the miraculous illusion of life . . . and Wyatt Earp, Jesse James, Kit Carson, Lone Wolf, Geronimo, Crazy Horse, Pat Garrett, Bat Masterson, Billy the Kid, Black Hawk, Little Crow and Red Cloud live again.

Free Booklets Reveal Little-Known Facts

Do you know the real reason for the defeat of General Custer . . . which infamous outlaw was the son of a Baptist minister . . . which famous sheriff ended his days as a sports writer . . . which gunfighter took part in "The Shoot-Out At O. K. Corral" . . . which Indian War Chief, perhaps the most feared of all the great chiefs, later became a Christian? You will find the fascinating answers to these questions, together with complete biographical data, in the fully illustrated booklet you receive with each collection.

A Look Behind All Those "Mother-in-Law" Jokes

True or False: Mothers-in-law cause more problems than fathers-in-law. (See number 3)

TRUE OR FALSE?

1. The time you are most likely to have in-law trouble is during the honeymoon stage of your marriage.

2. The seed of in-law troubles is often planted long before it flowers.

3. Mothers-in-law cause more problems than fathers-in-law.

4. One of the biggest problems for many people is what to call their mothers-in-law.

5. Mother-in-law jokes originated as the result of an age-old taboo.

6. In many cases in-laws aren't to blame for in-law trouble at all.

ANSWERS

1. True—as evidenced by University of Michigan studies which show that in-law problems occur chiefly at the beginning of a marriage, and that husband-and-wife disagreements over their respective in-laws "are commonest in the honeymoon stage, declining steadily thereafter."

2. True. Studies at Southern Illinois University have shown that when, because of an overprotective mother, an individual develops problems with his parents that are not resolved before his marriage, "he will carry these into his marriage; at this point they will involve both him and his wife and result in what we commonly identify as in-law problems. Where both husband and wife have unresolved parental problems, the situation may become extremely complicated and aggravated."

3. True. Although the mother-in-law is most frequently named by young married couples as being to blame for strained relationships, sisters-in-law ranked second. Fathers-in-law followed closely in third place. However, brothers-in-law, investigations show, tend to keep a hands-off policy and seldom receive blame for contributing to in-law hassles.

4. True. A University of Chicago study has explored this matter. The problem, it's pointed out, results from "the rather sudden meeting of two adults who have no experience of growing together and (often) no attraction for each other." In the study, about 50 percent of the subjects said they wound up calling their mother-in-law simply "Mother," or "Mother Smith" (or whatever). Other terms of address used less frequently: the given name (Mary, Alice); Mrs. S. or Mrs. Smith; pet names or personal nicknames. Others said they never had been able to resolve the problem of what to call their mothers-in-law—and often didn't call them anything!

5. True – according to the findings of studies delving into the background of this custom, which show that in earlier times a son-in-law was encouraged to tease and put down his mother-in-law with disparaging jokes, and thus reinforce the taboo against his finding her more attractive than his spouse and becoming romantically involved with her. And to further insure against this possibility, a son-in-law was also encouraged – and expected—to avoid his mother-in-law. It's pointed out in this connection that a mother-in-law may sometimes be a more attractive and interesting person than her daughter—and that some of the most fascinating women in the world are mothers-in-law. Even in present times, as one team of behavioral scientists has observed, "There are instances in which the young man who woos a girl meets her mother and marries her instead."

6. True. University of California sociologist Dr. Judson T. Landis sums up his findings in a definitive treatise on the subject: "Many of the comments of young people who complain that they have in-law trouble reveal that the trouble lies within the complaining individuals themselves. Such people would have 'in-law trouble' regardless of whom they had married or what kind of people the in-laws were."

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY
By Richard Armour

MY LIP CURLS TOO

My hair is straight except for when,
Perhaps like other squeamish men,
I see a sight I always dread:
This makes my own hair curl, and quickly,
And I myself no doubt look sickly.

This happens most in supermarts,
Where they and I are wheeling carts,
It's not so bad, it's quite all right—
You see, I lose my appetite
And save more cash than otherwise.

"What kind of a man is Jim? I don't believe I've ever met him." "Well, if you see two men off in a corner anywhere and one of them looks bored to death, the other one is Jim."

My granddaughter was often busy caring for her baby, so she taught her four-year-old daughter to answer the telephone politely. Once a man called and asked for her daddy. CARL, AGE 5
World's youngest licensed animal trainer

Carl Denver is the youngest licensed animal trainer registered with the Performing Animals Group of England. He learned his trade from his mother, Olga Denver, who trained the animals for the "Daktari" TV series and for Disney World in Florida. Capt. Carl Ralph Scott Denver (as the five-year-old is known professionally) started his career when his mother let him present a few animals before her audiences just for fun. One day, a government official questioned Mrs. Denver about her son's license. Soon after, he was given a stage name and a $7.50 license. Carl's specialty is training chihuahuas to push baby carriages and mice to walk tightropes. He is also training a young black bull for a bullfighting act. Olé!

QUOTE: During 1938, Hitler took his beloved Eva Braun to Italy, where she "did a lot of shopping. . . . She loved handbags, shoes and other articles made from alligator hide, and after one shopping spree in Rome she returned to her hotel looking as if she had been on a hunting trip to the Congo. . . . Between shopping trips she was squired around the city's night spots by various Italian officers, who were . . . unaware of her intimate association with Hitler but were delighted to spend the evenings with her. Eva loved to dance and on two occasions she returned to her hotel shortly before daybreak. When Hitler was told about this . . . he was angry and told Eva that he 'wanted her back at her hotel at a decent hour.' 'I will be back at a decent hour,' she told him, 'when you quit holding hands with the Italian madonnas at the Grand Hotel.'" From "Eva and Adolf," by Glenn Infield (Grosset & Dunlap, $10). UNQUOTE.

Who calls up for free sex counseling? Radio station WMCA in New York City offered such a service, and this is what they found out after a year on the air: Over 90 percent of the people had never spoken with anyone else about their problems or questions before; 75 percent of the callers were male; 60 percent were young (under 35); and almost every caller asked the plaintive question: "Am I normal?"
